Delegate Moves That Protocol Provision on "Domestic" Questions Be Struck Out.

BRINGS A CRISIS AT GENEVA

FRENCH STRIVE FOR ACCORD

Japanese Statements Denounce Proposal to Make World Court the Final Authority.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 28.—Japan returned tonight to its attack on the League protocol of arbitration and security in spite of the fact that the halls of the secretariat had hummed all day with rumors of a peaceful settlement.

The Japanese delegation had issued a statement challenging the League's declaration of the intention "to kill all wars." That declaration, it said in effect, was a sham so long as any nation could attaint the honor of another nation and thwart its vital interests under cover of legal concepts that made such conduct merely a matter of domestic jurisdiction and so beyond the reach of the League and its Court. There was an allusion also to the fact that if a nation thus "attainted" asserted its rights against the said sovereign State, the combined armaments of the League would be launched against it.

But Ambassador Adatci, the Japanese delegate, stonily expressionless, added a sharp thrust to this statement. On Friday he had merely proposed an additional clause. It stipulated that though the Court should adjudge the contentious matter to be within the exclusive jurisdiction of one of the two nations, the League Council should nevertheless continue its efforts toward conciliation. Tonight in effect he called for what his statement hinted at in its concluding line—the excision of the words in the protocol which safeguard national sovereignty, ignoring the obstacle in the fact that this passage only restates the stipulation embedded in the eighth paragraph.

No Direct Reference to America.

In all this there was still no reference or allusion to immigration problems on the Pacific. The States mentioned were Australia and South America. The former statement has been generally described by those who know Adatci's real devotion to the League as highly emotional. His words were capable of this interpretation but his manner was the same as tonight.

Fernandez of Brazil, who spoke toward the close of Friday's debate, rose first tonight. His manner, his phrasing, were most courteous. Scorning all palliatives and evasions, he came briefly to the point. He could never accept, he said, the idea that underlay Japan's proposal. It could only lead to the most illegitimate of all wars conceivable—wars arising out of matters clearly within the domestic jurisdiction of a sovereign State.

The crisis is far more tense than that of Friday. Then the few hearers in the half-filled hall only half comprehended what was at stake, and those who realized it took hope from Adatci's known love of the League and the regret expressed in his few sentences.

Tonight the crowded house was vibrant with pent-up excitement, for if the Japanese delegation casts its vote in the Assembly on Tuesday against the protocol it is dead—stillborn. Even if it absents itself from the session, there will be no armament conference unless three of the four nations with permanent seats in the Council ratify the protocol. Italy has wavered from the outset before the idea of compulsory arbitration. England is deeply stirred by the false statement that the navy would be at the command of the League Council. Only France is certain to vote for the protocol.

Loucheur Interposes.

Just as every one was expecting the British delegates would speak Loucheur stood up. Politis of Greece, who is the guide and spokesman of this Subcommittee on Arbitration, had endeavored to sustain Adatci—and the protocol. So did young Rollin of Belgium, who had spoken very ably on another subject in the afternoon. It was high time.

Loucheur smilingly but firmly advised adjournment. The meeting adjourned with Sir Littleton Groom of Australia and Sir Cecil Hurst of the English Foreign Office unheard from.

At midnight Geneva is still throbbing with excitement. Once more reassuring words issue from the Secretariat. It may very well be that Japan will absent itself when the protocol comes up in plenary Assembly.

Committee to Seek Accord.

GENEVA, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—A grave crisis prevails tonight in the peace discussions of the League of Nations through Japan's insistence upon an amendment to the proposed protocol of arbitration and security.

So critical was the situation judged to be that France suggested that the Japanese amendment, which concerns the interpretation of State rights as related to arbitration and which every-

Gandhi to Break His Fast Only When He Faces Death

DELHI, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—Mahatma Gandhi, the non-cooperationist leader, who is on a fast as a penance for the recent Hindu and Moslem riots, in a letter addressed to Pandit Notilal Nehru, the Swarajist leader, says he is unable to break his fast as his religion has taught him not to forego a vow once it has been taken.

Gandhi adds that this principle has regulated his life for forty years. The non-violent character of his fast, he says, is intended to conquer the Englishmen by love. The fast is a matter between himself and God. If a crisis is reached in which the choice lies between death and God, he will break his fast.

SEEK ROSHEK BOY ON TWO NEW CLUES

MAY HAVE BEEN AT BAYONNE

Suspect Is Held as Police Widen Search for Student Who Disappeared Six Days Ago.

Efforts of the police here and in other cities failed to produce a definite clue yesterday in the search for Franklin Roshek, 14 years old, a student at the Collegiate School, 241 West Seventy-seventh Street, who disappeared last Tuesday morning. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roshek, have not seen or heard from their son since he left his home, 219 West Eighty-first Street, to walk to school, four blocks away.

Reports received by the police yesterday stated that the boy had been seen at Bayonne, N. J., and at Duncansville, Pa. The latter clue was furnished by C. W. Myers, a constable at Hollidaysburg, Pa. His message read:

"Boy answering description of Franklin Roshek, and companion, passed through Duncansville, Pa., Blair County, on Plaka Pike, ocean-to-ocean highway, going west."

A dispatch from Altoona, Pa., gave these additional details:

"Constable George Myers, Duncansville, on Thursday evening about 6 o'clock saw a good-looking boy about 14, dark blue or black suit, about 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 110 pounds. The boy was accompanied by a typical tramp about 30 years old. They passed through Duncansville, going west on foot.'

The remainder of the message said that Myers, reading of the kidnapping of Roshek later, and connecting it with the man and boy he had seen, notified the New York police.

The description of the clothing worn by the boy with the tramp, as sent by Myers, does not correspond with the suit the boy wore when he disappeared, which was described as a gray sport suit.

The father of the missing boy was called to Police Headquarters to be questioned as to whether his son had any relatives or friends he might be seeking in the direction he was reported to be going. Roshek said he knew of none. He expressed the hope that the message was true in its identification, as in that case it would indicate his son had run away and had not been kidnapped.

There was no description of the boy's companion. So far as known none of young Roshek's companions here was with him when he disappeared.

The other report, which was of less value, came from the police at Bayonne, who said several persons had reported seeing a boy whose clothing resembled that worn by young Roshek, riding a bicycle the day after his disappearance.

John J. Riley, who was taken into custody on Saturday night, was held in the West Side Court yesterday, on a short affidavit charging him with being a suspect in connection with the disappearance of the boy. Riley, who said he had no home, protested his innocence. Another suspect of the same name, for whom a search had been made in Harlem, was found in the jail there, and it was proved he had been there before the boy vanished.

Riley was arrested on a description given by friends of the missing boy. They said young Roshek had told them of being accosted in Riverside Park by a "poor man" who gave that name, and had asked for help. The boy returned to his home for clothing and money for the man, but when Mrs. Roshek learned what her son intended doing she told him to stay at home and she went to investigate. Mrs. Roshek said the only person she found at the park resembling the man described by her son fled when she began to question him.

While the Bureau of Missing Persons is conducting its search on the theory that the boy may have gone away voluntarily, detectives are working on the belief that he was kidnapped, or induced to accompany some one older than himself.

WALSH WILL FIGHT ROBISON PROMOTION TO REAR ADMIRAL

LINKS HIM WITH LEASES

COOLIDGE'S ACTION AWAITED

Wilbur Says the President Has Not Yet Decided on the Nomination Recommended.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—In a telegram received here and made public tonight by the Democratic National Committee, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, "prosecutor" of the Senate Committee which investigated the naval oil leases to the Sinclair and Doheny interests, says that if the nomination of Captain John K. Robison to be a Rear Admiral in the navy is sent to the Senate by President Coolidge, "there will be further airing" of the part taken by this naval officer in connection with the oil leases.

Captain Robison is Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering in the Navy Department, and while holding that position has the rank and title of Rear Admiral. He is a Captain on the permanent list of the navy, and was chosen recently for promotion to the permanent grade of Rear Admiral by the Naval Selection Board.

The oil reserves of the navy are directly under the administration of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, and Rear Admiral Robison was concerned in the official arrangements for the oil leases which resulted in the Senate inquiry. Publicity given to the fact that the Selection Board had chosen him for promotion to the permanent rank of Rear Admiral brought criticism from Democratic political quarters.

The text of Senator Walsh's telegram is as follows:

"If it be true that the President has put the stamp of his approval on the record of Admiral Robison, or is about to do so by promoting him, subject to confirmation, to the rank of Rear Admiral on the permanent list, there will be a further airing of his part in the naval oil leases to Sinclair and Doheny, and a test before the Senate of how well he has earned such recognition.

"It will be interesting to prosecute an inquiry into how it happened that he, among all the eligibles in the navy, schooled in what he knew about the reserves by Doheny and imbued with exactly the same ideas about them as those entertained by that gentleman, should have been selected to head the Bureau of Engineering, to which was entrusted the care of the reserves.

"Those interested will be reminded that he knew and approved of the transactions, notwithstanding the secrecy that attended them and the lack of competitive bidding, that he conceived the plan of circumventing Congress by stretching the power granted so as to permit paying for the tanks with oil—two barrels for one barrel of storage—and that he inaugurated the system without any knowledge as to whether what would be left would be adequate to the needs of the navy in any kind of an emergency.

"If President Coolidge, after reading the records, rewards Robison, as it is said he will, there will be further food for thought."

Secretary Wilbur said yesterday at the Navy Department that President Coolidge had not yet acted on the recommendation of the Selection Board for the promotion of Captain Robison and six other Captains on the permanent list to be Rear Admirals.

McKellar Will Oppose Robison.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 28.—Senator McKellar of Tennessee announced yesterday that if a nomination is sent to the Senate to make Rear Admiral Robison, now holding that rank temporarily, a permanent Rear Admiral in the navy, "I shall fight it to the limit of my ability."

The Senator charged that "Mr. Robison was the officer of the navy in the cabal" with former Secretary Fall and others who, he asserted, "despoiled the Government of the naval oil reserves," through the granting of leases, and declared that the naval officer "worked for it in season and out of season and later testified in defense of it."

"It cannot conceive of the possibility that the Senate which so overwhelmingly condemned these infamous steals of the navy's oil, will ever confirm Mr. Robison," Senator McKellar said.

Huge Sum Set Aside for Health Tests Here To See Whether 20 Years May Be Added to Life

The district bounded by Fourteenth and Sixty-fourth Streets, Fourth Avenue and the East River, has been selected as a centre for an intensive health demonstration over a period of years, it was announced yesterday in the annual report of the Milbank Memorial Fund, issued from the office of the foundation at 49 Wall Street.

This area, which includes the Bellevue and Yorkville neighborhoods and has a population of approximately 200,000, is one of the three centres in New York State where the fund is to spend $2,000,000 in community health work in an effort to determine whether public health authorities are justified in believing, as many do, that within the next half century at least twenty years will be added to the average span of human life. Two demonstrations already have been in operation for over a year—one in Cattaraugus County, a rural district, and the other in Syracuse.

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, Health Commissioner, and several health and social welfare agencies will cooperate in the demonstration here.

Albert G. Milbank, treasurer of the fund, said yesterday that a director for the work would be chosen soon and the preliminary organization formed, so that the actual demonstration operations could begin early in 1925.

"Before determining upon the Bellevue-Yorkville district as a demonstration centre," said Mr. Milbank, "extensive surveys were made there. Factors which entered into the selection of the demonstration centre include not only the population of the district, its racial composition, birth rate, general infant and child mortality and tuberculosis morbidity and mortality but also the likelihood of the people of the community cooperating in an undertaking of this kind and the presence there of agencies through which to operate.

"It is doubtful whether any other district in New York City provides more satisfactory clinical facilities than are found in the Bellevue-Yorkville section. More than twenty-five hospitals, dispensaries and public health institutions are located there."

The fund was established twenty years ago by the late Elisabeth Milbank Anderson of New York "to improve the physical, mental and moral condition of humanity and generally to advance charitable and benevolent objects."

RESTAURANTS FORBID SALES OF ALL LIQUORS

Would Legalize Light Wines and Beer, but Will See That the Law Is Obeyed.

ADOPT A CODE OF ETHICS

Printing Menus in English and Serving Only Pure Food Part of Future Policy.

The selling of liquor by waiters and other employes will no longer be tolerated by members of the United Restaurant Owners' Association, Inc., of New York. This statement was made yesterday by Joseph Burger, President, who made public the policy recently adopted by the association and contained in the following notice to members:

"Restaurateurs should refrain from the selling of alcoholic beverages prohibited by Federal and State legislation. We believe the drinking of light wines and beer, sanctioned by custom in most parts of the world, to be a harmless pleasure and an aid to digestion, and we are therefore in favor of the legalization of the sale of these beverages; but so long as the present prohibition legislation remains in force it is our duty to obey the law.

"Aside from the moral aspects of the question, important as they are, there is the consideration that the modern restaurant represents a large investment, and one that should not be jeopardized by illegal operations. Liquor-selling is not only bad ethics but bad business.

"Employes who sell alcoholic beverages to patrons should be dismissed as soon as they are discovered."

Part of a code of ethics adopted by the association follows:

"Menus should be printed in the English language, and in terms that will be readily understood by patrons. Any attempt by waiters, or by the wording of menus, to deceive patrons as to the precise character of food offered is condemned as an unfair business practice.

"The serving of any food that is not pure and wholesome, or that contains inferior substitutes for standard food materials, or that contains any 'filling' or 'lengthening' compound, is condemned. The restaurateur should be familiar with Federal, State and city food laws, and should cooperate in the enforcement of them.

"The United Restaurant Owners' Association, Inc., has undertaken an exhaustive study of food values with the view to improving the public health through the recommendation of special foods and diets for the undernourished, the underweight and overweight. This is an important work, and the continued cooperation of all members is needed for the fullest possible gaining of our object. In line with this phase of our activities, members should cooperate with private physicians in the preparation of special foods and menus for their patients.

"Since so many immigrants enter the service of restaurants as bus boys or kitchen workers, the restaurant owner has an important duty of Americanization to perform. He should aid these foreigners in acquiring a knowledge of English, and an understanding of American principles and customs, so that ultimately they may become good citizens."

Mr. Burger said that the code of ethics had been approved by the American Fair Trade League "as a model for all other associations and all other individual restaurants."

DR. HIBBEN DECIDES TO VOTE FOR DAVIS

ONE OF THE '31' FOR HARDING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Announcement was made by the Democratic National Committee tonight that John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University, authorized the committee to publish the statement that he would vote for John W. Davis. The committee's announcement said that Dr. Hibben had added to his authorization a statement that he had invited Mr. Davis to speak at Princeton during the campaign.

Dr. Hibben's decision to vote for Mr. Davis coincides with an announcement by Everett Colby, former Republican State Senator of New Jersey, that he would support the Democratic candidate.

In making the announcement, the committee declared that Dr. Hibben, who succeeded Woodrow Wilson as President of Princeton, was a life-long Republican. A statement from the committee said:

"The apparent reason for Dr. Hibben's decision to support Mr. Davis is the failure of the Harding-Coolidge Administration to permit the United States to participate with the other nations of the world in establishing permanent peace.

"Dr. Hibben was one of the most prominent of the thirty-one leading Republican men of letters who signed a joint appeal, published Oct. 15, 1920, urging the people of the United States to vote for Harding because only by such action could they cause the United States to take an active, direct, responsible part in the solution of post-war problems and the discharge of its obligation to help secure permanent peace.

Quotes Dr. Hibben's Warning.

"Among other prominent signers were Herbert Hoover, now Secretary of Commerce, and Charles E. Hughes, now Secretary of State.

"Dr. Hibben did not make an extended statement concerning his decision to support Mr. Davis, but the reasons are sharply revealed in his Baltimore address, which, considered in connection with his announcement today, makes his position clear."

The committee cited extracts from Dr. Hibben's Baltimore speech. He was quoted in the statement as saying there:

"You will remember these words, which were on every one's lips: 'It was a war to end war.' We all felt at that time that victory would mean the assured peace of the world. This objective has not been realized, and if, in 1917, we were honest in our purposes, our hopes and our expectations, we should not indulge in the complacent satisfaction which seems to characterize the Americans today, but be deeply concerned for the state of the world, both of the present and the future. There are obligations resting upon us which we dare not lightly set aside. There are opportunities of exerting the power and influence of this nation for the great welfare of mankind which we fail to see at our peril."

The committee took occasion tonight to emphasize the declaration of Governor Smith before the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse last week that honesty in Government was the outstanding issue before the people, by calling attention to an announcement of Dr. William C. Thompson, President of Ohio State University, designated by the National Committee as a Republican leader, that he will vote for John W. Davis.

"It is remarkable how uniformly lifelong Republicans who this year will vote for the Democratic Presidential nominee give as cause for their change of vote repugnance at the carnival of corruption under the past four years of Republican rule, and confidence in the courage and ability of John W. Davis.

Cites Dr. Thompson's Reasons.

"There is the announcement the other day of Dr. William C. Thompson, President of the Ohio State University, that he will support John W. Davis for President. He says: 'I am sorry to

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—After two years of experiments the German postal authorities yesterday started a wireless telephone service on the express train between Berlin and Hamburg which if successful—and yesterday's experience proved very promising—will be extended immediately to express trains from Berlin to Frankfort, Dessig, Stettin, Hanover, Dresden and from Hamburg to Stettin.

Yesterday a number of telephone conversations took place between passengers of the Hamburg express train and persons at Berlin and other German cities and proved successful in every case. The apparatus on the train projects electric waves that have only a few meters to travel, being immediately caught by wires of the telegraph and telephone system which run alongside every German railway. Yesterday Morse signs sent out by the train were thus transmitted to the central telephone station Spandau, whence men at the other end were called and put in connection with those who desired to speak with them on the train. But instead of Spandau any other place might have been used as a relay station if it had been prepared.

The train on which experiments took placed traveled at a speed of forty-five miles an hour. Only a few minutes were required to get the connection with Berlin. Conversations were very distinct, the absence of any noise by the train being especially noted. The price charged for a conversation from the train does not exceed that for an ordinary urgent telephone conversation of equal length.

A small compartment in one of the cars served as a telephone office. One booth was reserved for passengers calling Berlin, while another booth served passengers called up from Berlin who talked with them with equally satisfactory results.

DOHENY JR. A TRUSTEE PENDING HIS TRIAL

Methodists Re-elect Him to the Board of the University of Southern California.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Sept. 28.—After considerable argument among delegates to the forty-ninth Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, here yesterday, Edward L. Doheny Jr., son of the California oil man, was re-elected a trustee of the University of Southern California, a Methodist institution.

The younger Mr. Doheny, who is associated with his father in the Pan-American Petroleum Corporation, is a defendant in civil and criminal cases brought by the Government in connection with oil leased which it is alleged were improperly granted by the Government.

The conference in renaming Mr. Doheny, adopted a resolution to be presented to the trustees asking that in the event the charges against Mr. Doheny are sustained, his services with the university be terminated.

FLIERS AT SEATTLE END WORLD FLIGHT OF 27,000 MILES

COOLIDGE SENDS MESSAGE

Promises in Message to Each Aviator to Ask Congress to Aid Promotion.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—The American army round-the-world fliers completed the circuit of the globe this afternoon, landing at Sand Point Field at 1:38 P. M., Pacific Time, after hopping off from Eugene, Ore., at 10:02 A. M.

Sirens shrieked as the planes flew over the city and thousands of voices roared a welcome at the field. Among the first to greet the fliers was Major Martin, who commanded the flight at the start.

Lieutenant Smith was the first to land. He was followed by Lieutenant Wade and then Lieutenant Nelson. The Commander landed at 1:36, the others at 1:37:50 and 1:38:35, respectively. Flying conditions were ideal as the aviators made their last lap.

Two minutes after they stepped from their planes each of the six aviators received the following telegram from President Coolidge:

"On final completion of your flight I desire to again offer my congratulations and express to you the thanks of your country.

"Under the law I do not understand that I have authority suitably to reward you by promotion and other appropriate action.

"I wish, however, to announce to you that on the convening of Congress I shall recommend that such authority be granted in order that your distinguished services may have a practical recognition from your country."

More trouble with Lieutenant Wade's engine, which had delayed him on the San Francisco lap, caused the fliers to land at Vancouver. Repairs on the Boston II. were quickly made and the flight was resumed at 11:37 A. M.

Kisses Grees One Flier.

Lieutenant Leslie Arnold was hugged and kissed when he alighted by his mother, Mrs. Cora Arnold, and his sister, Mrs. Frances Cole, of Spokane, Wash., who had not seen him since he started on the flight.

Ropes were strung around the machines and the reception committee gathered to greet the fliers. Lieutenant Smith stepped from the cockpit of his machine and made a short address to the committee. The crowd that had gathered was so large that the reception was curtailed merely to a shaking of hands and "glad you're here" from the reception committee.

Each of the fliers received a large bouquet of dahlias which they took with them to a private luncheon aboard a yacht.

A huge "Welcome" sign with letters twenty feet high had been erected and as the planes flew over the city whistles and automobile horns sent up shrieking greetings. Among the vessels on the lake awaiting the fliers was the Canadian destroyer Patrician, whose officers had been delegated by their Government to extend the congratulations of Canada.

Nine airplanes from Sand Point, under the command of Major D. C. Emmons, commander of Crissy Field, San Francisco, left the field just before the fliers were expected to escort them. The world circlers were accompanied from Eugene by Lieutenants J. A. Brocklhurst and George W. Goddard, who made a photographic record of the flight across the country, and Lieutenant Burdette Wright and Sergeant J. F. Kennedy.

Lieutenant Wright acted as advance officer of the flight and was the first of accompanying airplanes to arrive, making a graceful landing at 12:26 P. M. He did not stop at Vancouver Barracks.

General Morton Praises Feat.

The informal ceremonies immediately following the landing over, the fliers were taken to Madison Park, where they were greeted by approximately 5,000 persons. From there they were taken by automobiles to Volunteer Park, where a formal reception was given

Homes for Starving Deer Sought by the Government

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Homes for starving deer are being sought by the Department of Agriculture. Persons willing to pay crating and transportation charges—about $35 each—are welcome, it was announced today, to one of the mule deer in the Kaibab National Forest in Northern Arizona, provided they live east of the Sierra Nevada and Cascade Mountains and can accommodate a 250-pound animal.

The herd is estimated to number more than 30,000, having expanded so rapidly since the forest was set aside as a national game preserve by President Roosevelt in 1906 that the vegetation on the Kaibab Plateau is inadequate to feed them.

In 1906 the species was threatened with extinction because of illegal hunting.

LA FOLLETTE VIEWS ARE TOLD BY WIFE

CALLS HERSELF PACIFIST

"Big Business" Makes Country Militaristic, She Asserts in Speech in Maryland.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Sept. 28.—Asking for fair minded consideration of her husband's candidacy, Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, in an address here today, declared he had long been a victim of misrepresentation and undeserved criticism. Many voters, she said, have an erroneous impression of his record and views.

Arrangements for the rally had been made by Mrs. Sally Burch of Washington, who was active in the campaign for the woman suffrage amendment. A telegram was received yesterday, she said, from an official of the Foreign Missions Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which controls the Chautauqua Auditorium, saying that it could not be used on Sunday for a political meeting. Mrs. Burch, however, took the position that a contract had been made, precedded with her plans, and no opposition was encountered when Mrs. La Follette, Senator Ladd of North Dakota, who delivered a brief speech, and others took possession of the hall.

As Mrs. La Follette traced her husband's political career, explained his position on various campaign issues and assailed the Harding-Coolidge Administration, her audience, made up largely of women, listened in silence. She spoke of President Harding as a "kindly man" who erred in the selection of some of his Cabinet officers. President Coolidge, she asserted, "has the rich man's point of view," and is "utterly out of sympathy with the workingman."

"If you want a human Government," she urged, "turn to those whose records show they sympathize with the mass. If you think Mr. La Follette is a dangerous man, vote for some one you think is not. I'm not afraid of your judgment if you will look at the issues and candidates free from prejudice.

Says She Is a "Pacifist."

"So long as the control of big business in Government continues," she said, "the pressure for the biggest army and navy will go on. If we continue our present military and naval policy, approved by both Democratic and Republican Administrations, we shall be the most militarized nation in the world.

"I do not believe, even in these days of commercialism, you can put a 'nation in arms' to fight avowedly for oil or any other form of trade supremacy. Imperialistic aims must still be disguised under a mask of 'national honor' or other expressions of idealism if they are to have the support of the masses, which they must have in a democracy. When the masses of the people are convinced that a war is imperialistic they won't go along.

"If it were not for the public sentiment, and I might add if it were not for the sentiment of the women voters of this country, the financiers in combination with the militarists would soon have the United States committed to a military policy no less menacing than that of the Kaiser and to a naval policy even more ambitious than that of Great Britain. All these plans are the more dangerous because they are being carried on under cover, under the pretext that they are for defense. They are for aggression. What folly, what hypocrisy, all this talk about hating war, but being prepared for war!

"I am a pacifist. I cannot say that Mr. La Follette is one. He thinks there

MILFORD, Pa., Sept. 28.—Mary McCadden, the childhood nurse of Governor Gifford Pinchot, to whom in her critical illness the Governor hastened from his own sickroom in the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, died this afternoon at Grey Towers, the Pinchot residence here, after a brave fight against pernicious anemia. Both the Governor and Mrs. Pinchot were at the bedside at the moment of her death, as was Dr. Robert G. Barckley, the physician in charge during the illness.

When Governor Pinchot was recovering a fortnight ago from a minor operation performed in the Presbyterian Hospital, it was announced that he would cut short his period of convalescence at the hospital by a day in order to return home as soon as possible so that he might cheer with his presence the faithful servant who had nursed him when he was a baby. When he arrived at her room at Grey Towers, Mary McCadden had been in a coma for several days, but when she heard the Governor's voice as he crossed the threshold, she awoke with the cry, "My boy, my boy."

Touched by the Governor's attendance and encouraged by his words, she rallied for a time, but Saturday there was a fatal relapse.

Mary McCadden was born in Ireland ninety-three years ago. She had been a servant in the Pinchot family for sixty years. It is believed that the only near relative surviving is a nephew, Anthony J. McCadden, a resident of New York City. Burial will be in a Brooklyn cemetery.

REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT

FEAR LA FOLLETTE STRENGTH

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The visit of John W. Davis to Washington yesterday has served to bring to politicians the impression that Mr. Davis made headway in his campaign in the West, which was discussed during his brief stop-over in the capital. According to newspaper men and others who accompanied Mr. Davis, his trip into Western territory showed a marked reaction to his cause and gave him and his managers considerable encouragement.

Throughout the Northwest and the Rocky Mountain section, and to a considerable extent on the Pacific Coast, La Follette sentiment is rampant, a fact to which both the Republican and Democratic political managers are alive.

In acknowledging this, Republican politicians insist that the real fight for the winning of the West is between Coolidge and La Follette, and they seem to be laying their campaign plans accordingly. There are exceptions, such as Nebraska, Montana and Colorado, where Democratic prospects are encouraging to leading men of that party, but in each of them La Follette is strong enough to make it necessary to take him into account in arriving at a basis of prediction as to how their electoral votes will be cast.

Men active in the Republican national campaign appear to be optimistic over the outcome of the Presidential election. They indicate that they are convinced that Coolidge will carry the Eastern part of the country north of the Potomac and Ohio Rivers and as far West as the Mississippi, with a few exceptions. They are now claiming that there is an excellent chance of President Coolidge carrying Mr. Davis's own State of West Virginia and the adjacent State of Maryland.

With the heavy electoral vote that Coolidge would control through such an outcome, they profess to see victory in sight. At the same time, when Republican politicians come to figure out the possible electoral vote of the President they are unable to allot to him the necessary majority in the Electoral College without including the votes of a number of States which are admittedly extremely doubtful.

Party Leaders See Many Black Spots.

Officially and publicly, the political managers of the two major parties contend that they see certain victory for the Presidential candidate in whose behalf they are working. There has been much complaint that the optimistic statements from the campaign headquarters of the Republican and Democratic Parties has had a deterrent tendency upon the campaign. It is claimed that these statements have had a tendency to make party workers slacken in their efforts and have injured the chances of obtaining campaign funds. To such statements is attributed lack of interest among the electorate in the campaign, and the fear is expressed that La Follette is profiting by them.

The generality of both Democratic and Republican politicians are not fooling themselves, however. Some of them of each party confess that they see plenty of black spots for their party, and acknowledge that the situation is precarious in such a considerable number of States as to make the outcome of the Presidential election uncertain.

There seems to be a rather general disposition to believe that whichever candidate carries New York, with its forty-five electoral votes, will obtain a majority of the Electoral College. This opinion is more generally shared by Republicans than Democrats, a disposition probably due to the confident feeling the Republicans have had over what they conceive to be the trend of sentiment toward Coolidge in New York, but the nomination of Governor Smith for another term has given the Democrats great encouragement.

The outward aspects of La Follette sentiment in California are giving the Republican managers much concern. Until recently they had been confident that the State would be carried for Coolidge. They appear still to believe that a majority of the Californian voters are for the President's election, but a new angle has been given to the situation in that State by the decision of the State Supreme Court denying the La Follette electors a place on the official ballot.

Johnson Criticism Is Feared.

The first significant outcome of the decision is a critical statement from Senator Hiram Johnson, who has been ominously silent since the nomination of President Coolidge as the Republican candidate for President. Senator Johnson has come forward with a denunciation of the decision, and politicians are awaiting to see the effect of his attitude upon his considerable following among the California Republicans.

Ignoring the fact that in 1912, when he was the Progressive Party candidate for Vice President, the Republican nominee pledged to President Taft votes for a place on the California ballot, Senator Johnson has asserted publicly that such a decision as this that undermines public confidence in the courts." His declaration is expected to be used to the fullest degree by the La Follette followers to support the effort of their leader to curtail judicial authority.

The State of Washington, heretofore Republican as a general thing, is another uncertain political area, with La Follette sentiment very pronounced. Iowa, a strong Republican State, has become fighting ground, with Brookhart, the Republican candidate for Senator, strongly sympathetic for the La Follette movement, although he has not yet formally endorsed the Third Party ticket.

The Republicans are trying to save Minnesota and North Dakota for the Coolidge-Dawes ticket, but there is complaint that the national committee is not giving to the party in Minnesota the amount of assistance that the situation requires. In Montana political conditions are extremely complicated, with one of its Senators, Wheeler, running for Vice President on the La Follette ticket, and Walsh, the other Senator, seeking re-election as a Democrat. The Republicans feel that they have reason to be encouraged over this state.

La Follette sentiment is not regarded as especially strong in Kansas and the Republicans show great confidence concerning sentiment there. On account of conditions in Oklahoma, they are hopeful of carrying that State in spite of its usual Democratic trend, and even more hopeful of obtaining a Republican Senator. As for Missouri, opinion prevails here that the Republican Party has thrown away a good chance of getting its electoral vote through failure to condemn the Ku Klux Klan by name.

In such circumstances, even granting that the Coolidge-Dawes ticket will sweep most of the country east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and the Ohio, there is enough uncertainty in the political situation to make political prognosticators timid of setting down the electoral vote with any degree of confidence in the accuracy of their figuring.

Sentiment in practically all the Rocky Mountain States, Minnesota, South Dakota and the Pacific Coast, with the exception of Oregon, is so divided as to make a forecast of the outcome of the Presidential contest a matter of doubt. This condition and the disposition of many political observers to give La Follette North Dakota, in addition to Wisconsin, has revived speculation over the possibility of a stalemate election, which would throw the choice of a President and a Vice President into Congress.

ROOSEVELT BUSY ON SPEECH

Invites All Oyster Bay Residents to Attend Notification.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 28.—Within half a mile of his father's home on Sagamore Hill, where he was born, Theodore Roosevelt will receive formal notification of his nomination for Governor by the Republican State Convention at his own home Wednesday. Colonel Roosevelt has invited all the residents of Oyster Bay, most of whom he has known all his life, to attend the ceremonies.

The house occupied by the Republican candidate for Governor, in which he has lived for about a year, was formerly owned by the late Commodore William L. Swan. It is located on the Cove Road, not far from the side road leading to Sagamore Hill and about a mile and a half from the centre of Oyster Bay village.

Colonel Roosevelt said he would devote tomorrow and the next day to preparing his speech of acceptance and conferring with party leaders about details of his campaign.

"I hope everybody in Oyster Bay will be here on Wednesday night," he said. "I want to shake hands with all my old friends and to make new ones."

Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt today sent a message of condolence to the family of Elliot C. Bacon a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., whose death occurred last night. Colonel Roosevelt said he intended to attend the funeral.

'DRYS' BOLT ON ROOSEVELT.

President of Broome County W. C. T. U. Says They Won't Vote for Him

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The Broome County Women's Christian Temperance Union, whose efforts resulted in defeating Congressman John D. Clarke and nominating Harold V. Tolley, will bolt Theodore Roosevelt, according to Mrs. Hattie S. Tupper, President of the organization. Mrs. Tupper said:

"Mr. Roosevelt cannot expect to receive the support of the White Ribboners and will lose their 50,000 votes throughout the State."

Mrs. Tupper asserts that the W. C. T. U. members will never vote for a candidate who is not dry, and it is assumed they will refrain from voting for Governor this year. Their strength lies in the strong Republican counties of the southern tier, and their attitude is causing much worry to the Republican leaders.

TO BACK SMITH AT POLLS.

Association Against Prohibition Amendment Will Vote Ticket.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Support of the Democratic State ticket in New York was pledged today by William H. Stayton, founder and head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in a telegram to Governor Smith of New York.

"The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment," the message read, "stands unqualifiedly for the plank demanding modification of the Volstead act contained in the Syracuse platform and will work for the success of the Democratic State ticket.

"The effort of the Rochester convention to sneak through against the wishes of a great majority of the people a new State prohibition law by the device of nominating wet candidate for Governor and hog-tying him with a dry platform is a dishonest trick which intelligent voters will rebuke in November."

say that my party has fallen into evil ways. I am not disposed to criticise President Coolidge and I do not care to enter into a discussion of his Cabinet inheritance. I may say, in passing, that I cannot understand how any one can reasonably defend a Fall.

"The announcement by Dr. Thompson that he will vote for John W. Davis has struck the Republican leaders with dismay. Dr. Thompson has long been known as a Republican leader of Ohio and the Middle West. His counsel has been constantly sought in party matters since the days of McKinley.

"Dr. Thompson's decision to support the Democratic Presidential nominee rests also on other grounds than that his party has fallen into evil ways. 'The Republican Party has slumped,' he declares, and then he comes straight to the point that the conditions which surround this year's political developments permit no indecision and I am for John W. Davis for President. I shall vote for him, shall work for him and do what I can to speed his success.

"Furthermore, he is for John W. Davis because Davis is 'unafraid.' He admires Davis's stand on the Klan. He points to his high distinction in the realm of law, his services as Ambassador to Great Britain and his experience on the diplomatic firing line, and then he concludes:

"I know of no other aspirant for Presidential honors—and I believe there are six or seven—who is so well equipped to deal with our complicated foreign relations. I believe that he is a man of broader calibre than any man who today is a candidate for that office. I believe that he should be chosen by the American people.'

"In thus earnestly and concisely stating his reasons for supporting the Democratic Presidential nominee, namely, that the party has fallen into evil ways, that the conditions facing the country permit of no indecision, and that John W. Davis is unafraid and of bigger calibre than any candidate for the Presidency, Dr. Thompson epitomizes the reasons given by a large number of Republicans for casting their vote for John W. Davis at the coming election."

DENIES PEACE PLAN CREDITED TO WILSON

CONTRADICTS G. H. CUSHING

Grosvenor B. Clarkson, former director of the Council of National Defense, took issue yesterday with a recent magazine article by George H. Cushing, editor of Cushing's Survey and formerly managing director of the National Wholesale Coal Association, dealing with Woodrow Wilson's plans for world peace and the means by which Mr. Wilson tried to carry them out during and after the war.

Mr. Clarkson made public a letter from Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover denying Mr. Cushing's statement that President Wilson's idea of an international pool of natural resources in order to do away with the underlying economic causes of war had dominated the Washington conference through Mr. Hoover, who was associated with Mr. Wilson during the war and was a member of the Harding Cabinet at the time of the conference.

A letter from Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in Mr. Wilson's Cabinet, also was made public by Mr. Clarkson. Mr. Baker said that he had never heard Mr. Wilson express the belief attributed to him by Mr. Cushing, that the government of backward by more advanced countries under the League of Nations mandates was in the interest of international control of the natural resources of the backward countries.

Gives Lane as Authority.

Mr. Cushing in his article, which was published in the August number of the Atlantic Monthly, quoted the late Franklin K. Lane, who was Secretary of the Interior in Mr. Wilson's Cabinet, as authority for Mr. Wilson's views on natural resources. He said that Mr. Wilson believed that nearly all wars grew out of economic causes, especially the competition for raw materials. According to Mr. Cushing, Mr. Wilson was constantly contemplating a project for an ultimate international pool of raw materials in order to secure universal peace by removing the most potent causes of war.

President Wilson realized, according to Mr. Cushing, that before there could be international control there must be national control. Mr. Cushing said that Mr. Wilson contemplated national control of natural resources and that in September, 1919, the President was about to recommend to Congress the nationalization of the coal industry, when Mr. Lane persuaded him to postpone it.

Mr. Cushing said that the nationalization of coal was held in abeyance by Mr. Wilson because of a larger project, in furtherance of which, he said, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, former Coal Administrator, made his proposal in 1920 for the establishment of an industrial Cabinet, each member to have control of some natural resource. According to Mr. Cushing, Dr. Garfield told him that he and Mr. Wilson had worked out the plan together when they were both at Princeton. Mr. Cushing also asserted that when President Wilson sent Bernard M. Baruch to Europe in 1918 Mr. Baruch effected an actual world pool of raw materials for the period of the war.

Mr. Clarkson's Reply.

Mr. Clarkson says in his statement in reply to Mr. Cushing's article:

"My attention was first called to Mr. Cushing's article by his singular reference therein to the Council of National Defense. Writing on national resources as related to the national welfare, he states that what he calls 'the program,' of the discussion thereof, 'lost its 'spiritual significance' after Woodrow Wilson retired. He adds that 'the discussion' finally gravitated into 'practical politics without much to lift it above the level of the sordid.'

"That is to say," continues Mr. Cushing, 'when the War Industries Board disbanded its residuary legatee, so to speak, became the Council for National Defense—an exchange of five ardent crusaders for five overworked Cabinet officers which resulted in the delegation of the work to habitually indifferent bureaucrats.

"It is somewhat difficult to oppose statements that are without sound premise. I served the Council of National Defense continuously for thirty-seven months from February, 1917, to March, 1920, and cannot recall Mr. Cushing or his spiritual discussion or the program which he imputes to Mr. Wilson.

"I do not know what Mr. Cushing means by 'practical politics.' While the Council of National Defense was composed of six (not five) Democratic Cabinet officers, its direction, its immediate assistants and the personnel of all the council's brood of subordinate bodies was at least seven-eighths composed of business men and economic experts, Republican in politics. There was no politics in the council from beginning to end. I do not know what Mr. Cushing means by 'five ardent crusaders.' If he refers to the War Industries Board, that body had eleven members.

Does Not Recall Program.

"Mr. Cushing's program may have been discussed by the Interdepartmental Defense Board, which I organized after the armistice to study among other things resource-defense problems, and of which I was Chairman, but if so memory fails me. The board's minutes would be the best evidence.

"The council was not the legatee of the War Industries Board. It created that board on Aug. 1, 1917, supervising its work until March, 1918, when Mr. Baruch took hold with new powers. After the armistice, I did in fact persuade the council and Mr. Wilson to let me take over the board's priceless economic files, and I had a trained staff at work for months afterward trying to salvage for future emergency some of the huge industrial lessons of the war. Of course, in any study of these lessons the question of national resources is inherent and must be the base of all considerations. This material, pretty well clarified and indexed, was absorbed by the War Department a year and a half after I left office. Congress having refused to appropriate the small sum of money needed to continue the council's peace-time work.

"Mr. Cushing quotes Mr. Lane, who was a member of the council. I often lunched with Mr. Lane on resources-defense questions, but never heard him mention Mr. Cushing.

Baker Never Heard of Plan.

"'Seeing light,' wrote Mr. Baker, who, as Secretary of War, was chairman of the Council. He replied:

"'The article by Mr. Cushing deals with a matter about which I know absolutely nothing. I never heard Mr. Wilson express any of the beliefs attributed to him by Mr. Cushing with regard either to the control of national resources or the economic interests of industrial nations as a justification for the League of Nations.'

"Turning to Mr. Hoover for information as to the accuracy of Mr. Cushing's analysis and definition of some of the great national and world policies dealt with in his article, I received the following response:

"'In respect to your inquiry as to the accuracy of statements about myself in an article by George H. Cushing in the August Atlantic Monthly, I am able to give you the following information.

"'Mr. Cushing's statement regarding myself is as follows:

"'Knowing as much as I did of the writer, Hoover's connection with natural resources, found it impossible to escape the belief that Mr. Wilson's idea had dominated the action of the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments which met in Washington in December, 1921, and which made disposition of certain oil resources of Asia which were theretofore controlled temporarily by Japan. I have found it impossible not to believe that this idea of Mr. Wilson carried into the Disarmament Conference by Mr. Hoover, who had been a member of the War Industries Board and who was at the time a member of Mr. Harding's Cabinet. The point of contact seems too close to ignore, especially when the accomplished fact is so closely akin to the original theory.'

"The only trouble with this statement is that it is wholly untrue, because,

"First: I never was aware that world pools or any such policies with regard to natural resources were contemplated by Mr. Wilson or any one else and, therefore, could not have been the thread through which any continuity of policy in this direction was maintained.

"Second: I never was a member of the War Industries Board.

"Third: So far as I am aware, no question of oil resources of Asia or elsewhere was ever discussed at the Disarmament Conference certainly not by me.

"Fourth: I was not aware that any consequential oil resources in Asia was controlled temporarily or otherwise by Japan. If he refers to Saghalien Island it is a mute.'

Mr. Clarkson adds:

"When one deals with such basic and vital national topics as those to which Mr. Cushing addresses himself, he should be very sure of his sources of information and of the historical background involved.

"It is of course true that many things happened in Washington during the war years of which those presumably in a position to know were actually ignorant. It would be interesting if Mr. Cushing could disclose evidence of this fact with regard to the official handling of our tremendously important national resource problem."

GOV. BRYAN NOW PLANS SWING IN THE EAST

Ends Chicago Conferences—Says Nebraskans Are 'Conservative When It Comes to Stealing.'

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Having completed his conferences here at Western headquarters, at which a temporary foundation was laid for a far-reaching campaign by the Democratic national candidates and other party leaders in October, Governor Bryan of Nebraska, Democratic candidate for Vice President, left here tonight for his home in Lincoln.

During his visit here Governor Bryan outlined his views as to what sections should be included in future itineraries, expressed satisfaction with the manner in which the campaign was being conducted, declared groundless the reports that he was called to Chicago to be censured for "inactivity" and referred directly for the first time to the La Follette-Wheeler independent ticket when he declared that ticket was not considered "opposition," from a Democratic standpoint.

Mr. Bryan, replying to attacks on his "radicalism," said:

"We are Conservatives in Nebraska when it comes to stealing."

"I'm a business man myself," he added, "and I know that if anything inimical to business happens I would be one of the sufferers."

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 28.—Considerable interest has been stirred in this section by an editorial printed in Kansas City last week on the subject, "Has Something Set Brother Charley Thinking?" The editorial says:

"Democratic leaders are indignant at the reports of lack of harmony between Governor Bryan and themselves. Governor Bryan had announced he would make only a few speeches outside Nebraska. Just what the leaders said. But since the publication of the reports of lack of harmony the Governor has revised his schedule and says he will speak in other States. Presumably, this, too, is satisfactory. Anyway, there can be no lack of harmony—in public, at least.

"Still, if Governor Bryan is more interested in his own candidacy for Vice President than he is in Mr. Davis's candidacy for President, that in fact, while a deplorable commentary on the frailty of mortals, is not remarkable politically speaking. Governor Bryan may not be a deep student of the Constitution, but he must have heard anyway that the possibility of a deadlock in the electoral college involves some contingencies important to himself. If the electors don't elect a President the House of Representatives has a try; the House may also fail to elect, and in that event the Senate elects a Vice President and the Vice President thus elected would automatically become President on March 4. The Senate's choice must lie between the two Vice Presidential candidates standing highest on the electoral polls. These candidates are in all probability to be General Dawes and Governor Bryan.

"Here is a prospect that a suspicious mind—and, alas! so many minds are that—might easily connect with Governor Bryan's alleged complacency toward the La Follette campaign, his Western Republican States. If the Electoral College is deadlocked it will be La Follette who will deadlock it. Any little thing Governor Bryan can do, therefore, toward helping along the La Follette game advances the possibility of a Senatorial choice of a Vice President. That choice might light on Governor Bryan; Vice President Bryan would become President Bryan.

"If it was for that Mr. Davis picked Brother Charley to round out the Democratic ticket, it was a happy pick for the Presidential nominee. Brother Charley, it was hoped, would hold Brother William in line, and also hold in line those same Western States in which La Follette is now centreing his campaign. But Governor Bryan, apparently, has shown a strange indifference to Mr. Davis's fortunes in those regions. He hasn't helped Mr. Davis, and help withheld from Davis is help given to La Follette—as wins the political logic. La Follette controls several Senatorial votes—where would he cast them for Vice President as between Dawes and Bryan?

"Have these possibilities set Brother Charley thinking?"

ANSWERS DAVIS ON COURT.

Arthur Hays Says La Follette Would Retain Veto Power.

Arthur Garfield Hays, State Chairman of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign, replied yesterday to John W. Davis's speech of last Saturday night at Wilmington, Del., where the Democratic candidate said La Follette's proposal for limiting the power of the Supreme Court was not Bolshevik in origin, but was derived from the British system. Mr. Hays said:

"The Democratic nominee for President, whose legal learning and personal charm no one would question, has been fair enough to expose the falsity of the Republican attack on Senator La Follette's position in regard to courts.

"We all agree that there is an advantage in the American system of checks and balances, but the British theory under which no law can be declared unconstitutional goes much further than Senator La Follette's proposal. The Supreme Court would still have the right to declare a law unconstitutional, but Congress would then have the power again to pass the law, where it involves political economic, or social questions. In other words, the Supreme Court would have a power something in the nature of a veto; but just as Congress can override a Presidential veto, it would have the power to override the Supreme Court, where it has acted contrary to public policy as expressed by Congress. The final arbiter on political, economic, or social questions should be the people acting through their representatives.

"In England the courts have no such veto power, and yet the British do not seem to be in danger of losing their liberties. When Mr. Davis said that the principle was derived from British institutions he rather should have added that it had certain American phases."

HARRISON ATTACKS G. O. P. CORRUPTION

MENTIONS CAMPAIGN COSTS

Then Denounces Republican Officials for Bartering Away Government Oil Lands.

By WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

When I put the question, "Shall the Republican Party be charged with political corruption?" to Pat Harrison, United States Senator from Mississippi, he made the following reply:

"The whole Harding-Coolidge Administration is corroded with every kind of corruption.

"When you speak of 'political corruption,' the students of current history immediately recall the tremendous exactions in large campaign contributions of the last Presidential campaign. They recall how a million and a half deficit was created by Will Hays and how he called the meeting of Patterson, Wrigley and Lasker and other pampered pets of this Administration into the White House conference and there compelled them to disgorge to relieve the Republican Party from the enormous debt that it had created to carry the prior election.

"They will recall how Patterson and his whole family coughed up, and how, in a little while, through legislation, the Republican Congress raised the ad valorem rates on cash registers coming into the country.

"They will recall how, after Wrigley had generously contributed, the Republican Congress took the tax off of raw chewing gum.

"They will recall how Lasker and the whole Administration tried to pass an iniquitous ship subsidy bill so that ships that it cost the American taxpayers billions of dollars to build might be sold at a minimum price to the Standard Oil and the shipping trust.

"They will recall how Mellon and his many connections contributed generously to the Republican Party and received return consideration from the Republicans of an unfair and unjust and inequitable tax reduction along the lines proposed in the Mellon plan.

Always Exacted "Pound of Flesh."

"The Republican Party has always exacted the 'pound of flesh' for the special favors that it has granted and the special privileges created. That is the 'political corruption' that has infested the Republican Administration for the past several years.

"Now as to other kinds of corruption. I despair for the want of time when I attempt to chronicle them. The Democratic Party, after eight years of control of the Government, with responsibilities that called for the largest expenditures of any like period in the history of the country and with fifty-two Republican-controlled committees investigating every expenditure, received a clean bill of health. With such a high order of honesty and purity in the administration of government established, it was to be expected that the Republican Administration would appoint such men to control the destinies of this nation as would be honest with the people's money and the country's natural resources. Since the startling revelations touching the administration of the Veterans' Bureau, the Departments of Justice, Interior and Navy, it is almost presumptuous to ask, 'Shall the Republican Party be charged with political corruption?'

"Under what Administration was the bartering away of our naval oil reserves permitted? Every attempt was made to get control of them under the Democratic Administration. It was the opinion rendered by John W. Davis, as Solicitor General, that set at rest the question of the legal rights of the Government in these naval oil reserves. It was the Democratic Administration that protected them and preserved them.

Republicans Responsible for Leases.

"It was a Republican Secretary of the Interior who sold these leases for his own corrupt and selfish aggrandizement. It was a Republican Secretary of the Navy and his Assistant that permitted these Naval oil reserve lands to slip away and out of the hands of the Government into the selfish hands of Doheny and Sinclair. It was these Republican officials who ignored the protest and warning of high Naval officers who protested against the sale or lease of these lands.

"It was the man who was closest to the Republican President who was willing, in the interest of his own private gain, to falsely represent facts and to assume the odium of the nefarious transaction in the loan of the $100,000 to Fall. Ned McLean afterward admitted that he had made public the statement that the $100,000 which Fall had obtained was loaned to him by McLean.

"It was Calvin Coolidge, who, when the confidence of the American people had reached its lowest ebb, and these revelations were flying like sparks every day from the Walsh Committee room, dispatched his private secretary to Florida for some purpose that has never been explained, but which must be drawn from the fact that in Florida, on Slemp's arrival, he immediately got in touch with Fall and Ned McLean and remained in conference with them for several days.

"In fact the contact was so friendly between Ned McLean and Calvin Coolidge at that time that the President was sending secret messages to McLean, and McLean had full permission to use the private wires of the White House, the secret code of the Department of Justice, and the White House operator.

"Calvin Coolidge presided over the Senate while the infamous Teapot Dome steal was being discussed. He knew the feelings of the American people. He was permitted to sit in the Cabinet meetings. He had full opportunity to apprise himself of all the facts and it was his duty as Vice President, sitting in the Harding Cabinet, to give them the benefit of whatever knowledge had come to him as presiding officer of the United States Senate.

"The friends of the Republican nominee say that, although he had ears to hear and eyes to see, he did not hear nor see anything wrong in the Teapot Dome scandal. I must submit that even if his eyes and his ears had become defective, if he still possessed a nose, he could have detected it because it smelled to high Heaven."

DAUGHERTY DECLARES DAVIS LACKS THE FACTS

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 28.—Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney General, in another statement here today asserted that John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, has not answered his letter of a week ago, in which he charged that Davis in his speeches was condemning him without a full knowledge of all the facts.

"Now that I have read John W. Davis's letter, I find that it is not at all responsive to my letter to him," said the Daugherty statement.

"It is practically a reiteration of his speeches which justified my writing him as I did. From the responses I have received from all over the country I am satisfied my position is well understood and what took place in Washington now is well known."

SOCIALISTS RATIFY THEIR STATE TICKET

Official Convention Here Also Endorses La Follette-Wheeler Third Party Movement.

The official State convention of the Socialist Party, at a meeting in the People's House yesterday, endorsed the La Follette-Wheeler ticket, ratified the State ticket nominated at the recent unofficial convention in Albany, and incorporated in the Socialist platform twelve of the fourteen demands of the State Federation of Labor.

The labor proposals adopted were:

"Incorporation in the State anti-monopoly laws of a clause stating that labor is not a commodity.

"Abolition of the injunction in labor disputes except after a trial by jury.

"Abolition of private insurance companies in dealing with the workmen's compensation law; the State to be the sole insurer.

"Restitution of the original penalty stopping payment on contracts when the eight-hour day and prevailing rate of wages has been violated.

"Amendment to the State constitution providing for the initiative, referendum and recall.

"Development by the State of water power, and surplus to the people of electricity and power from these developments at cost.

"Immediate ratification of the Federal Child Labor Amendment.

"Defeat of the pending amendment to the State Constitution which would take the power to regulate courts from the hands of the Legislature.

"Defeat of any proposals which would compel labor to incorporate or prevent it from stopping work when and where it wishes to."

The labor proposals that were not adopted were:

"Legalization of light wines and beers.

Besides ratifying the State nominations already made, the convention nominated S. John Block and J. J. Bernstein for the Supreme Court, First Judicial District, including Manhattan and the Bronx.

The State nominations ratified were: Norman Thomas, Governor; Charles Solomon, Lieutenant Governor; Frank R. Crosswith, Secretary of State; Theresa B. Wiley, Controller; John Vanden Bach, Treasurer; Louis Waldman, Attorney General; and Vladimar Karapetoff, State Engineer.

MOVES TO ELECT WOMEN TO CONGRESS

Alice Paul Says the Major Parties Have Not Given Them a Square Deal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Miss Alice Paul, Vice Chairman of the National Woman's Party, has launched a special campaign for the election of women to Congress, on the ground that the two chief political parties have not given a "square deal" to the aspirations of the women for larger representation in the House of Representatives.

Miss Paul has made an analysis of the present political situation, as affecting the outlook for women in Congress, and finds that only ten women have been nominated for Congress. She asserts that these have been nominated only in apparently hopeless districts, but she hopes women will rally to the support of these nominees in sufficient numbers to elect them.

"The results in the 47 States which have now held their primaries or conventions and chosen candidates for Congress," said Miss Paul, "show clearly that women themselves must organize to place women in Congress, and that unless this is done we shall continue to have a national legislative body made up only of men.

"Out of the forty-seven States only six have nominated a woman for Congress. Of these six States, Pennsylvania has nominated five women, and Illinois, Ohio, Tennessee, Kansas and New Jersey have each nominated one woman. No other States has nominated any women, except in a few cases on a ticket of such minor importance in the district that the nomination is negligible. This means that forty-one States have given no woman a chance even to have her name on the ballot as a contestant in the Congressional race."

MAINZER NOW FOR COOLIDGE

Honorary Fire Chief and a Democrat Joins Non-Partisan League.

Robert H. Mainzer, Honorary Chief of the Fire Department and a Democrat, announced yesterday that he had joined the Coolidge Non-Partisan League, and would vote for the President, although supporting Davis.

"I have just returned from a business trip to Seattle," Mr. Mainzer said. "I came in touch with business men from all parts of the country. Out in the West and here in the East I find the business men almost all for Coolidge. These men are not voting a party ticket but for the man best fitted to serve them at Washington."

Announcement of support of President Coolidge on non-partisan lines by two other men prominent in business, David R. Forgan, President of the National City Bank of Chicago, and H. Truesdale, President of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, were announced by Rhinelander Waldo, President of the league.

NAME LA FOLLETTE TICKET.

California Socialists Choose Electors Pledged to the Senator.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 28.—The Socialist Party of California, at a special convention here last night, named thirteen Presidential Electors to go on the ballot pledged to Senator La Follette. Only two of the thirteen among the La Follette Electors that were to have been on an independent ticket had the Supreme Court not ruled that they could not legally be voted on at the polls.

may be supreme principles for which under extraordinary circumstances men must fight as a last resort. But he believes 'that as organized society in its slow evolution has developed more rational means of settling individual differences than brute force, so must the nations of the world find ways of deciding their disagreements other than war.'

Husband Did Not Favor War.

"I believe that no threatened dangers, no violation of principles, could come upon us which would compare with the destruction of civilization that will inevitably follow another World War.

"Mr. La Follette did not favor going into the World War. After we were in it he supported all necessary appropriations for the conduct of our army and navy. He took care of the foreign loans of our great banking houses and of the investments of our great capitalists in oil and mines and other enterprises abroad. He took no bullets, our boys should be remembered, our citizens taken to protect the foreign projects of our monopolies and wealthy bosses.

"Throughout his public career Mr. La Follette has fought imperialism and militarism. They go together. They represent government in the interest of the few. They cannot co-exist with a true democracy—a government in the interest of all the people. Secret diplomacy and intrigue are still factors in governing the world. We must get rid of these evils if we would get rid of war.

"Progressive Government would grant independence to the Philippines, cultivate friendship with Mexico, cease to exploit Cuba, Haiti and the weaker nations of Central and South America. Progressive Government would not risk kindling suspicion and rivalry of other nations with Mobilization Day parades. It would enter into firm agreements with all nations to outlaw war, abolish conscription and would drastically reduce land, air and naval armaments and guarantee public referendums on peace and war.

"Mr. La Follette believes that the only reliable guarantee against war for greed and gain is that the people get possession of their own Government. England, France, Germany and the Scandinavian countries are making their way toward peace and disarmament today because they have chosen leaders who represent the people's point of view. If you would not have war, elect public servants who represent the people."

The wife of the nominee also emphasized her husband's stand for a Congressional check on the Supreme Court, and favoring public ownership of the railroads and water power resources. On the tariff she declared:

"The Progressive platform favors reduction of the tariff and declares that 'to break the combined power of the private monopoly system over the political and economic life of the American people is the one paramount issue of the 1924 campaign.'

WHEELER IN DENVER FINDS PARTY SPLIT

He Hears That Farmer-Labor Ticket on Ballot Will Confuse La Follette Voters.

SPEAKS AT CHURCH FORUM

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 28.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler reached Colorado today in his campaign tour and found the political situation badly tangled, with every evidence that the fight will, by Election Day, match any of the former Colorado political contests in bitterness and frankness so far as charges of doublecrossing and crookedness are concerned.

As soon as the Senator reached his hotel leaders of the third party movement began to unfold their picture of the situation to him, and a short meeting of the La Follette Executive Committee was called.

The Senator made his first public appearance in Colorado tonight at the forum of the Community Church, of which the Rev. Dr. George S. Lackland, a member of the Progressive Executive Committee, is the head. No ban was placed upon political utterance, but Senator Wheeler prefaced his remarks by saying that he would not make a political address.

Instead of starting with an attack upon his political opponents Senator Wheeler told of his trip to Europe. It was not the farmers and industrial workers, he said, but the "corrupt military forces" which had brought Europe to her present plight. From this theme he led up to conditions which, he said, existed in Washington and which made for non-enforcement of the laws. He wished to call attention to the fact, he declared, that the Republicans talked to the church people about their desire to enforce the prohibition laws and then placed at the head of the Treasury Department, as the man to supervise prohibition enforcement, Andrew W. Mellon, who, the Senator said, had "been engaged in the whisky business" for many years.

The third party leaders here are asserting that there is an excellent chance of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket to carry this State, although, if the opinions of several other leaders are to be believed, President Coolidge seems to be in the strongest position, despite the fact that the Republican ranks are split by the Klan issue and other internal troubles.

While the Progressive ticket will carry only the names of the La Follette electors, the party in its campaign efforts will give support to Senator Alva B. Adams, Democratic nominee for the long term as Senator; Morrison Shafroth, son of former Senator John Shafroth, Democratic nominee for the short term, and William E. Sweet, Democratic nominee for Governor.

The Progressive leaders explain that one thing which influenced them was the fact that the Democratic nominees were considered Progressives, while the Republican nominees represented interests that the followers of La Follette have been fighting for years.

The Republican nominee for the long term as Senator is Senator Lawrence C. Phipps. Rice W. Means, now City Attorney, is the Republican candidate for the short term. Clarence J. Morley, upon whom his opponents have endeavored to hang the label of the Ku Klux Klan, is the Republican nominee for Governor.

The La Follette leaders are having troubles of their own, and are making serious accusations against what is known here as the Farmer-Labor Party. This organization, which has played a prominent part in Colorado politics for several years and has been the subject of numerous attacks, has filed Presidential electors and a full State ticket, and has declared, temporarily at least, for Senator La Follette. Some of the La Follette workers on the Farmer-Labor ticket are men who cannot obtain the endorsement of the Progressive Party and are making charges of trickery and worse. One of these charges is that Senator Phipps is giving financial backing to the Farmer-Labor organization in the hope of confounding both the Progressive and Democratic opponents.

The La Follette leaders of Colorado maintain that they have great strength among the farmers, who cast about one-third of the vote of the State.

The Ku Klux Klan is said to have a strong following in some of the farming communities, but it is contended that they are going to vote for La Follette because most of them "went broke" during the present Administration. There is evidence also that there is a strong La Follette sentiment among the railroad workers.

As the situation shapes up today the Republicans are the most confident so far as the national ticket is concerned, and probably have reason to be so. The Democrats are more confident of electing their nominees for the Senate and for Governor than they are of swinging the State to Davis. The La Follette workers are hoping that election day will find them running neck and neck with Coolidge, with Davis third in the race.

WHITE ASSAILS KLAN IN TOPEKA STRONGHOLD

TOPEKA, Kan., Sept. 28.—William Allen White, Independent candidate for Governor, came into this home town of John R. Dean, attorney for the Ku Klux Klan, today and paid his respects to the Invisible Empire. He said he did not know what the Klan called its attorney, but he had picked out the name, "The Most August Horned Toad," for Dean for his Klan affiliations.

"Six weeks ago," Mr. White began, "if any one had told me that I would be driving up and down across this State on pure asking for votes, I would have told him that he was crazy or a liar, or maybe both. I was thoroughly enjoying my life at Emporia, when this horrible thing came along—my party being gagged and by whom? By the Ku Klux Klan.

"It makes no difference to the nightshirt nobility which Klan candidate for Governor wins in Kansas. The State is hogtied to the Klan by either. Both are obligated to the Klan."

ONLY FOR THE MIGHTY—

IN centuries long faded, only the lords of men wore diamonds. Only in the folds of princely turbans, in the crowns of kings, in the hilts of royal swords were diamonds to be seen—aristocrat of gems.

Today these royal jewels are found among all people who love their splendid beauty. Today many men desire to possess or to present to others the gem which is at once so unchanging in its brilliance and value, and so capricious in it.

Since there are many men who desire diamonds, there are, too, many men who deal in them. Yet there are comparatively few great diamond houses where the pleasure of your purchase is accompanied by the utmost confidence in it.

CLAIMS 3 STATES FOR LA FOLLETTE

J. A. Harrison, Regional Campaign Chief, Counts on Nebraska, Iowa and Wyoming.

HAS DOUBT AS TO MISSOURI

REAL FIGHT FOR KANSAS

But Third Party Relies on Labor Vote — Internal Dissensions Check Colorado Drive.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 28.—This capital city of Nebraska is the nerve centre of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign in six of the great mid-Western States, namely, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado.

From three little rooms in the Funke Building the men to whom the Wisconsin Senator has entrusted his fortunes in these agricultural and mining States are directing the battle to capture them for the Progressive ticket. Neither of the old parties has a central organization of a similar nature and for that reason this article must necessarily be, in a way, one-sided.

At the head of the La Follette organization in charge of these States is Frank A. Harrison, for a generation or more and until the entrance of La Follette into the arena a man of much prominence in the affairs of the Republican machine of this State. He is one of Senator Norris's closest friends and is also an intimate of Senator La Follette.

High officials of both the Republican and Democratic organizations are authority for the statement that there are few more experienced political managers in the West than Mr. Harrison. Unlike many of the politicians whom THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has talked with during the last ten days, he is not a booster. He does not claim everything in sight.

Admits Hard Job in Three States.

While refusing to concede any of his six States to the opposition, Mr. Harrison admits that he has a difficult task in Missouri, Kansas and Colorado. Nebraska, Iowa and Wyoming, he insists, are safe for the La Follette ticket. His survey of the situation provides some comfort for the Democrats so far as Missouri is concerned, while local troubles in Kansas and Colorado have, he admits, made the battle in these somewhat complicated, but he asserts the bad spots will be eliminated long before election day.

Taking the six States in which he is the directing head of the La Follette campaign, Mr. Harrison said that he was of the opinion that in Missouri the drift to La Follette will be largely from the Republicans, and did not deny that this may save Missouri for John W. Davis.

Missouri is the hardest nut the La Follette manager has to crack, owing to the fact that the backbone of the Democratic vote in the State is a "Southern" vote and the bulk of it, in the opinion of those in touch with the Missouri situation, will remain loyal to the Democratic ticket. On the other hand the main strength, in recent years, of the Republican party in Missouri has been the German and negro vote. Eliminate those two elements in the voting population and Missouri would be as Democratic as Georgia.

The big German vote in Missouri, mainly in St. Louis and the river counties, the La Follette leaders say, will swing almost as a unit to the new ticket, and in that event they admit the electoral vote of the State might be Democratic. Mr. Harrison, however, declared it to be his opinion that Missouri is good "missionary" territory, and with proper management he insists that it may be won for the La Follette ticket.

La Follette, Mr. Harrison says, will get, in addition to the German vote, the bulk of the great labor vote of the State and a big part of the farm vote. The Ku Klux Klan is strong in Missouri and it is admitted that this vote may help Coolidge and Dawes, despite the fact that both the Republican and Democratic candidates for Governor are running on anti-Klan platforms. This is somewhat amusing in view of the fact that both candidates for Governor are said to have had the Klan endorsement in the primary campaign. For this reason the third party argument is that Senator La Follette should share with Mr. Davis in the division of the anti-Klan vote.

"Don't misunderstand me," Mr. Harrison said. "I am not conceding Missouri to either of the opposition candidates. I simply admit certain facts. We have a good chance in that State and we are going to nourish it along for all it's worth. Just as I believe we can carry Oklahoma. I believe we can carry Missouri. All I am admitting is that as the situation aises up we should get more votes from the Republicans than we will from the Democrats."

Describes Fight in Kansas.

Kansas was the next State referred to by Mr. Harrison. He said that the La Follette-Wheeler petitions were to be filed this week. There were some technical errors, he explained, in the first petitions filed, and the petitions, necessary to get the names of the La Follette-Wheeler electors on the ballot, had to be prepared a second time.

"The fight in Kansas," Mr. Harrison said, "is just beginning. Kansas is an agricultural State exactly like Nebraska, but without Nebraska's large population of foreign origin. The farm vote is the dominating one, but there is also a large railroad and mining vote. We are not conceding anything in Kansas and we are going to wage a battle from now on right up to election day to win the State."

The Ku Klux Klan is the big issue in Kansas. The hooded order has swarmed like bees in the State, and while Mr. Harrison probably does not share the same opinion other politicians who are well informed as to the Kansas situation believe that the Klan has enough votes to keep Kansas in the Republican camp.

Senator Capper, who once headed the Senatorial farm bloc, is working for Coolidge and Dawes and as he is said to have remained silent on the Klan issue reports that he is very popular in the camps of the masked order. Senator Capper paid a flying visit to Nebraska this week to speak for Coolidge and Dawes. He endorsed both Coolidge and Norris. Even the Republicans admitted that this was quite an achievement in political acrobatics.

While the La Follette followers express optimism as to the Kansas outlook, the general impression in this part of the country seems to be that Kansas at this stage of the campaign is safe for Coolidge and Dawes.

The Nebraska situation was covered in detail yesterday in THE NEW YORK TIMES. It is only necessary to repeat that the La Follette managers contend that the State is already won for their ticket, while both Republicans and Democrats admit that the result is in doubt.

Iowa, according to Mr. Harrison, will be carried for the third party. All the reports from that State, he said, show a steady drift from both parties to La Follette.

The situation, he added, is similar to that in Nebraska. Senator Brookhart, running for re-election on the Republican ticket, is following the same tactics as is Senator Norris in Nebraska; that is, endorsing everything La Follette stands for and at the same time running on the regular Republican ticket.

Wheeler Boosts Brookhart.

It is conceded that large numbers of Republicans will vote for Daniel Steck, the Democratic candidate for the Senate, rather than by their vote endorse the course of Senator Brookhart. In his campaign speeches Brookhart does not mention Coolidge and Dawes. The Lincoln headquarters of the third party cited the fact that Thursday at Des Moines Senator Wheeler, the Vice Presidential nominee, urged all supporters of the La Follette-Wheeler ticket to vote for Senator Brookhart.

Next on Mr. Harrison's list was Wyoming. That State, he insisted, is safe for La Follette. The total vote is less than 60,000 and it is said that one-third of this vote comes from the ranks of labor. The railway brotherhoods are particularly strong. Teapot Dome also is a Wyoming issue and Senator La Follette was the man who started the Teapot Dome investigation, Harrison said.

In Colorado the new movement has run up against several snags. The progressive-radical combination in that State is understood to be wrestling with several problems of an internal nature, and until they are smoothed out there will be no easy sailing for the third party. Mr. Harrison declared that the differences in the ranks of his forces will be composed in time, as he expressed it, "to save Colorado for progressivism."

"In this group of six States," Mr. Harrison said, "it is perfectly apparent to me that the drift is all our way. It is also a fact, in my opinion, that the Democrats have no chance in any of these States with the possible exception of Missouri; as a matter of fact, in many of these Western States the Democrats are working openly for La Follette. It is practical politics. They know the way the wind is blowing."

Mr. Harrison said that in his opinion one of the "pathetic figures" of the campaign is William Jennings Bryan.

"The people out here," he said, "believed in W. J. B., and now he has proved himself just an ordinary politician."

Mr. Harrison declined to estimate the probable La Follette majorities in the States in which he insists the electoral vote is safe for the third party ticket.

La Follette Loses in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 28.—The names of La Follette-Wheeler Presidential electors will not go on the ballot in Louisiana in the November election unless the courts overrule the action yesterday of Thomas Killeen, Registrar of Voters, who refused to certify to the list of names attached to a petition submitted by J. J. Finneran, head of the Independent forces, because of a ruling by the Attorney General's office that persons registered as affiliated with either the Republican or Democratic parties could not sign the La Follette nomination papers. Mr. Finneran plans mandamus proceedings.

GOMPERS DEFENDS ATTACK ON COURTS

HITS COOLIDGE AND DAWES

Says Former Doesn't Understand Desires of People, While Latter Lacks Sympathy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in his capacity as chief leader of the labor wing of the La Follette campaign tonight issued a statement intended to justify the proposal of Senator La Follette and his supporters that the authority of the United States Supreme Court be curtailed by depriving it of the right to pass finally on the constitutionality of an act of Congress.

Text of Mr. Gompers's Statement.

Following is Mr. Gompers's statement:

For political campaign purposes the vociferous General Dawes and the cool and cautious President Coolidge are seeking to make it appear that the opponents of unlimited power for the Supreme Court are in reality little better than revolutionists and are striking drastically at the most sacred foundations of the Republic. Most of the adjectives in the dictionary have been applied to those who support the declaration of the American Federation of Labor and the plank in the platform of Senator La Follette demanding the curbing of the improper powers now exercised by the court.

Those who criticize the proposal to deprive the Supreme Court of its unlimited power to nullify acts of Congress on the ground of radicalism and as an assault on established institutions should read again the proposal enunciated by Theodore Roosevelt in the Progressive Party platform of 1912. This should be read particularly by those former followers of Colonel Roosevelt who are now unable to see the constructive nature of a proposal which is indeed less sweeping than that which they then advocated and which they then approved. That platform contained the following section:

"Popular Review of Judicial Decisions—The Progressive Party demands such restriction of the power of the courts as shall leave to the people the ultimate authority to determine fundamental questions of social welfare and public policy."

It has always been the practice of those who favor strong centralized Governments and of those who favor the perpetuation of autocratic power anywhere to attribute dangerously radical and revolutionary tendencies to those favoring the extension or enlargement of the powers of self-government.

The American Federation of Labor believes that a majority of the people of the United States are opposed to further usurpation of power by the Supreme Court and are opposed to a system under which the court composed of Judges who are appointed for life can veto legislation passed by elected representatives. There is involved in this opinion no attack on the court as such, and there is no desire anywhere to deprive the court of what should be its proper functions and power.

Would Deprive Court of Final Veto.

The present situation is that the Supreme Court by a decision of 5 to 4 may declare null and void any act passed by Congress. The court having so decided, the people have no further recourse except through the cumbersome process of constitutional amendment. The demand is not that the court be deprived of all power to pass on the constitutionality of legislation, but that it be deprived solely of its power of final veto. What is demanded is that the people finally may be able to out-vote the Supreme Court and write their will into law in spite of the Supreme Court.

It is demanded that Congress shall have the power to re-enact any law declared invalid by the Supreme Court and that upon re-enactment the law shall stand. This does not contemplate hasty overturning of Supreme Court decisions, nor does it contemplate the enactment of legislation over the head of the Supreme Court during a temporary wave of emotion or during any condition which might lead Congress to do what later might be regretted. It must be borne in mind that cases do not reach the Supreme Court in this way and that it would be little less than a miracle if the same Congress ever got the opportunity to act for the second time upon a measure which found disfavor in the Supreme Court.

The first child labor law probably reached the Supreme Court as rapidly as any law could ever reach that tribunal and was declared unconstitutional. The Congress which enacted the first law was not the Congress which enacted the second law. If there had been in effect a constitutional provision limiting the power of the Supreme Court, the following Congress could have re-enacted the act and it would have been the law of the land.

Every predatory and plutocratic interest in the Republic opposes the proposal to limit the powers of the Supreme Court to those functions obviously intended in the Constitution and adhered to by the court until the advent on the bench of Chief Justice John Marshall. Little else could be expected of General Dawes and little else could be expected of Calvin Coolidge than that they should align themselves with the desires of those great interests which feel as they always have felt toward the Constitution of democratic self-government.

General Dawes is a powerful banker among bankers, and he has been running true to form. He has no sympathy with the aspirations of the masses of the people and he could not be expected to have any.

Calls Coolidge Unenlightened.

The fundamental characteristic underlying all others in the make-up of Calvin Coolidge is that things are about right as they are and any notable change is nothing less than wicked. There need be no question as to the mental integrity of President Coolidge. He is doubtless sincere in his feeling for what he regards as an almost sacred institution. He has faith in Massachusetts, whose electoral vote he counts as assured, but his faith in the wisdom of the people of the rest of the country is unquestionably limited.

He is almost certainly deeply distrustful of the wisdom of those who live west of the Mississippi River. He has undoubtedly a puritanical desire for puritanical justice, but this desire is unenlightened by any understanding, either of the psychology or the requirements of the people of the country. So Calvin Coolidge inevitably must stand for what is, even though he is none too clear about how it came to be.

The question of depriving the Supreme Court of its final veto power is one which cannot be disposed of by so simple an expedient as that adopted by President Coolidge and General Dawes. Tagging it with adjectives not only does not touch the merits of the case, but it reflects a total inability to understand the case or to comprehend the determination of the people.

The issue is an issue in this campaign solely because the spokesmen of a great political party have seen fit to champion the cause of arbitrary and tyrannical power. It will remain an issue until the people are able to overcome and correct a situation wholly incompatible with Democracy and wholly intolerable to those who have faith in their power to govern themselves.

ALL BOROUGHS TO AID DAVIS-SMITH RALLY

LEADERS TO CONFER TODAY

Anti-Tammany Democrats Form a Davis League—Candidate to Visit Maryland Tuesday.

Arrangements were completed yesterday to have the Democratic organizations of all five boroughs of New York City participate in the ratification of the national and State tickets at Madison Square Garden on Thursday night, when both John W. Davis, candidate for President, and Governor Smith, candidate for re-election, will speak.

It was said this would be the first political meeting of this character ever held in New York City. George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany; John H. McCooey of Brooklyn, Sheriff Edward J. Flynn of the Bronx, Mason O. Smedley of Queens and Thomas W. McGinley of Richmond, the five Democratic county leaders, will confer today with Frank A. Carstarphen, Assistant District Attorney and head of the Democratic National Speakers' Bureau on Arrangements. It is expected that Madison Square Garden will be filled and delegations will attend from every Democratic district club in the city.

A meeting of local Democratic speakers will be held in Tammany Hall Wednesday night. This meeting will not be open to the public but will be for the instruction of the speakers on campaign issues, on which they will be addressed by Governor Smith and United States Senator Copeland.

A group of New York City Democrats, who have opposed Tammany in local elections, have formed the League of Independents for Davis. Joseph M. Price, who has been active in municipal fusion movements, is Chairman of the league, and Vincent Gilroy, who was the coalition candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen in 1921, is Chairman of its executive committee. Other officers are William Schneider, former County Clerk; Dr. Joseph P. Brennan, former President of the Irish-American League; Samuel P. Hyman, President of the Independent Democracy of New York, and Harold A. Content, former Assistant United States District Attorney. The league will have headquarters at the Hotel Belmont.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, who called at Democratic headquarters, reported that a State branch of the National League of Young Democrats had been organized in Ohio and was doing excellent work for Davis and Bryan.

Mr. Davis, who passed the night in his private car on the Pennsylvania station, went to his home in Locust Valley early in the morning and will remain there resting until Tuesday night when he will leave here for Frederick and Baltimore, Md., where he will speak on Wednesday. He will return to New York for Thursday night's meeting and will go into New England for a speech at Providence before starting on his second Western trip next week.

Frank L. Polk dined with Mr. and Mrs. Davis at their Locust Valley home last night.

WANT DEFENSE DAY AND ANOTHER JOINED

S. Stanwood Menken, President of the National Security League, yesterday sent a letter to President Coolidge urging that Defense Test Day be held annually, combined with Constitution Day, Sept. 17, the anniversary of the signing of the basic law. He believed, he said, that such an observance would do much to counteract pacifist agitation.

"At a meeting of the National Security League's Board of Directors, on motion of Lloyd Taylor, Chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Instruction," wrote Mr. Menken, "it was resolved to bring before your consideration the advisability of holding Defense Test Day each year in the future on the anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States, Sept. 17.

"We respectfully suggest that this would emphasize in the public mind the importance of the phrase, 'to provide for the common defense,' in the preamble of the Constitution. If Defense Test Day and Constitution Day were made one, both would have a deeper significance than heretofore, and the former would be brought closer to the people than when merely associated with the anniversary of a great military event.

FLIERS AT SEATTLE, END WORLD FLIGHT

The crowd that swelled the fliers at Volunteer Park was estimated at 50,000. Short talks were made here by Major Edwin J. Brown, Lieut. Gov. W. J. Coyle, Rear Admiral J. V. Case and Major Gen. Charles P. Norton, who represented President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks.

He said in part:

"The conquering by air for the first time in history of the hitherto uncharted air route over the Pacific Ocean by the perilous traversing of typhoon-swept areas of Japan and China; the pushing on through days of sweltering heat and tropical rains in Indo-China, Burma and India; and, after the comparative safety of Europe, the unflinching answering of the formidable challenge of the fog encompassed and icelocked stretches of the North Atlantic—these are facts that are dipped in an indelible dye—the nucleus of a story that will fire the imagination of old and young alike as long as appreciation of human accomplishment shall endure.

"The flight clinches beyond further dispute the argument for strengthening our national air forces. It also proves the urgency for commercial aviation, a branch related to our country's air defense. One of the most valuable features of our pioneer globe flight is that it has drawn the family of nations a little closer together.

"The encircling of the globe has been an acid test and a brilliant proof of expert flying and mechanical ability; it has meant the complete subordination of the individual to his task; the unflinching acceptance of terrific hazards; the overcoming of what appeared to be almost insurmountable difficulties. I can but reiterate our gratitude to you, our gratitude for bringing to America, the birthplace of aviation, the gift that it has rightfully inherited—world air prestige."

Flight Took 5 Months 22 Days.

The historic flight which ended today was started officially by four planes from Seattle at 8:30 A. M. on Sunday, April 6, under command of Major Frederick L. Martin in the flag plane Seattle, and was completed in five months and twenty-two days by two of the original machines and the Boston II., a spare air cruiser sent to Pictou Harbor, N. S., for Lieutenant Wade, whose machine was wrecked near the Faroe Islands on Aug. 21.

The personnel of the flight included Major Martin, commander, and his mechanician, Staff Sergeant Alva L. Harvey, who were missing for ten days after the Seattle was wrecked on April 30 on a mountain in Alaska and they were forced to quit the expedition; Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, commander after Major Martin's accident and pilot of the flag plane Chicago; Lieutenant Erik H. Nelson, pilot of the New Orleans; Lieutenant Leigh Wade, pilot of the ill-fated Boston, and Lieutenants Leslie P. Arnold, John Harding Jr. and Henry H. Ogden, mechanics.

The route of the aviators traversed or touched twenty-one foreign countries and twenty-five States and one Territory of the Union. A total of fifty-seven hops were made, with an average of 483 miles to each jump.

With each air cruiser consuming twenty gallons of gasoline in an hour of flying, the three planes used, in approximately 351 flying hours, 21,060 gallons. Each plane used about thirty gallons of oil every 2,400 miles.

Army to Reward Aviators.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Arrival of the army world fliers today at Seattle, officially completing the first air circuit of the earth, will be followed by the preparation of a report by them from which valuable data will be extracted, for the benefit of all Government agencies having to do with aeronautics. In this way their experiences and the lessons they learned will be made available not only to their brother officers but to the Navy, Post Office and other departments engaged in phases of aerial navigation, both military and commercial.

Agencies interested in the scientific results of the flight today said its real value would be found, not in historical reckoning but in the scientific account of the aviators' experiences.

Major General Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, declared it was the intention of the War Department to do everything in its power to compensate the aviators fully and Secretary Weeks also is pledged to see that they are treated in accordance with the broadest reach of the law and army regulations regarding promotion and financial considerations.

The War Secretary has stated his intention to have the fliers repaid for any personal financial loss either by the department or by special authorization of Congress. Should these fail, he has said he would dig down into his own pockets.

Round World Records Shattered.

Four world records were shattered when the army planes completed their 27,000-mile flight.

The first was broken when the Americans crossed the Pacific Ocean from Attu Island to Paramushiru Island in the Kurlies of Japan. This 900-mile stretch was the longest jump of the entire trip. It was made in twelve hours and five minutes of flying time. The second title came when the fliers crossed a 500-mile stretch over the China Sea from Kagoshima, Japan, to Shanghai, China. This was the first time the China Sea had been crossed by air. The third honor was the completion of the round-the-world flight, a feat never before achieved by man in heavier-than-air machines.

Lastly, the intrepid Magellans of the air theoretically set a speed mark for traveling around the globe. The entire 27,000-mile trip was made in approximately 366.74 hours of actual flying, although the expedition was on the trip nearly 150 days after leaving Seattle.

When the birdmen reached Constantinople, Turkey, they had covered 16,180 miles in 225 hours of flying, or an average of 76.36 miles an hour.

By encircling the globe in the flying time of fifteen days, six hours, the army aviators surpassed the notable feat of John H. Mears, who, in 1913, went around the world by ship, train and other modes of travel in thirty-five days, twenty-one hours, thirty-six minutes. He had broken the records set by Nellie Bly, who, as a reporter, in 1889, circled the globe in seventy-two days, six hours and eleven minutes; by Henry Frederick, who, in 1903, cut her time to fifty-four days, seven hours and two minutes, and by Andre Jagger-Schmidt, who encircled the earth in thirty-nine days, nineteen hours, forty-two minutes and thirty-eight seconds in 1911.

For the 27,000-mile flight of the army officers special Douglas air cruisers were built in California. Each was driven by a 400-horsepower Liberty motor and had a cruising radius, with auxiliary gasoline tanks, of 1,500 to 2,000 miles. They were the only planes of their type in the world.

Attempts of Other Nations.

Aviators of three other nations made attempts last Summer to fly round the world.

Major Sarmento De Beires and two other Portuguese officers flew from Lisbon to Macao, wrecking one plane, replacing it and landing the other in a cemetery whence they could not take off and where the machine was dismantled.

Major A. Stuart MacLaren and two other British soldiers left Calshot, England, March 26, in one plane, but a new machine into service at Akyab, India, and wrecked the latter by hitting a heavy sea when trying to avoid a small island in alighting near Nikolaid Bay on August 3.

Major Pedro Zanni of Argentina started at Amsterdam, July 26, and at last accounts was pushing his way through the Orient, intending to follow the route of the Americans in the reverse direction.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PILOTS.

London Times Expects More Attempts to Equal Feat.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Paying tribute to the American airmen for their round-the-world flight achievement, The London Times says:

"It can hardly be supposed that there will not be fresh attempts, but the glory of being the first will remain with the Americans.

"Nor should their achievement be judged too narrowly by utilitarian standards. The challenge thrown down by the sphericity of the earth was bound to be answered by airmen as it was generations ago by seamen. As a provocation it is like that of the North Pole or of Everest. It is a world to conquer."

JAPANESE IMPERIL LEAGUE PEACE PLAN

body understands as referring to the immigration problem, should be considered calmly by a subcommittee. A motion by the French to this end was accepted by the Arbitration Commission.

Japan offered her amendment after a day of fruitless private conferences. Viscount Ishii consulted with M. Briand, M. Loucheur, Sir Cecil Hurst and other leaders, but no one was able to find a formula acceptable to the Japanese.

A look of surprise came upon the faces of many of the delegates when both M. Politis of Greece, and M. Rolin of Belgium arose and defended the Japanese proposal.

M. Politis, a jurist, who is framing the commission's report on arbitration, argued that the protocol as it stands closed the door too violently on a State against which domestic jurisdiction is opposed before the World Court. He thought it was presumptuous to assume that by accepting the Japanese suggestion they would be making war legal. This was far from true, because all war was illegal under the League Covenant and the protocol, and by the famous Article X. of the Covenant all the members of the League undertook to respect and preserve the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all the other members.

M. Politis declared they could not refuse the Japanese the right to bring their conflict before the League Council, even after the World Court had thrown the matter out of court on the ground that it concerned entirely the question of internal jurisdiction. That was what the Japanese wanted, he said—the right to go on with an examination before the League Council.

M. Rolin, Belgium, argued that the question of the exclusive competency of a State was one which was going through a transformation, and so-called State's rights were not always clearly enough defined so as to justify a World Court decision which would bind a nation for all eternity. Hence it seemed to him desirable to leave the door open and permit any State to bring a dispute before the Council, even after the World Court had decided that international arbitration proceedings could not stand.

He believed it excessive to declare that Japan or any other State was an aggressor and subject to sanctions if it declined to abide by the Court's decision. He was convinced that the Japanese had no intention of going to war, but merely wanted an opportunity to argue the justice of their cause before the Council of the League of Nations.

M. Loucheur of France then arose and said that the decision about to be taken was grave and the hour dangerous for the success of the work on which they were engaged. He moved that the Japanese amendment be sent to a subcommittee for study.

"Let us not hurry our decision," he said. "Above all things, we want to keep the friendship of our Japanese friends."

The so-called "aggressor" article of the protocol against which the Japanese fought was also attacked vigorously at the closing of the discussion by M. Ossuky, the Czechoslovakian Minister to France, who formerly lived in Chicago.

Signor Scialois, Italy, favored sending the entire protocol for technical examination to the experts, thus increasing the atmosphere of doubt surrounding the closing work of the commission.

The article, which originated with the American group under Professor Shotwell, says that every State which resorts to war in violation of the covenant or protocol is an aggressor. In the event of hostilities having broken out, any State shall be presumed to be an aggressor unless the decision of the Council, which must be taken unanimously, shall declare otherwise, when it refuses to submit a dispute to a pacific settlement as provided by the covenant and protocol.

It then proclaims as an aggressor a country which refuses to accept the decision of the World Court that a dispute has arisen out of a matter solely within the domestic jurisdiction of the other State. This is the amendment which the Japanese wish suppressed.

The French motion was adopted after M. Adachi had voiced the conviction that the sub-committee would uphold the Japanese contention. Owing to the strong position taken by the Japanese, Geneva passed through the most hectic day since the opening of the present assembly. The protocol of arbitration and security will be presented to the Assembly preceded by a resolution, and under the rules all resolutions require the unanimous vote of the States present and voting.

Fear Japan Will Block Protocol.

Fear was expressed that the Japanese would block the project for the submission of the protocol to the Governments by voting against the resolution. Another apprehension was that if Japan was seconded by Italy as an opponent of the protocol the projected conference for the reduction of armaments would never be held, and hence the whole peace fabric woven at Geneva would collapse. The protocol requires the ratification of three out of four great powers represented on the council—Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan—before the disarmament conference can be held. According to reports in circulation among the delegates, Italy, India and Poland, being countries desirous of outlets for emigrants, were likely to support Japan.

Japanese Position Explained.

A member of the Japanese delegation made the following statement to the correspondent of The Associated Press:

"We are determined in our opposition to the protocol as it now stands, because it puts Japan in a most unfavorable position. Japanese public opinion will never permit the Government to subscribe to a document which closes the door on us and virtually makes diplomatic negotiations impossible on subjects which the World Court decides are solely within the national jurisdiction of a State with which we have differences.

"What we particularly object to is that Japan would be proclaimed immediately an aggressor State if she declined to abide by an arbitral decision which declared that the dispute had arisen out of a question domestic in nature. It is not only the question of immigration with the United States. When you consider how the Japanese are mistreated in South Africa, we are treated very well in the United States as a nation; for in South Africa the Japanese are even forbidden accommodations in hotels.

"The immigration problem with the United States is serious, and has aroused the Japanese public, but there is a vast variety of other problems affecting the Japanese which other nations might placed concern solely their national sovereignty, and hence are not subject to international arbitration. The Spanish-American War sprang out of the administration of Cuba. Tomorrow Japanese may be murdered by police in China and other countries, and the plea of State sovereignty can immediately be put forward as a reason for non-submission to arbitration.

Prefers to Stand on Covenant.

"Instead of accepting the protocol, which aggravates the stipulations of Paragraph 8, Article XV. of the League Covenant, we would much rather stick by the Covenant without changing it, even if it does not completely satisfy us."

The speaker was referring to the Covenant clause which provides that if a dispute is found by the League Council to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of the State complained of, then the Council shall so report, and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement. He continued:

"That permits diplomatic negotiations; the protocol prevents them. Yet diplomatic negotiations should be encouraged, not hindered. It is merely want the Council of the League to continue its efforts at mediation, even when the World Court rules that a conflict is the outgrowth of a 'domestic question.'"

The Japanese spokesman concluded by saying that Japan was embarrassed because the United States would probably not be a signatory to the protocol, hence the protocol would have no power as regards the United States.

Provisions of the Protocol.

While leading delegates were hurriedly holding a private conference in an attempt to save the situation, M. Politis, former Greek Foreign Minister, was reading the illuminating reports summing up the significance of the protocol at a plenary session of the Arbitration Commission. In ruling on the Japanese difficulty he explained the machinery of arbitration when one party to a dispute claimed that the conflict arose from a question purely domestic in nature. The arbitrators take the advice of the World Court, he said, for the question involved is a legal question, on which a juridical opinion must be obtained.

Unlike other opinions requested of the Court, explained M. Politis, the opinion of the Court in such case is compulsory, because if the Court recognizes that the question in dispute falls entirely within the domestic juriadiction of the State concerned the arbitrators will simply have to register this conclusion in their award. If, despite this finding, any State goes to war, then it becomes an aggressor.

M. Politis described the Covenant of the League as creating a wall of protection around the peace of the world, but as failing to close the circle sufficiently so as to leave no possible opening for war.

Arms Control Plan Adopted.

The League of Nations today published the text of the draft of the organization which will be followed in making investigations of the armament situation in Germany, Bulgaria, Austria and Hungary when the time comes to transfer arms control from the interallied board to the League of Nations.

The Council of the League of Nations has now given preliminary consent to this scheme, which will probably be confirmed at a later public meeting. The text shows the investigation will be on a broad scope and that it can be held at any time.

It will affect the demilitarized zones mentioned in the Treaties of Versailles, St. Germain, Trianon and Neuilly and will apply to legislation, such as military laws and budgets; armed strength, material existing or under construction, including aeronautical material and munitions implements, and all training for war and new warship construction.

Any Government a member of the League of Nations may send in reports that are likely to justify investigations. Germany's neighbor States may have a place, in a consultative capacity, on the League's permanent Military Commission, which shall supervise investigations.

This commission will draw up a list of experts who will actively conduct the investigations. The experts will select representatives from States on the Council of the League of Nations. Voice also is to be given to German border States, for the Council may select an expert from one of these countries. Citizens of Germany or other affected powers cannot take part in the investigations.

In order to retain the element of surprise, the President of the commission of investigation need not disclose his exact objectives until the last moment, and the commission must confine itself to the establishment of facts.

The immediate result of the new scheme is that the Secretariat of the permanent League commission on military and air matters becomes a powerful bureau with numerous important duties. It must receive and collate the final reports of the interallied boards, the reports of the commission and copies of all military laws. It will receive from the Governments all military, naval and air information relative to armaments of the four countries and control and collate information concerning rules for discriminating between military and civil information.

Protocol Before French Cabinet.

THOMAS ASKS SMITH TO CLARIFY POSITION

Writes That Socialists Sympathize With Much of Democratic State Platform.

BUT OBJECTS TO OMISSIONS

Repeats Report That Carew Sought La Follette Endorsement of Governor's Candidacy.

The Rev. Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Governor, has written to Governor Smith that Progressives and Socialists were in sympathy with much of the Democratic State platform. He asked the Governor, however, to state more fully his attitude toward the use of injunctions in labor disputes, the housing problem, minimum wage legislation, the distribution of water power and the co-ordination of national and State action in dealing with public utilities are natural monopolies.

Mr. Thomas also repeated a report published in The New York Evening Post that Representative Carew had sought a La Follette endorsement of some kind for Governor Smith's candidacy, and asked the Governor how he could seek the endorsement of both La Follette and Davis.

Text of Thomas's Letter.

The Socialist candidate's letter follows:

The Hon. Alfred E. Smith, Executive Mansion, Albany, N. Y.

My Dear Governor Smith: With much of the platform which the Democratic Party adopted at your behest Progressives generally, including Socialists, are in sympathy, despite our differences in political and economic theory. There are certain omissions in that platform, however, and certain questions with regard to your own attitude that I think you might well clear up in justice to the public, and particularly in justice to those labor organizations which in the past have supported you. I shall for the present only mention some of the most obvious.

1. Injunctions—You propose that no injunction shall be issued in labor disputes "without reasonable notice and without first having a hearing to establish the facts." This would strike at one of the present evils of injunctions, but at only one. It would still be possible to issue blanket injunctions and to sentence men to jail for contempt of court for acts that ought to be tried by jury under criminal law. Will you join with me in recommending a more drastic dealing with the injunction evil, even if such a process is found to require an amendment to the State Constitution or a curtailment of the powers of the Federal Supreme Court, which has heretofore declared unconstitutional anti-injunction legislation? Your present recommendation falls short of labor's just demands. (And this, by the way, is not the only instance in which labor has found ground for complaint. There is also the failure of the platform to recommend the exclusion of private companies from writing workmen's compensation insurance.)

Questions Governor on Housing.

2. Housing—Your platform makes no suggestion for the provision of adequate housing in the great cities for families of small means. It recommends municipal control of public utilities. Why not of housing? A program of housing, it seems to the Socialist Party and to me, requires municipal aid and the adoption of a plan involving the cooperation of building trade unions, manufacturers of building material and tenants' cooperative societies. Your own commission has exposed the enormous evils of the present situation. What are your constructive suggestions?

3. Minimum Wage—Your platform declares in favor of a minimum wage board "with power to recommend the minimum wage for women and minors in industry." Why not with power to fix a minimum wage? Is it because you fear that such legislation may be declared unconstitutional by the Federal Supreme Court, following its decision in the District of Columbia case, or is it because you do not believe in so moderate a measure of social legislation as an effective minimum wage law for women and children? If you fear the court, what remedy have you to offer for that situation?

4. Super-Power—I agree with you on the necessity of State development of water power. But that is not enough. There is the problem of distribution of such power; there is the problem of the existing companies which are rapidly creating a private monopoly of super-power derived from water and from coal which crosses State boundaries. To deal with the situation requires more than State development of hydroelectric power; it requires a publicly owned system with proper coordination of Federal, State and municipal agencies. Do you accept this principle? And can you guarantee from your own party somewhat warmer support than you had last Winter from Senator Walker, the Democratic leader in the upper house?

Asks About Cooperation.

5. The need for a national as well as a State program of dealing with public utilities and natural monopolies is evident from a consideration of your proposals with regard to public utilities and water power. From another angle the need of cooperation is necessary from a consideration of the power of the courts in the matter of injunction and social legislation. How can this co-ordination be attained by the Democratic Party, with you as the head of the State ticket and John W. Davis as head of the national ticket? How can it be attained by a party which drawe its greatest strength from the Southern States, which refuses even to ratify the Child Labor Amendment?

This leads me to my final question: According to The New York Evening Post of Sept. 24, Representative Carew was recently in Washington seeking a La Follette endorsement of some sort for your candidacy. On issues of economic emancipation and the proper limitations of the power of the courts the Democratic Party nationally is as far removed from the Progressive cause as the Republican. It is necessary to choose. I do not see by what logic any candidate can himself endorse or seek the endorsement of both La Follette, the Progressive, and Davis, the Wall Street lawyer. I do not see how he can permit his friends to seek such endorsement.

Believe me, sincerely yours,

NORMAN THOMAS,
Socialist Candidate for Governor.

Record Issues Challenge.

George L. Record, Independent-Progressive candidate for United States Senator, yesterday challenged Walter E. Edge and Frederick W. Donnelly, Republican and Democratic Senatorial nominees, respectively, to a series of joint debates on the questions which La Follette and Record declare to be the principal issues in this year's election.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT IN WAR MEMORIAL

GOURAUD RECALLS BATTLE

PARIS, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—"My countrymen will be deeply touched that one of the soldiers crowning this monument is an American and that the sculptor chose as his model a man who bore a most honored name, Quentin Roosevelt," said Sheldon Whitehouse, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States Embassy, at the unveiling today of a monument on the spot where once stood the famous Navarin farmhouse.

"There could be no better proof for posterity of the strength of Franco-American friendship," Mr. Whitehouse added, "than the inscription on this monument regarding the American divisions which fought with their French comrades in arms under command of that gallant soldier, General Gouraud, for it shows our willingness to die for the same ideal."

Mr. Whitehouse expressed the regret of Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador, at his inability to be present. Mr. Herrick is in the United States.

The monument consists of the figures of three poilus, fifteen feet high, one a scout, one a grenade thrower and the other a machine gun man, the latter having the features of Quentin Roosevelt. Each man is depicted in action.

The monument has a sixty-foot pedestal of rose granite. It stands on a hillock, dominating the immense battlefield extending from Moronvilliers to the Argonne, and was erected to commemorate the French and American soldiers who fell around Rheims.

The monument is visible for many miles, the war devastation having left not a single tree to shut off the view. More than 650,000 francs were raised in France and the United States to erect it.

At the unveiling General Gouraud gave a complete history of the battles that were fought in the vicinity of the shaft, in which he said 104 divisions took part. He went into details of the fighting that took place in July, 1918, when the last German rush was crushed. He paid tribute to the work of the American troops under his command, and spoke of his joy one day at the end of June in seeing among the reinforcements sent by Marshal Pétain "that fine forty-second Division, which was to take so great a part in the battle by our side."

Jacques Dumesnil, Minister of the Navy, representing the Government, thanked Mr. Whitehouse for his kindly expressions. "If we salute our French dead," said the Minister, "we salute also with the same grateful tenderness, I won't say your dead from America, but again our dead."

"We shall never forget," the Minister added, "that you, our allies of yesterday and our friends of today, came to fight by our side because you loved France and judged her fine and deserving."

Among the countless flags of the veteran associations surrounding the monument were those of the American Legion and the World War Veterans. They were brought to the shaft by American uniformed soldiers and delegates of the Lafayette Escadrille.

Two other memorials were inaugurated today with impressive ceremonies, one to Scotch soldiers at Beau Hamel, in the Somme, where Marshal Foch unveiled a monument and building, the latter to be used as an amusement hall, and a building at Givenchy, given by the City of Liverpool in memory of many of the townsmen of that city who were killed there. The Lord Mayor of Liverpool was present at the latter ceremony.

The Flying Dutchman

It is the year of our Lord 1924. Yet we have with us, as had the phantom-ship of old, a company as singular as trod its decks—men of every country and in costumes of all kinds—a mistiness indescribable in the air, or a premature twilight in which all the figures look ghostly and unreal. The rigging has a musty odor and the whole craft smells like a ship-chandler's shop grown mouldy. Aloft, the sails are taut, yet the wind whistles but faintly with a sound as if it came from the creak of cordage in ships of Crusaders or of quaint old craft upon the Spanish Main, as if echoing through remote years—so far away it sounds. A lone figure crouches over the wheel, and the old, withered face of the pilot does not betray any curiosity or interest as to what breakers or reefs or pitiless shores may be lying in ambush to destroy the motley crew. Their faces wear the apathy of despair. There is no hope in their eyes; only a bitter, restless longing for the flash of distant spires, the sunny gleam of upland pastures, the undulation of purple hills. They seem to listen for the singing of birds and lowing of cattle and sigh for a land where there is no work nor tempest nor pain, and they shall be forever happy.

Fantastic characters sailing toward impossible bournes! Characters which, in every age, have ventured all the bright capital of life in vague speculations and romantic dreams! A ship that haunts the sea forever, with all sails set, driving onward before a windless gale, and is not hailed, nor ever comes to port!

The Ancient Mariner and the Radical party of to-day have the same destination.

CHRISTIAN'S DOUBLE TRAILED 24 HOURS

W. W. HEATON SUMMONED

Special to The New York Times.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—Harry J. George, who said he was a vacationist from Philadelphia, was under surveillance of State troopers for the last twenty-four hours here because of his unusual resemblance to George R. Christian, missing partner of Day & Heaton, the wrecked New York Stock Exchange house.

W. W. Heaton Jr., one of the partners, who arrived here at 10 o'clock tonight, said George was not Christian, but remarked the similarity in the appearance of the two men.

George took the mistake good-naturedly, remarking that nothing but good nature was to be expected from 225 pounds, the weight of both himself and Christian. He said he bore no ill-will because, "I never felt so important in my life."

George was taken into custody this afternoon by Troopers Theodore Enoch and David Trout, working with Detective Sergeant Fitzpatrick of Old Slip station, New York City, and a private agency detective. George was in an automobile at the time and became very nervous, explaining that it was "pretty hard on a man who came up here for high blood pressure."

Fitzpatrick, who himself arrived early this morning on a summons from the troopers, expressed doubts that George was the man. However, to avoid any slip, he wired to Mr. Heaton advising him to come on, to be on the safe side. On Mr. Heaton's arrival on the 10 o'clock train tonight, he and George were brought together at the American House. Mr. Heaton shook his head as soon as he saw the Philadelphian, and said:

"No, that's not our man."

George says he intends to finish out his vacation as otherwise it is a fine country.

George arrived here Sept. 12 and, failing to find a room at the hotel, was accommodated by C. R. Staples. When the Day & Heaton crash got into the papers from Sept. 18 on, Staples says that George seemed "jumpy" whenever the telephone rang. He would ask, "Who was it?" or "What did they want?"

George also took all the newspapers, which attracted attention, and Staples said that whenever he laid one down it was usually open at the Day & Heaton case. Staples then read the descriptions published of the missing partner, and observed that it also fitted George—both were stout, blond, well-dressed, wore glasses and were forceful talkers.

The State troopers felt this resemblance called at least for precautionary measures when Staples shared his suspicions with them. After trailing George all Saturday and Saturday night they notified the New York Police Department.

George would not discuss himself tonight nor give his business connections.

When Harry V. Day, one of the partners of Day & Heaton, was told at his home at 37 East Forty-ninth Street last night that Mr. Heaton's trip had been in vain he expressed disappointment at the failure of the quest. Mr. Day said that the one picture of Christian the police he found is apt to be misleading in that it makes Christian's hair appear dark, whereas it is a decided blond. The picture also shows Christian's hair quite full, whereas he is actually quite bald above the forehead, Mr. Day said.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWTON, N. J., Sept. 28.—Discovered crouching under a porch, Eranjelio Rojo, a Mexican Indian, was arrested at Ogdensburg last night and locked up in the Sussex County Jail here on the charge of murdering Michael O'Rourke, 45 years old, a miner of Ogdensburg, a short time before his arrest.

O'Rourke rode into the yard of his home at 10:30 P. M. on a blood-covered horse and fell to the ground dead. A knife had been plunged into his body just below the ribs. O'Rourke's son, Frank, summoned Sheriff Mackerley.

A neighbor of O'Rourke told the Sheriff a man was hiding under a near-by porch. The man in concealment was Rojo. On his right hand were blood stains. A blood-stained knife which Rojo admitted was his was found. The Sheriff reported the man was intoxicated. On O'Rourke's person was found a bottle of liquor.

RESCUED DRIFTING TO SEA.

Special to The New York Times.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 28.—The lookout in the Cape May Coast Guard station sighted signals of distress flying from the cabin cruiser Comfort, bound from Woodbury to Sea Isle City, this morning, and Captain Edward Scull and his crew put out in a boat through the heavy seas to rescue them.

The engine of the Comfort had gone dead on the way down the Delaware Bay and the boat was fast drifting to sea when it was sighted. The Coast Guards shot a line aboard the cruiser and towed her into Cape May Harbor. There they beached her because she was leaking badly.

Birkenhead Believes Anglo-American Understanding Possible.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Lord Birkenhead, speaking at Newcastle tonight, said that with the Anglo-Saxon population of the United States actually decreasing Great Britain could no longer depend on an understanding with that country for sentimental reasons.

He believed, however, such an understanding was possible and vital in the interests of the world and civilization, for they were almost the only two nations of whom it could be predicted that they were incapable of aggressive war and would do everything in their power to prevent other nations from waging aggressive war.

The Wares and Stuffs that We choose for this store are such as please the people who, in the course of years, have taught us the kind of things they like best. It is a pleasure to represent the clientele of this business.

It is one thing to make collections of articles of fashions and furnishings for educated people, such as our patrons are, and an entirely different matter to get up an ordinary gathering of stocks that would easily sell perhaps because of large profits possible.

We value very highly the privilege of preparing specialties in merchandise through our foreign and domestic offices.

We are in no sense speculators, but we are proud to provide as we do for our patrons.

Au Quatrieme Presents

French, English Italian and Antique Furniture and Decorative Objects

For the past five weeks Au Quatrieme has been working under the greatest pressure to cope with the unpacking of the daily arrivals of the shipments of fine pieces selected in Europe this summer. Literally every great transatlantic liner that has docked in New York since the middle of August has been laden with antique furniture—from England, from Italy, from France and from Spain—with Venetian glass and faience—with old Provençal and English pewter—with boiserie panellings—tempera wall paintings—and every sort of exquisite objet d'art et de vertu which the old world has to offer the new. All destined for Au Quatrieme. It is important to realize that the prices are exceedingly low, and that fine antique pieces in excellent condition may be bought for quite as little as modern furniture.

The Magnitude of the Presentation

Naturally no room or suite of rooms would hold purchases of such magnitude. They fill the entire floor of a great building, a floor so harmoniously arranged that one may walk from room to room, and from period to related period or style, with no sense of shock or disharmony. The fine English furniture and art objects alone occupy almost a quarter of this great space. The delightful French provençal pieces have a corner of their own. A corner very especially to be visited for things of distinctive charm and character, by no means to be discovered every day. So with the other French, the Spanish and Italian collections, grouped in carefully designed interiors, suggestive of their fortunate disposition in one's own home.

An 18th Century tempera wall painting of lovely classic boughs and waters in muted greens and blues, flanked by two painted Venetian pole lanterns, and seen through an arched doorway at the entrance to the Spanish House, is one of those distinguished arrangements which any discriminating person would come far to see. Two fine old globes, dated 1632 and signed by Greuter, placed on a superb carved Tuscan table, have another sort of interest. Yet these are but two decorative incidents among countless others.

As some one has said—When one comes to New York, one visits the Opera and—Au Quatrieme. Fourth Floor, Old Building.

The Foundation of Good Health

Very often bodily ailments can be traced directly to the feet, which, because of improper fitting shoes, are not able to correctly support the weight of the body. The foundation of good health, therefore, begins with a good foundation for the body.

JEWS CELEBRATE THE NEW YEAR 5,685

Orthodox and Reform Synagogues Are Crowded for Holiday Services.

NEW RABBI IS ELECTED

Dr. B. Fleischer Comes to Beth Hamedrash Hagadol With Reputation as an Orator.

The Jewish New Year—5685—began at sundown yesterday and was observed in every synagogue and temple of the city. The Orthodox Jews will continue the celebration through today and tomorrow, but the Reform Jews will end their observance tonight. Synagogue services will be held this morning, and the rest of the day will be one of home and social life.

Rabbi Morris Lichtenstein, leader of the Society of Jewish Science, at the holiday services at the Hotel Majestic last evening, deplored the controversy between Fundamentalists and Modernists, and compared it with the schism in Jewry between the Orthodox and Reform wings of Judaism.

"What is it," he asked, "that makes religious controversies in the same faith at all possible? Why is there bitterness, acrimony, intolerance, today as in centuries past, and all in the name of God? The answer is that men have not yet discovered a direct road to God. From the earliest days of history men have been groping for the right approach. And out of these efforts have grown dogmas and creeds. But these are man-made. God did not create them. If He had, He would have given one creed to all His children.

"But if creed and ceremony are but the by paths of religion, what, then, is religion itself? Religion, in its purest form, is man's acquaintanceship with God. It is man's consciousness of God's presence in everything that exists. In every form of reality—on earth as well as above, in the plant and in the stream, in the star and in the mountain, in the blade of grass and in man himself—that constitutes religion. Man's realisation of the universal immanence of God—that is religion. The God realization—not the God idea—is the true essence of religion."

New Rabbi Comes Here.

The Congregation Beth Hamedrash Hagadol, 60 Norfolk Street, learned of the election of a new rabbi in connection with its New Year's observance. He is Rabbi B. Fleischer, who has been for some time chief rabbi of the United Orthodox Congregations in Paterson, N. J. Dr. Fleischer belongs to the younger set of orthodox rabbis, and is regarded as an orator and a profound Hebrew scholar. A. L. Goldstein of 317 East Broadway, President of the congregation, is the head of a committee which is arranging for the installation of Rabbi Fleischer.

One of the temples which was crowded last evening was Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street. The congregation was estimated at 3,500. The Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman officiated, and on the platform with him was Ben Altheimer, President of the congregation.

The opening meeting this season of the collegiate branch of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America will take the form of a Succoth gathering on the evening of Oct. 15, in the Succah of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Seventieth Street and Central Park West. A large number of students from Adelphi, Barnard, Hunter, Columbia, the College of the City of New York, Teachers College and New York University are expected to attend.

In contrast with Rosh ha-Shanah, with its joyous spirit, will be Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement, which will be on Oct. 7.

SERMON HITS HIGHT CASE.

Reisner Says Church Is Unscathed by Sins of Its Leaders.

The publicity given to the murder of his wife by the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, Methodist pastor in Mount Vernon, Ill., is a tribute to the sacred calling, according to the Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Chelsea Methodist Church, 178th Street and Fort Washington Avenue. Dr. Reisner made this statement in his sermon there last evening. He declared that, after all, the 200,000 clergymen in this country were made like other men.

"The Church has always stood for reforms," said Dr. Reisner. "She must be a divine institution, or through the mistakes of her leaders and the terrible sins of some of her members she would long ago have been wrecked. The staggering blows she has received from within by the devilish lives of some clergymen as well as the undermining given her by others who trade to get votes and office would have killed any merely human institution.

"We must not get discouraged because church leaders wreck their lives. Only ghouls rejoice over the moral collapse of a clergyman. The disgustingly repugnant, brutal and devilish crime of an Illinois preacher has been played up by the public press to the utmost limit because it was the downfall of a preacher. There was no excuse for the downfall, and though the man's attitude is so unnatural as to suggest some type of abnormality, yet he should receive no more consideration under the law than any other human being. Sin is devilish under any skin."

The Servants of Relief for Incurable Cancer Have Received Magnificent Help for their plan of building a fireproof Home for 100 poor cancer patients at Hawthorne, Westchester Co., in the gift of $50,000.00 from a benefactor who, when St. Rose's Home in New York was needed, gave a great sum toward its property and building. We ask that at this auspicious time the friends of our cancerous friends will add to the fund, now amounting to $100,000.00, that a safe country Home may be built on this Westchester Hill. An Annex House is already finished, and working for 25 of the weakest among our men and women, which has been praised by Dr. W. B. Moodie, Dr. John L. Shelly, Dr. James J. Walsh (the noted lecturer) and Dr. Henry G. MacAdam of the Board of Health, for its ideas favorable for the comfort of the sick in air, light and commodious arrangements. Shall our Wooden Home be the chief reliance of these looking to us for a peaceful death?

Do you know such a man?

He is an active business man of broad experience.

Yet he has ample time to devote to taking care of another's estate.

He is a man of affairs.

Yet he is never absent when important questions (which constantly arise in the execution of a will or in the management of property) must be decided.

His experience has been primarily in the business field.

Yet he has such technical knowledge that he is able to cope successfully with all the complex problems involved in carrying out the provisions of a will.

Yet he is not liable to illness or sudden death.

CONTRADICTORY qualities! No human individual can possess them all. Yet on the health, on the time which he can devote to your estate—on the judgment, business experience and the technical knowledge of your executor or trustee—depends the safeguarding of the property you leave your family.

The Irving-Columbia is not an individual but an organization of specialists. This organization has had over a generation of experience in the settling of estates, large and small, and the handling of property of every description.

It has not only broad business experience and business judgment but also facilities and service developed especially for handling work of this character.

Many men are surprised to learn the moderate cost of Irving-Columbia service. Our fee as executor or trustee is defined by law—and is no more than that allowed an individual. In addition, our special facilities enable us to eliminate extra expenses which a personal executor or trustee must often incur.

Not being interested in the sale of securities of any type whatsoever, the judgment of the Irving-Columbia is at all times wholly impartial.

An officer of this Company will always be glad to talk over with you your personal problem or give any information you may desire.

We have prepared several booklets which explain clearly and simply important facts about wills and the handling of estates. They can be obtained on request at any of our offices listed below.

FOSDICK TO PREACH; SILENT ON FAITH

DECISION EXPECTED SOON

The Rev. Dr. George Alexander preached yesterday morning in the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street, of which he is the pastor. Dr. Alexander, who on Oct. 12 next will be 81 years old, in giving the announcements for this week said:

"Next Lord's Day we expect Dr. Fosdick to preach."

He referred to the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Baptist, a professor in Union Theological Seminary, who is the "special preacher" at the First Church and whose theology has long been under fire in the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

This was the only public reference to Dr. Fosdick, who is expected within the next few days to make known whether he will consent to become a Presbyterian, the last General Assembly in Grand Rapids, Mich., in May having asserted that the position of Dr. Fosdick, a Baptist minister, as special preacher in a Presbyterian church through five years was "an anomaly" and set forth its opinion that unless Dr. Fosdick could accept the Presbyterian Confession of Faith "the existing relation should not continue longer."

The Committee on the First Church of the Presbytery of New York, commonly called "the Fosdick committee," will meet this week and will report to the Presbytery at the first Fall meeting of that body, Monday, Oct. 6.

No one could be found yesterday at the First Church who was willing to be quoted as believing that Dr. Fosdick would seek to enter the Presbytery, but the desire was expressed that in some way he might still be retained as "special preacher."

Yesterday there were about 500 persons present, only twenty being in the gallery. When Dr. Fosdick preaches the edifice is crowded.

The 1923-24 Year Book of the First Church was in the pews yesterday, and in "Introductory Notes," which are understood to have been written by Dr. Alexander, the present situation in the church is discussed and the report from the Board of Ushers, of which William M. Kingsley is Chairman, tells of the difficulties of that body.

"The attendance at the many services the greater part of this season has exceeded that of any previous year," says this report. "Two hundred additional sittings became available through the widening of the doorway between the chapel and the church. These are filled as soon as the doors are open, and we may well ask, 'What are these among so many?' Waiting patiently in the line, with no hope of a sitting, hundreds of eager worshipers stand for two hours without complaint."

The "Introductory Notes" say:

"In our congregation the year has been one of uncertainty, disquietude and undesired publicity, yet one of substantial progress.

"Our annual report to the Presbytery indicates that the accessions to our communicant membership have been greater than in any year since the merger.

"We now suffer serious embarrassment from inability to provide sittings at the morning service for all of our more recent members.

"There is among us wide diversity of theological opinion, but harmony has prevailed and the church has been compacted together in a gracious fellowship.

"For some time past we have tried to discourage the attendance at Sunday morning service of people attracted to our church from a great distance in order that we may be in a position to meet the needs of our immediate neighborhood, which is undergoing a rapid change. Tall apartment houses are taking the place of modest homes and are making room for a vastly increased population.

"Many of the problems which our church is facing have received the serious attention of the Committee of Ninety-nine, which was formed a year ago for the purpose of enlisting the interest of the men of the church in its varied activities. One of its notable achievements has been the publication of The Church Tower, which has been conducted with great ability and discretion. The sermon by Dr. Fosdick included in each monthly issue has been a most attractive feature."

The Year Book shows that 46 persons were received into membership on confession of their faith, 92 were received by transfer from other churches and 3 were restored to membership. The total membership is 1,883.

THE SCREEN

A Stirring French Story.

THE RED LILY, with Enid Bennett, Ramon Novarro, Wallace Beery, Frank Currier, Rosemary Theby, Mitchell Lewis, Emily Fitzroy, George Periolat, Milly Davenport, Dick Sutherland, Gibson Gowland and George Nichols, adapted from Anatole France's story, directed by Fred Niblo; overture, introduction and march "Carmen," by Goy d'Or"; "Neapolitan Fancy"; "I Am a Parisian," by Frank Moulan. At the Capitol.

Charles Chaplin's influence evan over as clever a director as Fred Niblo is apparent in the latter's dramatic picture, "The Red Lily," which is sure to thrill and please many persons who see it at the Capitol this week. To us it is one of the outstanding film efforts of the season. The acting of the players is beyond reproach and the various situations are worked out with stirring suspense. One senses through this photo-drama the fact that it is obviously inspired by a French writer.

There is a striking fidelity to the locale about the settings, particularly the exteriors. While watching this picture one is taken to a French village and to Paris, the action and characterization exuding the atmosphere of France. "The Red Lily" is distinctly different from most productions dealing with the Apache theme. One sees the Seine from the embankment, a dull, dreary, uninviting body of water, spelling the misery of souls who have seen their moonlit shadows reflected on it.

The scene of the Gare de l'Ouest with scores of passengers and facetotums hurrying in different directions brings back memories of this railroad station, and the troubles that beset Marise la Noue (Enid Bennett) in the French metropolis are just those which might happen to any unsophisticated girl of comely appearance. The censors have evidently appreciated the artistic merit of this production, as they have been careful not to exclude or change anything that might interfere with the narrative.

It is the old story of suspicion and mistakes. Marise is a happy peasant girl in Vivonne, while Jean Leonnec (Ramon Novarro) is the son of the adamant Mayor of that locality. The Mayor furiously discourages any affection between his son and the girl. After Marise's father breathes his last, she discovers that she has to live with a sour, brutal relative, who eventually causes her to flee from his house. She and Jean sit up all night, the innocence of the stay being aptly depicted by Jean stretching his tired arm, which has held Marise for several hours. Suspicion is aroused, and the two decide to elope to Paris and get married.

The train speeding to the French capital is shown in very much the same way as Chaplin's train arriving at the French village station—by the idea of a train through shadows and lights. Marise and Jean are in a third-class wooden coach, and happy are the youth and the girl when they ascend from the train in the busy Paris station. Jean, kindly and thoughtful, tells his sweetheart to wait for him, but when he is only a few yards away from her he is arrested for a theft another committed. He pleads to return for an instant to the girl before they take him to Vivonne, but the detectives refuse. On the way to Vivonne, while Marise is waiting and waiting, hour after hour, on the wooden bench, Jean eludes his captors during a card game and springs out of the train. As quickly as possible he travels back to Paris, and just before he reaches the place where he had left Marise, she, tired and hungry, with hope abandoned for his return, slowly arises and plods her way out of the station. A second or so longer and her sweetheart would have found her.

Jean is a fugitive from justice and he goes to the Seine embankment some time afterward with the idea of ending his life. On a bench just behind him is Bobo (Wallace Beery), a scamp without a soul. Marise sits down on the same bench with Bobo, her back to him, not knowing, of course, that Jean is so near. Bobo, the thief always, slyly picks up the girl's purse and on opening it finds but 30 centimes. He drops back the coins and replaces the purse with a grim look of disgust. A minute later he changes his mind. He softly takes the purse and empties out the three two-sou pieces, and again slips the pocketbook along the bench. Marise arises and leaves, staggering along the embankment, while the rapacious and conscienceless Bobo steps up to Jean, with whom he speaks. Bobo had seen the two sweethearts within a few yards of each other, and never knew.

Jean resolves that he will always be faithful to his angel Marise and she, with greater difficulties flung in her path, resists all men. Long afterward one sees Marise, want having dimmed her eyes and seared her countenance, a young man, evidently bent on escaping the agents de police, appears before her, and she, without knowing him, invites him to hide in her squalid abode. They recognize each other in the light of an oil lamp, and Jean, mistaking her motive, becomes bitter and vengeful, going so far as to take her to an Apache dive, where he emphasizes his contempt for her by kissing the bedizened women in that lair of thieves and murderers. Then there is the Toad (Dick Sutherland), whose advances Marise resists in spite of his gorilla-like strength.

Miss Bennett gives one of the most remarkable performances ever seen on the screen in this production. Disappointment and despair are written on her wistful face, and she is just as able in her portrayal of the woman who would starve rather than disappoint the man she loved. Mr. Novarro, young though he may be, triumphs as the steadfast and temporarily disappointed sweetheart. Mr. Beery is, as usual, thoroughly capable as Bobo, for whom he elicits sympathy in the latter chapter. The others in the cast fill their roles efficiently.

The Prohibition Cocktail.

THE CITY THAT NEVER SLEEPS, with Louise Dresser, Ricardo Cortez, Kathlyn and Vondell Darr, adapted from Leroy Scott's novel, "Mother O'Day," directed by James Cruze; Helen Sherman, coloratura soprano, sings arias from "Pearl of Brazil"; "Danse Divertissement," by Lillian Powell; Riesenfeld's "Classical Jazz." At the Rialto.

After satisfying himself with his blazing success, "The Covered Wagon," James Cruze indulged his fancy by filming Harry Leon Wilson's farce, "Ruggles of Red Gap." Then he turned to satire and fashioned "Hollywood" and "Merton of the Movies." Now we see him in still another vein, as his latest production, "The City That Never Sleeps," is a varied melodrama of fifteen years ago and the present day. It was translated to the screen from Leroy Scott's novel, "Mother O'Day." The theme is interesting and quite logical as to argument. It tells the story of a girl who almost became a victim to prohibition cocktails, after having been taken as a child from a barroom to avoid the sight of drinking and its consequences.

Although this is indubitably a melodramatic effort, it is nevertheless a strong entertainment through Mr. Cruze's imaginative and clever direction. There are scenes of a decade and a half ago, when the corner saloons thrived through the thirst of thousands, which are faithfully produced. And, as a contrast to these, in the latter part of this picture there are sequences showing the modern cabaret in which intoxicants are not a secondary consideration. The first sequences are humble in character, with an ignominous saloon frequented by numerous types. It is kept by Tim O'Day, who is shot and killed before his wife and tiny daughter, Molly. Mrs. O'Day becomes known popularly as Mother O'Day. After discussing matters with her lawyer she decides to see that Molly is brought up in refined surroundings. Therefore she sacrifices her intense desire for her child and arranges to have Molly go to a Mrs. Kendalls for a rather exorbitant consideration. Mother O'Day (Louise Dresser) promises that she will never visit the child, as she is forced to keep her saloon going to make the necessary payments for her daughter's upbringing.

Prohibition ends the life of the saloon, and the woman who had been so long in this business becomes the proprietor of a high-class cabaret for those who don't want to sleep at night. Mark Both (Ricardo Cortez) happens to be one of the most frequent patrons of the new place, and among those he brings there is Mother O'Day's daughter, whose life is apparently mostly dancing, smoking and drinking. Both, believing the girl has money, evinces a desire to marry her. Mother O'Day discovers this and forthwith informs the unscrupulous Both that she knows that Molly is dependent upon others. To make sure that Kate is shorn up in his true colors before Molly, Mother O'Day makes herself look unusually attractive and lets fall an occasional remark concerning her own affluence.

The plot is well worked out, even to having a little newsboy who aspires to become a star reporter help Mother O'Day to rescue Molly, who never knows that the woman who constantly starves at her is her own mother. The way in which the recognition is brought about is quite dramatic.

Miss Dresser is charming as Mother O'Day, lending the rôle sympathy and dignity. Mr. Cortez is a plausible and effective Mark Both. Young Virginia Lee Corbin figures as Molly, a part which is well suited to her ability and appearance. As a child Molly is played by a clever little girl called Vondell Darr.

THE PLAY

By STARK YOUNG.

The Third Vajda Piece.

THE LITTLE ANGEL, a comedy in three acts from the Hungarian of Ernest Vajda, translated by John S. Vajda, adapted by J. Jacobus. Settings and costumes by Willy Pogany; staged by Hubert Druce; produced by Brock Pemberton. At the Frazee Theatre.

Sarah Bornemissza	Clare Eames
Stephen Toth	Edward Emery
Anita	Mildred Macleod
Dr. John Bornemissza	Moffat Johnston
A peasant girl	Elizabeth Taylor
A lawyer	C. H. Croker-King
Baron Pereny	John E. Brewer
Baron Pereny, Jr.	Robert Strange

Saturday night brought to town, under Brock Pemberton's hand, "The Little Angel," which, with "Fata Morgana" at the Garrick and Ina Claire's "Grounds for Divorce," makes three plays by Vajda to be seen in town. The new piece is an infinitely better comedy than the uncertain and wandering divorce play of Vadja's at the Empire. It is not nearly so good, however, as "Fata Morgana."

To "Fata Morgana," "The Little Angel" bears an interesting resemblance. The story and especially the theme are plainly from the same mind; the same technique and the same outlook on life. In "Fata Morgana," a boy of 18 is left at home, while the household goes away for the night. A city woman comes, she seduces him, she gives to the affair all the poetry and ideality of his youth. She departs with her husband. In "The Little Angel" a girl has fainted and while she was unconscious has been betrayed by a young Count, who thinks the fainting only the old ruse. Her family threaten to sue him and force him to marry her. Meanwhile the girl is to become a mother, though she does not know what has happened to her and is in fact the personification of utter innocence. After the marriage her family—which means the rich and strong-tempered old aunt—intends to divorce the couple and put the Count through the courts. Her innocence wins his love and he carries her off at last, in spite of the aunt, who ends by forgiving them.

The theme of these two plays, then, is alike. In one case there is the boy's idealism and romantic dream of love and beauty; in the other case the girl's innocence and tender dream of motherhood. In the boy's case the dream is shattered and at the same time lives on in a beautiful mirage, vision, illusion, if you like. In the girl's case, it reaches its culmination and perfection in her becoming a mother.

In both these plays there is something disconcerting to our minds. The theme of each is essentially tragic, wistful and a little cruel. There is something comic in these young souls stirring in the midst of a hard, dry, ordinary living, around them, fighting for their rights and hopes, broken, maimed, deceived and confused, but strong, nevertheless, with the life in themselves. For Vajda the situation seems easier. He does not seem to suffer at the crosspurposes and pain of these sections out of human social experience. He appears to understand and to hold himself to one side. He smiles at all of it, and in all the same time sends to the central figures of youth that carry the main thrusts of the events portrayed. Some disparity in the Hungarian attitude toward sex, compared with ours, attitude, is no doubt a part of our difficulty in approaching these dramas. A difference in gayety, too, in teeming spirits and upspringing vitality, takes the Hungarian art yet further away from us.

"The Little Angel" is far easier than "Fata Morgana," because of the solution for the girl and easier because the play is written more definitely as comedy. In parts it even approaches the intense extravagance of farce. And through this comic surface the author's intention becomes simpler for us than in the boy's drama.

Willy Pogany's room, with its very happy ceiling and his costumes, gave a good start to the performance. But the first twenty minutes were pretty slow, half the first act was gone before the audience began to cheer up. From then on things went better. But the playing on the whole lacks, except in spots, an exact following of the play's quality. The comic and the extravagant places, especially, needed to be acted as they are written, for points, for definitely witty points. In this respect Clare Eames as the aunt was very much the best of the players; she displayed a genuine wit in moment after moment. But even she often slurred the obvious intentions of the dramatist to make the parallels and artificialities by which comedy prospers. It is a mistake to try to reduce much of "The Little Angel" to the probable or natural. Miss Eames gave many signs of powers that could be let loose to run their course impishly through these scenes and keep our wits skipping with a tart delight.

The rest of the acting was only so so, compared with the possibilities of the play. Robert Strange needed more variety and conviction. Elizabeth Taylor did well with her two minutes on the stage as the peasant girl, and sometimes John Brewer put a hale and hearty light into the old baron. C. H. Croker-King's lawyer was stuffy and tedious, in a good rôle, too. Mildred Macleod gave the difficult rôle of the young girl a considerable effect of truth. On the whole, taking this comedy all in all, the tone of the acting should be about like what would be needed in Goldsmith, in "She Stoops to Conquer," for example, with a certain modern candor added.

It is not still too late and it is very much worth while to study "The Little Angel" for its precise genre and put this spirit and variety through the performance. Meantime it is more agreeable than most of the plays in town.

Conference on Forest Products.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—A call for a national conference on utilization of forest products, to be held in Washington Nov. 19 and 20, was announced today by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. About 2,000 invitations will be issued to leaders of the wood-using industries, consumers, building crafts and the general public. "By better ways of manufacture and use, the drain on the country's forests can be reduced by at least one-fourth," Secretary Wallace says in outlining the purposes of the conference.

GIANT RECRUIT FAILS AND PHILS WIN, 11-6

Greenfield Yields Seven Runs in Second and Crowd of 10,000 Sees Champions Lose.

WILLIAMS HITS 24TH HOMER

Harper Also Hits for Circuit, as Does O'Connell—Four Hurlers Fail to Stop Victors.

With the pennant nailed down for the 1924 campaign, Manager McGraw presented a couple of new faces to the 10,000 persons who gathered at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon, but one of the newcomers, a pitcher, proved easy for the opposition during his three innings on the mound, and when the game was over the Phillies were in front of the champion Giants by a margin of 11 to 6.

One inning, the second, in which the Phillies gave Kent Greenfield, a recruit from the New Haven Club, a warm reception, was enough to decide the game, for before the third man had been retired seven Phil athletes had crossed the plate. Greenfield was liberal with his hits in that fatal inning, yielding five, one of which was a homer with two on, but two misplays by his support did much to aid the Phils in piling up runs. The Giants will wind up their season today with a game against the Phillies.

The other new face was that of Crump, an outfielder from the Portsmouth club of the Virginia League. Crump showed much speed in the outfield, though he was charged with one error when he let a single get away from him, while at the bat he went hitless in five visits to the plate. Kelly, the Giants' all-around man, was allowed to take a day off, and in his place Jimmy O'Connell held down second base. A fumble by O'Connell in the second was useful to the Phils and helped in making Greenfield's stay rather brief.

The Giants did not take the game very seriously. It served more as a workout for the few regulars that got into action. Young in right, Wilson in centre, Jackson at shortstop, Terry at first base and Lindstrom at third were the only first-string men in action. Grover Hartley was behind the bat. He had an opportunity to look over the offerings of an assortment of pitching, for McGraw called upon four during the battle. Greenfield was followed by Huntzinger, then Baldwin, and Mann was working at the finish. Huntzinger and Baldwin were removed for pinch hitters.

Giants' Play Eased Up.

The game was much in contrast to those of the past week at the Polo Grounds. With the strain of one crucial series after another over, the boys merely "played" through the nine innings. McGraw did not switch from his usual plan of sending in pinch hitters when they could do the most damage, or from removing pitchers, but that big second inning took all the interest out of the pastime. Three homers were made, Williams getting his twenty-fourth of the year.

Art Fletcher started Wilbur Hubbell, a former Giant, but the Giants started to get too familiar with his slow ball, with the result that he was removed under fire in the third inning. A homer by O'Connell with a man on base paved the way for Hubbell's removal in favor of Couch. The relief hurler remained in the box to the end, though a number of times Fletcher seemed ready to remove him for another of his many emergency moundsmen.

The Phils got away to a fast start. With one out, Harper doubled and came home on Cy Williams's single over second. The next two were easy outs. The Giants lost no time in tying the count. Lindstrom was hit in the back by the first pitched ball. He went to third on O'Connell's single and scored on Hubbell's wild pitch. However, the next three men gave O'Connell no help and he was left on base.

Then came the deciding second. Jimmy Wilson, Phil catcher, who held down first base, started by getting a base on balls. The first of Ford's four safeties sent him to second. Wilson scored and Ford went to third on Henline's double to left. Hubbell grounded to O'Connell, and when Jimmy fumbled Ford scored. Henline reached third and Hubbell first. Henline scored, Hubbell reached second and Sand first when Jackson fumbled Sand's grounder. At this stage Harper made his second hit off Greenfield, a homer into the right-field pavilion, which brought the total to six.

Williams made the first out of the inning when he fouled to Terry. The bombardment continued, however, when Leach singled to left and Wrightstone walked. Wilson, up for the second time, singled to centre, Leach scoring and Wrightstone taking third. On the double steal Wrightstone scored while O'Connell held the ball, but Wilson was trapped between the bases and run down. Wilson singled to open the Giants' half of the second, but Jackson hit into a double play and the rally was stopped.

Champions Get Three Runs.

The Phillies were retired in the third without a score. Ford opened with a single, but died stealing. Henline followed with a double, but the next two men offered no help. Then it was that the Giants opened their attack, which was good for three runs. Bentley batted for Greenfield and singled. Lindstrom flied out, but O'Connell lifted a homer into the right-field stands near the foul line. Young tripled, and came home on Crump's sacrifice fly to Harper. Terry and Wilson singled, the latter hit off Couch, but the rally ended when Terry was trapped between third and home.

Huntzinger, who took up the mound burden in the fourth, escaped damage in his first inning, while Couch also blanked the Giants in their half. In the fifth Ford singled with two out and came all the way home when Crump let Henline's single get away from him. The Giants went down in order in their half.

With two out in the sixth William dropped a homer in the right field stands. Terry was safe on Wilson's error to start the sixth, but could not complete the circuit. The Phils were blanked in the seventh. The Giants replied with one. Meusel, batting for Huntzinger, singled to centre and moved to third on O'Connell's safe drive to right. Southworth, who replaced Young in the fifth, singled to right, Meusel counting, but that drive was the last of the inning.

The Phils were blanked in the eighth, but the Giants counted their sixth and last run. Wilson opened with a triple to right centre and came home on Terry's fly to Harper. Hartley was safe on Sand's error, and Lindstrom singled, but they could not score. Williams opened the ninth with a double and came home on two infield outs.

Southworth started with a walk for the Giants, but Crump lined to Sand and Southworth was doubled off first. Terry ended the game with a fly to Leach.

TIGERS-WHITE SOX IN 10-INNING TIE

Game, Halted by Darkness, With the Score 10-10, Will Be Played Off Today.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The Chicago White Sox and Detroit battled ten innings today to a 10 to 10 tie when darkness forced a suspension of what was to have been the final game of the season here. A victory would have given the White Sox a chance to tie Boston for seventh place, if Washington should defeat Boston tomorrow.

Tonight Manager Cobb of the Tigers agreed to play the game over tomorrow, giving the Sox one more chance to gain at least a tie for last place in the league. Never before have the Sox finished in the cellar.

Caught at the Plate

Jackson played through the game with an injured finger. The index finger on his throwing hand got in the way of a wild toss in practice. He had it well taped, but it was apparent that it was difficult for him to grip a bat.

Manager McGraw received much applause when he stepped two feet in front of the Giants' bench before the game to give the moving picture men a chance to work. His stay was brief, but it did not take the fans long to recognize him.

Bentley got a good workout in the third. He started for second on the hit-and-run play when Lindstrom rolled to Wilson at first. Wilson tried for a play at second, the ball struck Bentley on the shoulder and rolled to left field, Bentley dashing to third. The ball, however, was called foul and Bentley slowly retraced his steps.

The Giants are so well supplied with utility material now that a team of recruits and second-string men are likely to face the Phils in the final game on the schedule this afternoon.

McGivney and Tunney, who have been with the club most of the Summer but were not signed until a few weeks ago, may get a chance to make their debut.

Lindstrom made two sensational plays during the game. In the fourth inning he made a great running one-hand stop of Harper's grounder and got his man at first. Again in the seventh he caught Henline's terrific drive, being forced to retreat a couple of steps before he could regain his balance.

Lindstrom's work was the flashiest of the day.

YIELDS ONLY FIVE SAFETIES

Fans Nine Boston Batsmen, Bringing His Year's Total to 262—Stock Gets Four Hits.

The Brooklyn Robins brought their 1924 season to an end yesterday afternoon in one hour and twenty minutes at Ebbets Field against the Boston Braves. The concluding chapter of the Robins' season that saw them within a stride of the National League pennant wound up in a 5-to-1 victory, and this victory assured the Robins of one consolation, in any event: They will participate in the world's series, which starts Saturday, though not in an active capacity. They merely will figure in the classic to the extent of collecting second-place money.

With Dazzy Vance dazzling the Braves, the Robins galloped in with the game yesterday, and no matter what the Pirates may do they cannot prevent the Robins from taking down the second-place share of the world's series spoils. The fact that the Robins needed this game to clinch second place for them, and the added fact that Vance was due to hurl attracted some 15,000 fans to the scene of Brooklyn's late pennant fight. They did not come in vain.

Vance hurled a fine game, a game in which he pitched with infinite grace and excellent results until the ninth inning, when he let up and allowed a run to filter in via a homer by Thomas. One single was added after that, and previously there had been three one-base hits. Not a very hearty meal for the Braves, who aided so materially in putting the Robins out of the pennant hunt.

Vance Far in Front.

The victory was the twenty-eighth achieved this season by the big blond pitching ace of the Robins. Against these twenty-eight victories there can be chalked only six defeats, a record quite remarkable and one that puts Vance far out in front as the most effective and most productive hurler in the pages of his 1924 career. Vance added nine strikeouts to his list and brought the total for the season to 262. This number is just ninety short of the record set by Rube Waddell, but a mark at which present-day pitchers shy from for a long time without reaching. Last year Vance fanned 197 batters. This season he worked in a total of 308 2-3 innings, and in only one of these were as many as four runs made off him, and in no game he pitched, losing or winning contest, did he yield more than six runs, and these six were garnered off him by the Giants.

Yesterday he seemed on the verge of equaling or bettering his mark for successive strikeouts, which is seven. But he faltered after getting the fifth man in succession. Two of these batters, the last two in the string of five, were retired on three pitched balls each, and the seventh and eighth strikes in the string were put over on Bancroft before Davey dribbled to Fournier and broke the chance for a record.

The Robins were not long in setting upon the Braves. They started in the very first inning, and on a compilation of five hits scored three runs. High singled, was forced by Mitchell, and Wheat singled, to be followed by Fournier's double by Barnes, which sent over two tallies. Brown singled and Fournier counted, and Stock's succeeding single was wasted and the attack ended when Griffith hit into a double play.

Brown Crosses Home.

In the fourth, Brown singled and Stock singled him to third, and from there Brown counted when Griffith hit into a double play. The final Robin run trickled over in the fifth and was brought in by Mitchell, who singled and was assisted around on singles by Wheat, Brown and Stock, who made four hits in four tries. The Robins, with the bags loaded, ceased their activities when Wheat was caught at the plate on Stock's drive, making the third out.

Vance resided a single to Thomas in the first, a single to Tierney in the fifth, which he followed with three strikeouts, adding two more in the sixth, when he threatened his strikeout record. In the seventh the Dazzler permitted Southworth a single to Tierney. In the ninth Thomas lashed a drive into centre, which was none too hastily retrieved, and it went for a homer, and Bancroft followed with a single. A double play ensued, and then High camped under McInnis's pop and the game and the season were brought to an end for the Robins.

FRISCH AND GROH TO PLAY IN SERIES

McGraw Confident His Stars Will Be in Line-Up in First Game on Saturday.

TICKET PLANS ANNOUNCED

All Applications Must Be Made by Mail With Certified Check for 3d, 4th and 5th Games.

Now that their pennant worries are over, the Giants have started to make ready for the world series. They hope to have their full strength on the field by next Saturday, when the title games are scheduled to open. Manager McGraw said yesterday afternoon that he had every reason to believe that Heine Groh, the crippled third baseman, would be in condition to take his regular place. There is no doubt now, he said, that Captain Frisch will be ready. He could have played yesterday, if needed, but the Giants' pilot does not wish to take any chances on his captain until the big series starts.

While the final Giant lineup has not been selected, it most likely will take the field as follows, according to McGraw: Groh, third base; Frisch, second base; Young, right field; Kelly, centre field; Terry, first base; Wilson, left field; Jackson, shortstop. Gowdy and Snyder will share the catching work. At present Art Nehf is the logical choice to start, but nothing definite on the pitching choice can be expected until the day of the game, as the weather conditions will have much to do with it.

"I cannot say definitely at this time how the boys will line up, but I am counting on Groh and Frisch being in the game," said McGraw. "I hope to use the same lineup I had in the two-game series a few weeks ago against the Robins when the Giants showed strength. However, we have come through the tough part and we expect to be in shape for the world's series." McGraw does not intend to allow the team to be idle. The league season ends today but the Giants probably will be kept busy right up until the last day. The Giants will play in New Haven tomorrow, and in Bing Sing on Wednesday. It was the original plan for the Giants, in the event the Senators clinched the pennant, to play the Orioles in Baltimore on Thursday, but yesterday it was learned that the little world series between St. Paul, winners of the American Association pennant, and the Orioles would start in Baltimore on Thursday. While no announcement was made, it now is the belief that the Giants may play Waterbury, champions of the Eastern League, in Waterbury on Thursday.

In the event the Senators win, McGraw expects to arrive in Washington on Friday morning in order to give his men their first practice session on the Senators' field. If the Senators lose, it was said at they most likely would practice at the Polo Grounds on Thursday.

While McGraw is making arrangements for the playing of the games the business department of the Giants has not been idle. Yesterday Eddie Brannick, Assistant Secretary of the club, announced that applications for reserved seats for the world series games at the Polo Grounds now would be accepted. All applications must be accompanied by certified checks or money orders, the statement added. The tickets will be sold for the third, fourth and fifth games. The price for the reserved seat tickets for the first two games will be $16.50. The price of tickets for the upper stands will be $3.30 each, and can be purchased only on the day of the game at the park. The bleacher tickets will sell for $1.10 each, and they also can be purchased only at the park on the day of the game.

According to James Tierney, Secretary-Treasurer of the Giants, all applications must be made by mail. He said that it would be impossible to honor the applications made by telephone and requested that the mails be used.

The management already has received many requests for reserved seats, it was said at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

EPINARD TO LEAVE HERE WEDNESDAY

Ladkin and Wise Counsellor Also to Depart for Latonia on That Day.

INVADER'S CHANCES LIKED

Followers of Racing Believe Longer Distance in Special No. 3 Will Aid French Colt.

Ladkin, winner of the International Special at Aqueduct on Saturday, Epinard, the French colt which he beat by a nose, and Wise Counsellor which finished third in the big race, will be shipped on Wednesday to Latonia to take part in the third race of the series over the Latonia course on Oct. 11. It is doubtful, but not improbable, that Zev will be shipped this week. My Own, the Salubria Stable's colt, which ran fifth Saturday, will be a starter at Latonia as will My Play which will carry the colors of the Lexington Stable.

Interest in the third race of the series has been greatly increased as a result of the race on Saturday and speculation is rife regarding the French champion and his chances to win the final race of the specials and especially since the third and final race is over a distance of a mile and one quarter. It was generally conceded that at the finish on Saturday Epinard was going fast enough to have overtaken Ladkin in another stride or two. However, Clarence Kummer, who rode Ladkin, declares that Ladkin ran a race that was not apparent on the surface.

Kummer says that Ladkin ran badly for the first quarter of a mile, got his feet tangled up and could not get started right. Kummer, who undoubtedly outrode Haynes and O'Donnell, who had the mount on Wise Counsellor, first took Ladkin on the outside, then shot inside behind Epinard and finally brought him outside of Wise Counsellor, making a complete figure S before he finally got his mount straightened out. This, says Kummer cost round and cost Ladkin a good deal of his speed. Despite this Ladkin had enough to fight off Wise Counsellor, and run him practically out of the race and still have enough left to withstand the terrific challenge that Epinard made in the last fifty yards.

Kummer Gives Opinion.

Kummer is of the opinion that Ladkin ran the better race even though at the end he was tiring. Had he not been so long in getting into his stride Kummer believes the decision would not have been so close as it was.

However, there are many horsemen who believe that Haynes did not ride Epinard with the best of judgment. The incident which caused many to think that Epinard had been bumped is pointed out by those who have had a chance to analyze the situation as an indication of Haynes's poor judgment. Epinard was not bumped but was too suddenly taken back when Wise Counsellor moved over to the rail. Patrol judges, who were called to the stand to be questioned by the stewards after the race, declared that there was no bumping, but that Haynes suddenly took Epinard back as Wise Counsellor moved over to the rail and that the suddenness of this move by Haynes gave the impression to those in the stand that the French colt had been bumped.

Since Epinard faces his hardest test in the forthcoming race at Latonia and in view of the mistakes that Haynes made Saturday, the feeling has gained ground that he will not have the leg up on the French colt on Oct. 11. But efforts to question Pierre Wertheimer, Epinard's owner, and Trainer Eugene Leigh on this point were unavailing yesterday, as neither owner nor trainer could be located.

The aftermath of the race on Saturday has brought to the front again two other races in which Epinard was beaten with Haynes up, one in England, and it is a curious fact that in all three cases of the colt's defeat the defeats have been charged to the poor judgment of the jockey. Close followers of racing do not believe, however, that the loss of the first race here, that at Belmont Park on Labor Day, could entirely be laid to Haynes's account, as it is now realized that Epinard was not in his best shape for that tussle.

Haynes Gets Blame.

However, it is pointed out that in the Cambridgeshire, the English turf classic in which Epinard was beaten by Verdict, Haynes was blamed by the British turf writers, who declared that the weight the French colt carried would not have beaten him with a jockey of the calibre of Danny Maher, who was well known to British turf followers after his many seasons on the British tracks in the saddle.

Haynes, who is an American who had been riding abroad for about four years, is not used to riding on circular tracks, so it is admitted by his supporters, and it is contended that this had much to do with his ride on Epinard at Aqueduct on Saturday. In view of what has happened, itis contended by turfmen that Epinard will stand a better chance in the third international race if some other jockey is in the saddle.

My Play, which was defeated in the Latonia Cup on Saturday at Latonia by Altawood, which carried 111 pounds to My Play's 128, ran a fine race against one of the best three-year-olds running at Latonia, and his defeat is not taken as indicating that he is out of the reckoning in the third international race.

The third international race will have a value of $50,000, and the field that will face the French champion is quite likely to be the best he has met in this country. Beside Ladkin, Wise Counsellor, My Play and My Own, he is expected to have as contenders Black Gold, Princess Doreen and Chilhowee.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—Al Espinosa of Chicago won the Missouri open golf championship late today by completing the seventy-two holes of medal play with a score of 288. Jock Hutchison of Chicago was second with 291 and J. Farrell of Philadelphia and Leo Diegel were tied for third place with 295 each.

SARAZEN'S 66 SETS BRIARCLIFF RECORD

Special to The New York Times.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., Sept. 28.—Gene Sarazen, former national open and P. G. A. champion, set a new record for the Briarcliff Lodge golf course today in a best-ball match in which he and Dr. Frederick Steele of Canoe Brook defeated Jess Sweetser of Siwanoy and Richard Jones of Westchester Hills over eighteen holes, 4 and 3. Sarazen went around in 66, one stroke under the old record made by Henry Ciuci of Westchester Hills two months ago, and six under par.

Sarazen went out in 33, one stroke over par, but coming back he played astonishing golf, negotiating the nine holes in 28 strokes, seven under par. The former open champion, who lost his P. G. A. title only a few weeks ago, laid his approaches dead to the pin and took only a single putt on most of the greens, making a string of 3s and getting a couple of eagles.

Several exhibition tennis matches were held in addition to the golf, all for the benefit of the Westchester County Children's Association. Vincent Richards was to have met Manuel Alonso in singles but through unavoidable delay got here too late for the match. He and Harold Throckmorton paired in doubles against Zenzo Shimizu and Masanosuke Fukuda of the Japanese Davis Cup team and were leading them 3—1 in the frist set when darkness called a halt to the play. Dr. George King and Herbert L. Bowman previously had met the Japanese team and defeated them at 6—3, 6—7 and also took on Ralph Baggs and Elliott Binzen, losing to them at 6—4, 9—7.

JONES HAS BEEN STAR IN GOLF SINCE 1916

Robert Tyre Jones, the nineteenth man to win the national amateur championship, is now 22 years old, and has been in the limelight of golf since 1916, when, a mere boy of 14 and still wearing knee pants, he caused a sensation by his feat in setting the pace for a star field in the first half of the qualifying round of the championship, which was played that year at the Merion Cricket Club. He went as far as the third round, beating Eben Byers of Oakmont, a former national champion, in the first round, and Frank W. Dyer of Upper Montclair, later a metropolitan champion, in the second round, in the next round Jones lost to Robert A. Gardner of Hinsdale, 5 and 3.

Three years later Bobby appeared at Oakmont and, defeating Jimmy Manion, Gardner, Rudy Knepper and W. C. Fownes, a former champion, in successive matches, entered the final round against S. Davidson Herron of the home club. He lost to Herron by 5 and 4.

The following year Jones appeared at the championship held at the Engineers Club, Roslyn, L. I., and won the qualifying medal. He progressed to the semi-final round, where Dunlap beat him in a sensational round, 6 and 5. At St. Louis in 1921 Bobby defeated Clarence Wolff, one of the Mound City stars, and Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, but in the third round found himself pitted against Willie Hunter, the British amateur champion, and was beaten by 2 and 1 after a tense match.

At Brookline in 1922 Jones was one of the unfortunates who attempted to stem the Sweetser tide and he received his worst defeat in any championship event, Sweetser winning by 8 and 7. Last year at Flossmoor he was beaten by Marston in the second round, although he played nearly par golf. Jones had previously won the qualifying medal after a play-off against Evans.

The chief fame that has come to Jones until this year has been his record as a medal player.

His first appearance in a national open was at Inverness in 1920, when his four rounds were 78, 74, 70 and 77 for a total of 299, which gave him eighth place, four shots behind Ted Ray, the Englishman, who was the winner. At Columbia the following year the Georgian was 303, fourteen shots behind the winner, Jim Barnes of Pelham.

In 1922, at Skokie, Jones was second to Gene Sarazen, whose winning total was 288, against a total of 289 which was jointly made by Jones and John Black. The next year Bobby had a total of 296 at Inwood, tying him with Bobby Cruickshank for the open championship. After a play-off Jones won by virtue of a marvelous second shot to the home green, a long iron over a water hazard, for an easy par 4. Fuiek's shank taking a 6. This year he was in the thick of the fight right up to the last at Oakland Hills, but had to content himself with second place to Cyril Walker of Englewood.

WANDERERS IN TIE GAME

Defeating the Newark Football Club by 3 goals to 0 in the presence of 5,000 people at the New York-Indiana Oval, the soccer team representing the Indiana Flooring Company in the American Soccer League scored its third successive victory, yesterday afternoon. The New Yorkers clearly surpassed the Jerseymen in the first period, during which all of the three goals were shot. In the second half, the losers, owing to an injury to Fullback Hanlon, had only ten men and played a one-back game, causing much offside play, but no further scoring.

After twenty minutes of play Schylander negotiated Duggan's centre from the right for the first tally of the game. Immediately afterward, Carlson received a pass from Duggan and headed past Bowman into Newark's net. Two minutes from half-time, Duggan raced down the right wing and a perfect pass to Carlson brought in the third and last goal.

Nelson was the first to score for Brooklyn off a pass by Hogg on the right. Victory was almost within reach of the home team when Gibson's sharp pass to Cullen at centre enabled the latter to equalize for Philadelphia.

Many Promising Candidates Seek Berths on Lavender Team.

With two weeks of practice behind it, the City College football team today enters on its final week of work before its opening game against Stevens. The Lavender apparently has its chance of chances this year to wipe out the stigma of past defeats and to establish itself firmly in the football cosmos.

In place of the usual paucity of material, Coach Parker finds himself with several capable men contending for each position. Williams, last year's regular center, is fighting it out with Dreiband, former freshman, for the pivot position. MacAden, another 1927 lineman, who reported several days ago, shows possibility of displacing either of the two men who have been holding down the regular tackle berths to date. Lou Oshins, star of the 1922 team, probably will join the squad tomorrow and Coach Parker will be in a quandary as to where to place the flashy Lavender athlete. If Jason Cottin, the new man playing fullback, comes through, Oshins will be stationed at his former post, left end. Oshins and Captain Phildius should form a strong a wing combination as can be found anywhere in the city. In the other event Oshins will go back to his regular halfback berth to round out the crack backfield of Plaut, quarterback; Meisel, half, and Donstein, fullback.

The Lavender's aerial attack, always a weak department in form years, looks like one of its best points of attack this season. The matter of punting will fall to the lot of either Lou Oshins, who booted for the Lavender two years ago, or Cottin, who is also showing much promise in the line.

JOHNS HOPKINS IN SHAPE.

Squad Is Reported in Good Condition for First Game Saturday.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 28.—The Johns Hopkins football team, which spent three weeks in preliminary training and conditioning at Camp Coney on the South River, Maryland, is now working out at Homewood Field for the opening game of the season with Randolph-Macon College next Saturday.

The squad returned from its training camp in good condition, not a man being lost to the squad through injuries. There are several veterans available and the new men are showing promise. The championship of the State of Maryland is the goal set for the Blue Jay eleven and the chief contender for that honor is expected to be found in the University of Maryland team. The battle between the two in the Baltimore Stadium on Thanksgiving Day is expected to decide the title.

Johns Hopkins is captained by Magill, the veteran tackle, who is playing his fourth season as a regular lineman. Magill made the All-Maryland team in his freshman year and has been a tower of strength in the Black and Blue line. Taylor and Turnbull, backs; Magill, Day, Levy, Slowik, Milinausky and Berndt, linesmen, are all regular members of last year's squad. The new men who show promise are Oles, Kaufman, Conant, Biddison, Schwarts, Leipensberger, Blandy and Lawrence.

Spalla Keeps European Title; Outpoints Vanderveer in Milan

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—Erminio Spalla, heavyweight champion boxer of Europe, today retained his title by outpointing Piet Vanderveer of Holland in a twenty-round bout. An enormous crowd witnessed the battle. Vanderveer at the start went on the aggressive. During the bout there was much infighting, with honors shifting until the last round, when Spalla tore in and by his vigorous work won the referee's decision amid vociferous cheering.

HARD WEEK AHEAD FOR BIG TEN TEAMS

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—One Conference contest and two intersectional games with Missouri Valley leaders, head the program for Big Ten football teams this week. Three conference teams already have had formal tryouts against lesser known elevens, and will meet stronger opponents next Saturday.

Purdue and Ohio State will meet at Columbus in the first Conference game of the season, but the Illinois-Nebraska and Chicago-Missouri games, testing the Big Ten and Valley Conference football strength, are attracting greatest attention. Purdue already has one victory over Wabash, but this is Ohio State's first game.

Minnesota will take on North Dakota, a team defeated Saturday by Wisconsin, 25 to 0, and the result is expected to show the strength of the Gophers.

Despite the drizzle which lasted throughout the North Dakota-Wisconsin game, the Badgers completed a number of passes and discovered a sterling quarterback in Boyle Harmon, who got away for several long runs. Wisconsin meets Iowa State next Saturday, and has still another minor opponent before meeting Conference elevens.

Michigan, switching to a new team for its opening, Miami, instead of Case, also has one more easy opponent, and then six Conference games on successive Saturdays.

Illinois, with "Red" Grange, the outstanding star of the Big Ten last season, looks forward to another victorious year, but Nebraska is expected to prove a formidable opponent.

The Missouri Tigers will inaugurate a heavy schedule at Chicago, with Coach Stagg lacking in veterans. Two star ends were put out for the season by injuries in practice, and the back field will need considerable shifting before a strong offensive combination results from the second string men of last year.

Iowa makes its début Saturday against the Southwestern Teachers of Oklahoma, and is favored with almost the same team which represented the Hawkeyes last year except the tackles. The veteran four in the back field, barring injuries, are expected to carry Iowa well up among the Big Ten leaders.

Indiana, with a 65-to-0 victory Saturday, meets Depauw for a further seasoning before facing the Big Ten schedule. Northwestern has turned intently to the passing game, and will try it out against South Dakota next Saturday.

Notre Dame meets Lombard Saturday and another minor team next week. Notre Dame then takes on the Army and Princeton on successive Saturdays in the East, followed by Georgia Tech, Wisconsin and Nebraska.

By the margin of about two feet the eight-oared crew of the Metropolitan Rowing Club yesterday defeated the First Bohemian Boat Club eight on the Harlem River, in the first of the series of rowing races for the New York Rowing Association Challenge Trophy. The event was held over a course from the 145th Street bridge to a point off the Bohemian anchorage.

The second race is scheduled for next Sunday when the Metropolitan eight will oppose the Nonpareil Rowing Club. The New York A. C. also is expected to enter a crew in this race.

HARVARD VETERANS IN OPENING GAME

TEAM EXPERIENCED ONE

Eleven Has Last Year's Substitutes to Fill Places of Stars Lost by Graduation.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 28.—A team of experienced players, although not all of them former varsity men, will wear the Harvard colors against University of Virginia when the football season opens here next Saturday afternoon. The Crimson squad at that time will have had the advantage of three weeks of practice and the players have been scrimmaging since last Wednesday.

Of this team Captain Greenough, Spalding, Hammond and Gehrke are former letter men, Gehrke on the 1922 team, where he played the fullback position, and the other three for the past two seasons. Adie, the Bradford twins and Theopold were members of the 1923 varsity squad, Nash and Chase played last year on the scrubs, while Miller is a promising prospect from last Fall's freshman team.

Fisher Has Fighting Team.

Unlike the situation last year when a veteran line assured of its tenancy unknowingly let down, the players are now fighting tooth and nail to win a regular job, which objective will probably not be reached until the season is nearing the end. This spirit keeps the players at a fighting pitch and the coaches are counting on it to bring the team over the rough spots to a successful season.

With Spalding at the helm conservative football should have the call the opening game at least. Much has been said about what Harvard is doing to revamp its mode of backfield play and end performance, but as far as the attack is concerned probably nothing definitely can be established until after the earlier games.

Keith Dunker, the veteran lineman, whose illness with a slight attack of diphtheria caused the whole squad to be inoculated, will be available within three weeks, and this should help the team just at the time a stronger front will be necessary. Joe McGlone, whose knee operation has prevented serious work on his part, should be in readiness about that time also.

Good Material on B Team.

On the Team B, or reinforcement eleven, are John Hitch and Len Robb, the sprinter, as ends; Bayard Kilgour and Captain Leo Daley of the 1293 freshman team, Gene Daniell of last year's varsity and B. R. Taylor, making up the tackles and guards, with Ernie Gamache at centre. Jake Stafford, ineligible since his freshman year, is the quarterback, with Nat Howe, Art Rogers and Jack Maher forming the backfield triumvirate. Howe, Maher and Rogers were varsity squad men last Autumn.

The only 1923 letter man on Team C is Dolph Cheek, who was a regular all last Fall. The coaches are trying him as a quarterback, and he is dividing his time there with Issy Zarakov, spectacular running back on last year's freshman team. It is this move that has caused critics to maintain that Harvard plans to use a four-man backfield attack team later on, taking the pressure of handling the ball constantly from the quarterback by using direct passing. Cheek is a ten-second man and Zarakov a whirling wind dodger in a broken field. Both seem too valuable to be on the third team, but are getting down the rudiments for all the backfield positions. Dan Holder, sub centre in the Yale game in 1921, is holding the same position for Team C, but during the past ten days he has been tried all through the line.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 28.—Cecil Walker of Australia, and the leading all-around rider in America this season, won the twenty-five mile championship revenge at the Newark Velodrome here this afternoon. The race was decided on a point basis, with a sprint every two miles after the first mile, in which points scored 7 for first, 3 for second, 2 for third and 1 for fourth until the final sprint, which tallied 25 for first, 15 for second, 10 for third and 5 for fourth.

Walker not only won the race but took the last sprint, in which he beat out Alfred Goullet. Willie Keller and Dave Lands, Boulet and Lands were not among the leading four riders going into the last sprint, and as a result did not score for the increased points.

What would have happened with Earl Sande up? That was a question asked by many a keen follower of thoroughbred racing after the dust of the second International special had well settled, and it was usually answered by the inquirer with the statement that Sande would have brought the French colt home a winner. Epinard has been unfortunate in the first two of his three contract races. In the first at Belmont Park over the six-furlong route he was the victim of bad racing luck, although, in view of the ride he received at the hands of Haynes in the Aqueduct number, these questions naturally arise: If a Sande had had the mount in the first event would he have got into difficulties in the first place? And when he found himself there would he not have been able to get out in time to overcome that three-quarters of a length beating Epinard received at the hands of Wise Counsellor?

That Epinard was better than his opposition at Aqueduct hardly admits of argument. Haynes is not the peer of the leading American jockeys of today, nor did he rank as a first-class rider before he went to France. In the opinion of leading horsemen who witnessed the event it was Haynes's faulty ride in his great race in England last year that gave the filly Verdict a victory by a neck at the end of a mile and a furlong journey on Newmarket Heath. Racing luck did not figure in the Aqueduct race, for Haynes could have sent Epinard on without taking him back. The colt still could have won had his jockey started his drive when he should have, for Epinard was running over the winner at a terrific clip at the wire.

Pierre Wertheimer has one more opportunity to vindicate his belief that he has a colt that is the master of any horse in America over the mile and a quarter racing luck should play little part, and under a competent ride at Latonia a real test of thoroughbred quality may be developed. All but Wise Counsellor, Lexington and Zev, of those who opposed the French colt in the first two tests in the East, must be eliminated as contenders in the third, and the Rancocas colt will have to improve a lot more to be dangerous. The test of Saturday would indicate that Wise Counsellor is a sprinter, for he was stopping at the end. Colonel Matt Winn said at Aqueduct that he expected a field of ten, about evenly divided between the East and West, to go to the post on Oct. 11 against Epinard. That is too many in view of the results of the first two races, as only a few of the many eligibles are likely to have a chance to come home in the money.

Aqueduct's autumn meeting will come to a close tomorrow and on Wednesday the thoroughbreds will move to the Jamaica plant of the Metropolitan Jockey Club for a thirteen-day meeting, which will come to a close on Saturday, Oct. 25. The meeting at Empire City, which will follow, will bring the 1924 season on Jockey Club tracks to a close.

POLO

The supremacy of teamwork over individual power in polo was demonstrated by the California victory in the American open championship. Rated seven goals below Tommy Hitchcock's Wanderers individually, the four horsemen from the Midwick Club of Los Angeles carried off the honors on the flat through their coordination and understanding of each other's movements. The Wanderers were a group of four players, all strong, high-goal men, gathered together with no system or style of attack or defense. Hitchcock had played with Elmer Boeseke, his back, in the Olympic polo games in France. He had played with Louis Stoddard, his No. 3, on numerous occasions, including the International invasion of England in 1923, but Boeseke and Stoddard never had played together before the open championship of 1924, and none of the three had played with Henry C. Lacey, the Argentine member of the combination, until the final match for the title last Saturday.

The Californians, on the other hand, were a group of players, individually weaker, perhaps, who understood each other's style and had played together as a unit for a full season. It was a unique system employed by the Westerners, but a good one. Teddy Miller played a deep No. 1, riding far into his opponents' territory. Arthur Perkins played No. 2 forward for the most part, and Carey Burke, the veteran back, played well toward his own goal, shouting commands to his men at all times and directing the play throughout. Eric Pedley, the fourth member of the combination, who was designated as No. 4, roamed the field almost at will.

The directing of Burke was a great factor in the victory. On most polo teams the players shout back and forth to each other as well and more so than any one else. With the Westerners the commands were left entirely up to Burke, and except for an occasional "Leave it!" the rest of the team was silent, listening for their leader's advice and heeding his judgments.

There is no doubt that the victory of the California team was popular. The reason for this probably was because the group of horsemen really represented 4 distinct teams. They were all Californians, they were all members of the Midwick Country Club. On the other hand, the other combinations competing for the title, like the Wanderers, were made up of four players gathered from anywhere, representing nothing and playing under such anonymous names as Freebooters and Hurricanes.

Polo undoubtedly is growing in popularity, but it will reach a certain point where interest will cease unless representative teams are put on the field. If some system could be devised whereby players would be handicapped with one club a season after season, and would be ineligible to compete with any other club, interest would increase as the public followed its favorites. Under the present system Hitchcock, for instance, might play for Meadow Brook against Shelburne in one tournament and with Shelburne against Meadow Brook in the next.

Another point which came in for criticism during the final match for the open championship was the failure of the players to wear numbers, and this should be done in all big contests where the public is interested. Many of the spectators at Meadow Brook last Saturday were seeing the Californians in action for the first time. They had heard much of the spectacular Pedley and had come with the main object of seeing him in action. Yet they never were certain which of the horsemen was the sensational Westerner unless they happened to be sitting next to some one who could point him out.

BASEBALL

The ability to win games when victories count the most enabled Manager McGraw to pilot his Giants to a fourth consecutive pennant in the National League, thereby establishing a record for consecutive pennant triumphs in the major organizations. With a crippled team opposed to one of the pennant contenders, McGraw directed his charges to three straight victories, which proved enough to make possible a pennant conquest. The Pirates boasted real strength, but in the crisis the Giant pitchers rose to the emergency, and McQuillan, Bentley and Nehf were the men who did much to bring a fourth flag to the Giants.

While the Giants have made sure of the flag, the race in the American League is still open, though everything at this moment points to the Senators as the champions. The worst they can get is a tie, and one victory out of their two remaining games will assure the Senators the pennant. The Yanks, in the meantime, have not given up hope and will fight their characteristic battle right up to the finish. The Senators have had a number of chances to clinch the flag, but the Yanks refused to be shaken off. The Senators' morale doubtless was weakened just a little last Friday when their ace, Walter Johnson, bowed to the Red Sox while the Yanks were beating the Athletics, thus reducing their lead to one game. But on Saturday the Senators again showed that they had the power to come from behind when their star lefthander, Mogridge, gave the Red Sox a 4 to 2 lead at the end of the first inning. They won, and, as the Yanks lost, they enter the final stretch two games ahead of the Yankees.

There is no doubt as to the popularity of a Washington victory. All over the major league circuits the fans have been cheering for the Senators. In Boston the crowd stood up and cheered each time they scored, while in Philadelphia, where the Athletics were fighting the Yanks, the fans did not conceal their choice. In New York there is no question that if the Yanks cannot win Washington is the next choice. The fact that it will serve to give Walter Johnson an opportunity to realize his life's ambition just at a time when he had announced that this would be his last season in baseball has added to the clamor for Washington to win. The Senators will return home Wednesday, and, win or lose, they will receive a welcome unsurpassed in the history of baseball in Washington, but at present it looks as if they will return as conquerors.

In the National League the Robins made a courageous fight after a poor start, and the Robins were not counted out officially until they fell before the Braves last Saturday. Despite this reverse, they managed to finish the season in second place, an excellent tribute to Manager Robinson's skillful handling of his team. Vance and Grimes are entitled to much praise, for they were credited with more than half of the games won by the Robins this year, Vance especially doing heroic work. His record shows that he won 28 games and lost only 6, and his last two defeats were suffered only after a battle.

As soon as the American League race is settled the baseball public will turn its attention toward the world series, which will open next Saturday. Washington already has started to prepare for the classic. Under the present arrangement the first two games will be played in the American League city, and the first game at the Polo Grounds will be played one week from today.

BOXING

Young Stribling stands today as the most prominent illustration of the justification for the twenty-one-year minimum age rule of the State Athletic Commission which prevents a boxer who has not yet attained his majority from competing in bouts of longer than six rounds. This rule was placed on the commission's book of regulations by William Muldoon at a time when the venerable athletic authority was Chairman of the commission. For his foresight and his admirable desire to protect some boxers from themselves, Muldoon was criticized generally. But at this late date Muldoon is enjoying the satisfaction of vindication, for, at the expense of Stribling, it has been satisfactorily shown that Muldoon's judgment of a boxer's physical requirements and capabilities have been sound indeed.

In his match against Ad Stone last week Stribling showed that, instead of improving as he nears maturity, he is retrograding; instead of developing into the finished boxer he will and was predicted at the start of his brilliant career, he is nearing that turn in his life which probably will bring him upon a sudden and steep descent into oblivion. The conclusion is not drawn alone from Stribling's bout against Stone, for it is no disgrace for a boxer of even Stribling's ability to be beaten by a lad who fast is developing into one of the foremost heavyweights in the country. But for the better part of the last year in the ring Stribling's boxing against others than mediocre opponents has been disappointing.

The answer to Stribling's present situation is found, critics are agreed, in the fact that he has been kept too active in the ring. He has been sent through too many bouts in too short a time, so that his natural growth has been seriously interfered with. This seems strange in view of the fact that his parents are his managers and chief seconds in bouts. The belief obtains, however, that parent-managers are more detrimental than beneficial in the case of any boxer. If they are not too engrossed in the problem of keeping their offspring from injury, they generally are found to be at the other extreme—too confident of their boy's ability to appreciate the danger to which they will subject him. Stribling's best years of fighting should be ahead of him now. He is but a youth and should be on the threshold of a campaign to a ring championship. Instead, Stribling is headed the other way, and when he engages first-class rivals appears to be traveling fast. Whether he is to continue his descent unimpeded or is to be wisely checked and enabled to retrace his footsteps rests entirely with the boy's parents.

GOLF

No one, least of all George Von Elm, will begrudge Bobby Jones the so long overdue victory which came to the brilliant young Southerner at the Merion Cricket Club on Saturday afternoon. In winning the national amateur championship Jones merely achieved a long-delayed triumph that was rightfully his years ago.

In the last six or eight years the Atlanta golfer has been golf's outstanding figure. Even as a 14-year-old boy playing in his first national championship at Merion, Bobby proved himself a shot-maker extraordinary. Three years later, at the age of 17, he went to the final round at Oakmont. From then on his amateur championship record was a long list of failures—failures only in the sense that he failed to win. Heralded as the greatest of them all, which he even then undoubtedly was, Jones failed because too much was expected of him. Golf, being the uncertain game that it is by its very character, one of the few games in which the best man does not always win, young Jones met unexpected reverses year after year until he got the reputation of being a golfer with a "hoodoo." The prediction was frequently heard that Bobby would never succeed in winning the amateur title. None of his rivals for the honor could go out and shoot as consistent or brilliant golf as could Jones, but, unfortunately for him, some one always came along in an inspired moment to shoot better than par golf against him.

After a time the soothsayers and forecasters limited their predictions by saying that Jones would win the open title before he won the amateur. The open championship is different from the amateur. In the open the man who makes the fewest number of mistakes is the man who generally wins. Off-hand it is impossible to name a single golfer either in the amateur or the professional world who can go along making as few mistakes as can Jones. He is machine-like when it comes to playing against par. The last-mentioned prediction came true. Jones did win the open championship first. The scene of his triumph was Inwood last year, when he beat out Cruikshank for the honor after a play-off. Twice since before 1923, and this year, Jones has finished second in the open. And in this event he has an unequaled record. For the last five championships in which he and Jones were contestants, Jones has been seventeen shots lower than Hagen for the twenty rounds of golf.

His Inwood victory gave Jones the confidence he needed in order to win the amateur. Furthermore, he adopted Ouimet's method of playing. Previously he had played his opponent in amateur championships. This time he played the par of the course, knowing full well that he could do it better than could any one else in the field. It was a bit of successful strategy. He merely went out with the idea of letting his opponents beat themselves, which they generally did.

There was just one outstanding figure in this year's championship, and if was Jones. He was the only man in the field who could play the Merion course consistently in par. That is why he won.

Jones's victory took the championship south of the Mason and Dixon line for the first time, and it goes in the care of as worthy and deserving a golfer as could possibly be selected and as popular a one as has ever held the title. Von Elm, although beaten, really enhanced his reputation. The Californian will be heard from again. He is a fine shot-maker, a good fighter and a thorough sportsman, as he proved in every match he played.

FOOTBALL

The powers that make the football rules have been altering the method of scoring the point after touchdown for the past three years, and last Saturday's games, which ushered in another football campaign, clearly demonstrated that another change will have to be made when the committee meets next Winter if the desired result is to be obtained.

When the officials decided to put the ball in play from scrimmage on the five-yard line, two years ago, it was hoped that teams attempting to score the extra point would try forward passes and running plays, and that this would speed up the game and add another exciting situation to the gridiron sport. But after making a touchdown teams continued to rely on the goal-from-field method with monotonous regularity, only occasionally using a forward pass or a line plunge.

This year the committee decided that field generals were too uncertain of making five yards by a running attack, so it was decided to put the ball in play on the three-yard line with the hope of encouraging the team to go away from the kicking system of scoring. Last Saturday practically every team that scored a touchdown attempted to add the extra point by the old system of a drop or placement kick, rather than gamble on the line plunge or a forward pass, and another change is probable.

It was learned unofficially that the committee last Winter considered abolishing the point after touchdown entirely. What undoubtedly would interest somewhat from the interest in the game, for the more chances there are of scoring and the closer the margins of victory the more excitement there is in any sport.

It was also learned unofficially that the committee considered awarding two points after touchdown if the offensive team scored on a forward pass or run and one point if it scored on a drop or placement kick. That system, in all probability, will be adopted at the next meeting of the Rules Committee, and it should prove popular. It would present many interesting possibilities. If a team was behind by seven points and it scored a touchdown, it could gamble on winning the game by trying a pass or run, or it could play safe and practically make sure of a tie by kicking for the extra point. In any event, it is certain that teams will continue to rely on the safer and more certain method of field goals until there is an added incentive to try forward passes or running attacks.

The 1924 football season was inaugurated without any regrettable circumstances to mar the start. No disagreements were reported nor were any players badly injured. The outlook for one of the greatest years the game ever has known is bright. With the later weeks of October and throughout November every Saturday will present at least one big game that will cause almost nation-wide interest. The larger universities have scheduled more hard games as a general rule than in the past, intersectional clashes will be frequent and nearly every team has enough veterans to assure it of a good nucleus for a championship contender.

MONTCLAIR BEATS WEST SIDE CLUB

Tennis Team Reaches Finals in Met. League—To Meet Terrace Club for Title.

The Montclair A. C. and the Terrace Club of Brooklyn reached the final round of the Metropolitan League interclub tennis championship yesterday and will meet in the final on Saturday on the courts of the Terrace Club in Flatbush. The Montclair representatives defeated the West Side Tennis Club on the former's courts in Montclair, N. J., at 5 to 2, while the Terrace Club won by default from the New York Tennis Club, winners of the title last year, when it defeated the Terrace Club in the final round, 5 to 3.

Inability to muster its greatest strength caused the New York Tennis Club to default, although two members of the team, Allen Behr and his teammates appeared at the Terrace Club for the match. Montclair won five out of six singles from the west side players and divided two doubles matches. A third doubles match was called in the third set with the score at 1 all, on account of darkness. Gerald E. Emerson and Anton F. Von Bernuth, the Nos. 1 and 2 men of the home team, met Harry Brunie, champion of the West Side Club, and John McCloy in this match. Brunie and McCloy won the first set at 6—1 and dropped the second at 7—5. The victory put Montclair in the final round of the tourney.

Emerson defeated Percy L. Kynaston, lead-off man for the visiting club, at 6—2, 6—4, in the singles and Von Bernuth won from Brunie at 6—4, 6—7. McCloy won the only match in singles for the West Side, defeating Edward C. Oelsner in a three-set contest at 6—1, 10—8. L. Gwynne French, Hugh Oakley and Frank MacWatty won their singles matches.

The summaries:

Singles—Gerald E. Emerson, Montclair, defeated Percy L. Kynaston, 6—2, 6—4; Anton F. Von Bernuth, Montclair, defeated Harry Brunie, 6—4, 6—7; John McCloy, West Side, defeated Edward C. Oelsner, 6—1, 10—8; L. Gwynne French, Montclair, defeated R. Dawson, 6—4; Hugh Oakley, Montclair, defeated S. Kelley, 6—1, 6—4; Frank MacWatty defeated Ralph Gatcomb, 6—4, 7—5.

Doubles—French and Oakley defeated S. E. Davenport and Gatcomb, 6—7, 6—1, 6—4; Ferguson and Kelley defeated Leonard W. Knox and Carl N. Jolliff, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

POLO PLAY HALTED UNTIL TOMORROW

Competition for the Monty Waterbury Cup will be batted until tomorrow afternoon because of the death of Elliot P. Bacon, prominent player and steward of the Meadow Brook Club, the United States Polo Association announced last night.

It also was announced that the finals will be held on Friday to permit the English players, who will sail for home on Saturday, to compete in all games.

A slight revision of the team personnel and schedule previously arranged for this week will be announced today, but it is certain that the Orange County and Shelburne teams will play tomorrow.

Three Ten-Round Bouts Listed.

Matchmaker Jess McMahon has arranged three ten-round bouts as features for his next boxing show at the Commonwealth Sporting Club, to be held Saturday night. The principals will be Tony Vaccarelli vs. Frankie Fidelis; Joe Laviola vs. Tony Rizzo, and Jack De Mare vs. Andy Jackson.

CANNEFAX IS NOT PLACED

Holder of Three-Cushion Title Has Not Completed Plans for Season —Other Billiard News.

Ralph Greenleaf, the world's pocket billiard champion, has signed to represent Philadelphia in the National Championship Pocket Billiard League for the 1924-25 season, according to an announcement made yesterday by Frank A. Dwyer of Brooklyn, President of the league. Greenleaf had accepted terms more than a month ago, but it was not until Saturday that he signed, it was stated. The conference, which was held here, was attended by President Dwyer and Joseph Mayer, President of the Hudson Recreation Company, holder of the league franchise in Philadelphia.

Most of the twelve players who will represent the league this year have signed, but the complete list of players and franchise holders will not be announced for a few days. The three players in the metropolitan district already have accepted terms. They are Frank Taberski, former champion, who will represent the Fourteenth Street Academy; Charles Harmon, Lawler Brothers' Academy, at Sixty-sixth Street and Columbus Avenue, and Joseph Cannon, the Recreation Academy in Brooklyn.

While the champion has been signed in pocket billiards it has been learned that Robert Cannefax, the world's three-cushion champion, has not signed with any franchise holder in the National Championship Three-Cushion League. It has been announced that G. L. Cousins will represent Detroit this year, and that means that Cannefax will begin playing for some other city. New York, it is known, is still without a franchise and there is a possibility that Cannefax may represent this city. Cannefax represented the Strand Billiard Academy in the old three-cushion league and has a large following here.

Albert Cutler, the junior balkline champion, will open a 1,200-point match against Erich Hagenlacher, balkline champion of Germany, at Daly's Academy this afternoon. It will be played in four blocks of 300 points each. Cutler's next match will be against Ary Bos, champion of Holland, at the Fourteenth Street Billiard Academy on Oct. 21, 22 and 23, in which he will defend his junior title.

Before leaving for Richmond yesterday, where he will give exhibitions today and tomorrow, Willie Hoppe, the world's balkline champion, announced that he had arranged to play a 300-point three-cushion match against Eric Hagenlacher. The first block will be played at the Fourteenth Street Academy on the nights of Oct. 6 and 7, in blocks of 50 points each, and the final 100 points at the Hoppe Academy on Oct. 8 and 9.

Ary Bos and his wife, the former Miss Katherin Haywood, woman's balkline champion of the United States, will open a week's exhibition of balkline billiards at the Recreation Academy in Brooklyn this afternoon.

Ralph Greenleaf will meet Tommy Hueston, former pocket billiard champion, in a handicap match at pocket billiards at the Strand Academy on Wednesday afternoon. Greenleaf will play for 1,200 points against 800 for Hueston, in eight blocks, each to be 150 points against 100.

A meeting of the New York Roomkeepers' Association will be held at Doyle's Billiard Academy tomorrow night. The purpose will be to take action on the holding of the four billiard tournaments in the New York rooms during the coming season.

The New York greater three-cushion tournament will be open at the Hoppe Academy tonight. Eighteen players have entered, and they will compete for $350 in prizes. Ed Marshall will play A. E. Howard in the opening match, which will be at 8:30 points. Leonard Kenney has landed 5 more H. J. Rose tomorrow night. It will take six weeks to complete the tournament.

THE KEEPER OF THE PEACE.

With unexpected rapidity and success, the League of Nations, in session at Geneva, has been pressing forward plans for disarmament and for the avoidance of war throughout the world. The protocol designed to strengthen the Covenant of the League, and to make it more precise, is on the eve of adoption. Of the highest importance is one aspect of its interpretation as set forth on Saturday. In effect, the scheme is one for compulsory arbitration of international disputes. The nation that deliberately refuses to arbitrate, or to abide by an arbitral decision given against it, is to be held by that very act to be an "aggressor" to whom the various sanctions of the protocol and of the Covenant will be restrainingly applied. Now it is added that the process would run against a non-member State, as well as against any nation that belongs to the League. Only so, it was argued, could the question of security over the whole earth be satisfactorily dealt with.

There is in this no latent threat to the United States. This country has stood consistently and valiantly for international arbitration, having gone so far in some treaties as to make it virtually unlimited. We certainly cannot now repudiate our own doctrine, though we may feel a certain regret and mortification over the fact that our own Government has taken no part in thus giving it a form universally applicable. Nor is it conceivable that the Washington Government could decline the invitation to take part in the general disarmament conference to be held next June. In fact, the League has made such great advances that it will soon be a question not of America refusing to cooperate with it, but of being unwilling to place herself before the eyes of mankind in so futile and stultifying a position as would be involved in not gladly working together with a body which now may fairly be called the keeper of the peace for the whole world.

Our reluctance to enter the League is in contrast with Germany's eagerness to become a member of it. At last accounts she was willing to drop every stipulation. At first she was inclined to ask what would amount to a specially privileged position in the League, but now she is willing to enter simply on an equality with all other nations. Thus while the United States continues to stand for the time being aloof, and increasingly ashamed for being so, the League goes on extending its sway over the hearts and consciences of all nations of good-will.

A PRICKLY OLIVE BRANCH.

Moscow is of the opinion that the interview given to the world by Foreign Minister TCHITCHERIN is an olive branch extended in the direction of Washington, D. C. The Tchitcherin statement of 2,500 "carefully prepared" words is long enough to be an olive branch, but apparently some Soviet Burbank has succeeded in incorporating several familiar features of the cactus with Athena's favorite plant. Thus:

> While Mr. HUGHES is delivering pacifist speeches, the imperialists with his aid are carrying on bloody activities in China and Georgia. [This is not the Georgia of Atlanta and Savannah but of Tiflis and Batum.] Despite the failure of their policy toward Soviet Russia, there is ground for believing that a new attempt at intervention and economic blockade of Russia will be made by imperialists in the near future. The recent statement of Mr. HUGHES against Soviet Russia bears witness to this.

That kind of olive-branch waving is not altogether so crazy as may appear at first sight. There is a certain method in the madness; only it is not a method in the least adapted to the particular case. Moscow is reasoning from the fact that it has called HAS-SAY MACDONALD almost as harsh names as it has bestowed on Mr. HUGHES, and yet it has obtained a treaty from MACDONALD. The calculation works out about as follows: Every time the Soviet Government raspe the British Prime Minister it pleases a certain element among British radicals. Every time it draws the contrast between proletarian Russia and "capitalistic" Britain it brings a frown to the brows of the Prime Minister, but it does win a certain measure of response from the British Labor masses, who, without embracing the Moscow doctrines, nevertheless consider that the existence of the Soviet Government lends them prestige in their own struggle against "capitalism." Thus the policy of talking rough to MACDONALD shows a balance to the advantage of Moscow. The Prime Minister may bite his lip, but he has to reckon with a backfire engineered by Moscow.

What TCHITCHERIN overlooks is that British conditions do not prevail in this country. The American Labor movement has not the slightest affection for Moscow. The pressure of trade necessities, which operates to some extent in Great Britain, does not begin to exist here. When TCHITCHERIN talks rough to Mr. HUGHES he pleases nobody in particular in this country, he lights no backfires against the Secretary of State, he develops no pressure. He merely confirms the general impression in the United States that the Soviet Government is very hard to talk with.

A QUESTION OF POSITION.

Colonel ROOSEVELT is curiously primitive for the son of a Progressive. As a candidate he holds with the old magicians that there is a mysterious, compelling force in a name. This intrinsic power of letters and syllables isn't enough. He has to invoke and to identify himself with the god of his tribal politics. He depends on Mr. COOLIDGE's strength to reinforce his own. He assumes the gift of prophecy: "New York State will give "President COOLIDGE an unparalleled "majority." It's got to if he isn't to be "left," like WARNER MILLER, "outside the breastworks." Evidently his chance was in 1920. But his gaze is not always backward. Here's a somewhat mystic description of the present: "The people are up on their toes." Apparently he sees them teetering on toe-tip, bending forward reverently to hear the words about to fall from him.

A calmer observer might see the people in a position much less flattering to the prospects of entailed political merit. He might see the people standing firmly on the left foot while the right is lifted threateningly.

IOWA.

Various expressions of uneasiness about the Republican predicament in Iowa have been printed. If the opinions of the Republican managers could be obtained, they would probably indicate a genuine "scare." The La Follette campaign seems to be well organized. There are in the State elements naturally favorable to Mr. LA FOLLETTE. But the undisputed strength of Senator BROOKHART is the most significant factor in its present politics. While he was nominated in the Republican primary, there has been little Republican in his policies. He has constantly acted with the La Follette group in Congress. It might almost be said that he is more Lafollettian than his chief. He is an ardent soul. He fought Mr. HARDING. He has fought Mr. COOLIDGE. He has spread all over the State his mythological economy and finance. He is as full of woe as the Ocala platform. He feeds fiction and pity to farmers, workingmen, soldiers, mothers — to mention only few of the blocs which, he said, elected him and are to re-elect him.

On the stump he sedulously avoids mentioning by name either Mr. COOLIDGE or Mr. LA FOLLETTE, but the clear implication and tendency of his speeches glorify the latter. How could it be otherwise? To praise Mr. COOLIDGE would be to condemn himself. In intention he is a younger La Follette. In temperament he is much like Senator WHEELER, who has just been celebrating him at Des Moines. He conducts his own campaign, contemptuous of the Old Guard. If that sorely tried remnant puts up an independent candidate for Senator against him, as is insanely proposed, the only result must be a diminished vote for Mr. COOLIDGE. Does it make any real difference whether Mr. BROOKHART, whose election is assured, keeps mum or formally endorses Mr. LA FOLLETTE, as the Independent Progressive enthusiasts expect him to do? He may or may not be precluded from doing that by his primary nomination and promises that he is said to have made; but is it plausible to suppose that the mass of Republican voters who swear by him for his advocacy of Lafollettian policies and his opposition to Mr. COOLIDGE will vote for the latter?

That is the supposition of the Republican bigwigs, at least for publication. It attributes a very curious state of mind to the majority of Iowa Republicans. It assumes that they are both for and against the same things; that they want a conservative President to hamper as far as possible the projects of their radical Senator. Long attachment to the Republican Party is to commit them to this contradiction. Then the price of corn is imagined to have converted many of the Republican backsliders. That is a temporary condition is to wipe out the remembrance not merely of a state of facts but of a body of doctrines, passionately preached and believed in, still passionately preached and believed in, as the popularity of Senator BROOKHART shows. The theory is of the thinnest. Those 13 electoral votes must seem a pretty bad risk to Republican underwriters.

HIS CALIFORNIA GRIEVANCE.

Senator LA FOLLETTE naturally cries out against the action of the Supreme Court of California in denying the La Follette-Wheeler electors a place on the State Presidential ballot. This is to him another wicked triumph of judicial technicalities over right and justice. Not that Senator LA FOLLETTE objects to technicalities when they are in his favor. At the very time of the California decision he was suing out writs of mandamus in the State of Washington to prevent the Secretary of State from certifying names of Presidential electors on various tickets which were said to be intended "to injure the cause of Mr. LA FOLLETTE in "this State." The final hearing is set for tomorrow, and if the Judges side with the Wisconsin Senator, they will no doubt be hailed by him as so many Daniels come to judgment.

The California statute relating to independent nominations, the substantial parts of which were printed in THE TIMES on Saturday, to the lay mind certainly seems obscure. The Judges of the State Supreme Court divided 4 to 3 as regards its proper interpretation. What is the sensible inference from such a difficulty in ascertaining the true intent of the law? Not that the courts should be swept away as mere cumberers of the ground, but that Legislatures should exercise more care and intelligence in making statutes so clear and precise that no Judge could mistake their meaning. The injustice, if any, which Senator LA FOLLETTE has suffered in California need have no serious practical effect on the election. The Socialist electors are legally on the ballot and are pledged to support him. That ought to be enough to secure a due expression of the will of the voters who favor LA FOLLETTE. He has gratefully accepted the endorsement of the Socialist Party and ought not to be so fastidious as to object to being on the same ticket with it in California.

THE TEST FOR NEW VOTERS.

For one class of voters the election law makes a special requirement. They are "new voters," and are defined as persons who have become entitled to vote, either by attaining majority or by naturalization, or otherwise, since Jan. 1, 1922, and who have not already voted at a general election. All such must furnish "proof of ability to read and write English." That proof is to be had only from the educational authorities in this State, whom the law directs to make the tests.

If the new voter has finished the work of an approved eighth-grade elementary school, or of a higher school in which English is the language of instruction, and presents evidence thereof in the form of a certificate or diploma, he is not obliged to undergo a special test. But if he has not, he must present himself at one of the places designated in order to be examined. For this purpose the Superintendent of Schools in this city has selected twenty-nine evening school centres in the Borough of Manhattan, nine in the Borough of the Bronx, twenty-one in the Borough of Brooklyn, ten in the Borough of Queens and three in the Borough of Richmond. The examinations have been prepared by the State Education Department, are administered by the local authorities and are uniform throughout the State. They will be given in the centres designated beginning Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week (Sept. 30 and Oct. 1), and every night in the following week, as well as Saturday morning, Oct. 11. The State Education Department has selected a list of 4,000 English words within the range of which the test will be given. This list (printed in THE TIMES of Aug. 31) may be obtained of the State Education Department or of the New York City Board of Education.

This will be the first real trial of the Education Department's administration of this test for voters. Special mention is made of it here not only in order to urge citizens generally to bring it to the notice of those who are looking forward to citizenship, but also to call attention to the importance of making more generous provision for the evening schools, in which alone tens of thousands of men and women have their only opportunity to qualify as voters. With diminished immigration, unusual effort should now be made to eliminate completely the illiteracy in this State. There should be left to no immigrant, especially under 40 years of age and after five years of residence, an excuse for not learning the English language, the basic facts of our history and the primary responsibilities of citizenship in a republic. The literacy constitutional amendment, supplemented by the law which requires a test of literacy by the educational authorities, makes it necessary for the new voter to pass through the schoolhouse on his way to full citizenship. The New York experiment is a step beyond that taken by any other State. There must be no going back.

A CROWN WELL WON.

Saturday was marked by several sporting events of the first magnitude. The winning of the baseball pennant in the National League was established, and apparently also in the American. The great French horse, Epinard, was barely beaten in his second test race in America, though it appears that he should have won. But no report in yesterday's sporting pages gave more unalloyed pleasure to a larger number of people than the success of "BOBBY" JONES in winning the National Amateur Golf Championship. Here was a young man who by general consent had been for at least six years the most finished and formidable player in the world. He was so ranked in the opinion of British professionals and the leading English critics of the game, as well as by all who had seen him play in the United States. His record in our successive open championships had surpassed that of any professional of his time. Yet the amateur crown he had never been able to win, despite his acknowledged superiority, until last Saturday. The accidents, or, as some call them, the miracles, which constantly occur in competitions of that kind, had repeatedly snatched the crown from his hands when he seemingly had it in his grasp. At last it is placed by unchallenged right upon his head.

Golf in this country now numbers its votaries by millions, and few of them can fail to wonder at the nature of JONES's unconquerable march to victory last week. Play like his had never been seen before in an amateur championship. From the two qualifying rounds all through the severe testing down to the finals his golf was of the highest character, only falling by a stroke or two of absolute perfection. No contemporary golfer commands as he does the full range of the essentials of the game—strength to produce long and accurate driving, dash, boldness, and an uncanny sense of direction and distance in approaching the green, and the utmost delicacy and control in putting.

After his series of unequaled triumphs on the links young Mr. JONES may feel tempted to throw his clubs into the sea, as the lucky Greek did his ring, lest he tempt good fortune too far. But if he does, all golfers will hope that the waves and the tide will bring them back to him, so that he may continue to illustrate both the rigors and the beauties of the game which fascinates so great a multitude.

THE COMING OF ZR-3.

According to present plans, ZR-3, the reparations Zeppelin for the United States, will start on her voyage to Lakehurst on Oct. 5 or 6. With fair weather she should come in sight of the Atlantic seaboard three days after sailing from Friedrichshafen, probably about the 10th of the month. Unlike the Shenandoah, this last creation of the Friedrichshafen factory is in type and design a commercial airship. Her length is 656 feet, diameter 90.66 feet and height 101.68 feet. Her hydrogen capacity is 2,472,000 cubic feet. The makers have availed themselves of an experience of more than twenty years to produce the safest and most dependable Zeppelin; in the series which her completion closes by the requirements of the Versailles Treaty her number is 126. Hereafter such dirigibles, containing the features of the inventors, will be constructed by the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation of Akron, Ohio. With what is practically a monopoly of helium gas the United States will be in a position to develop the commercial dirigible without serious competition. There will be three United States naval officers on board ZR-3 as observers when she begins her voyage, but the pilot will be a German, the veteran Dr. HUGO ECKENER, director of the Zeppelin Company, and the crew will be German. As the ship was not designed and built for the Atlantic passage, hydrogen, which is lighter than helium and, of course, much less expensive, will be used to inflate her. Unless ZR-3 encounters a violent storm, the risk of using hydrogen should be inconsiderable. The Germans pride themselves on their skill in the navigation of Zeppelins, and the record shows that in their hands hydrogen has seldom given any trouble.

Compared with the Shenandoah, the latest Zeppelin is manageable. It is claimed that she carries the first reversible gasoline motors put into a dirigible. Gears, as in automobiles, have been hitherto used to reverse the propellers. Before reaching a landing place it was necessary to reduce speed, and this exposed the great fabrics to sudden gusts of wind. ZR-3 should be able to sail at good speed beyond her landing place, reverse engines and make an easy and safe descent with aid from the ground. Her five motors, each of 400 horsepower, have given a good account of themselves in her trials in Germany. O. D. TOMESCHUE, a Friedrichshafen authority, estimates her mean speed at sixty-eight miles an hour. There has been an innovation in attaching the cabin solidly to the keel well toward the front. In the forepart is the control room, "like the bridge of a yacht," with controls and telephone lines leading aft. This arrangement should make for simpler and securer navigation. In her appointments and conveniences for crew and passengers ZR-3 is said to be an advance upon Shenandoah. The latter is about twenty feet longer and makes as fine an appearance in the air. ZR-3's carrying capacity, exclusive of fuel (thirty-five tons of gasoline), is about fifteen tons. For six months the navy will have charge of the new Zeppelin, after which she is to be turned over to the army for the same period.

The Government will probably use her to carry the mails. ZR-3 will be an experiment in commercial aeronautics, really the first of the pioneers in this country. It is the opinion of Captain POCHHAMER, who as pilot has handled all the German types of dirigibles, Parseval, Schuette, Lanz and Zeppelin, that a three days' transatlantic service could be furnished by 100,000 cubic meter dirigibles, each carrying fifty passengers, for the fare asked by the great steamship companies. He believes that it would pay dividends. ZR-3, it should be understood, is not large enough for the Atlantic passage. No Zeppelin has yet been built that would meet the requirements for such a service.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

His Denial Will Be Welcomed.

"I have made no complaint," General BULLARD is quoted as saying, "nor caused any complaint, to the Mayor or any other authority on the play 'What Price Glory' or any other play."

That is excellent, as far as it goes, and perhaps the General could have added, and would have added if he had thought of it, "and I have not had, and will not have, any part in the expression of my private opinion of that or any other play, to be used as the basis for legal action upon it."

It is not the business of army or navy officers, as such, to set themselves up as censors of plays, or to be set up as such, and it would be a sad commentary on their discretion if they allowed themselves so to be placed by Mayor HYLAN or anybody else.

General BULLARD has helped his friends to hope that he has not been caught in a trap so obvious, and that by so refraining he has prevented an injury to "the service" far more serious than any dramatic production possibly could do.

Instances Are Not the Whole.

By the common consent of those who have seen it, the Anderson-Stallings play, as a play, is a notably good one. Three charges have been made against it—that it contains too much profanity, and profanity that goes beyond the customary privilege of the stage in the re-presentation of human talk; that some of it is improper to the extent of obscenity; that it maligns the marines and will make harder the getting of recruits.

As for the adverse influence on recruiting, those who press that point would do well to bring forward a few young men who, having seen the play, have vehemently declared, "Never will we join a service like that!"

Of course they cannot do it, and even if they could the evidence would be irrelevant, dramatists being under no obligation to act as recruiting agents.

Underlying almost everything that has been said against this play as an untrue picture of military life is the familiar fallacy of assuming the authors' intention to say "This is the whole of war," or of whatever may have supplied material for their observation or imagination. No dramatist or romancer worthy of the name — none who was more than a ruthless propagandist—ever had that intention or any other intention than to present certain individualities in certain conditions.

There are all kinds of soldiers, good, bad and indifferent, brave and cowardly, pious and heathen, and every kind is legitimate literary timber. Neither the stage nor the novel is to be deprived of villains, any more than of heroes, and either can be drawn from any source without making a sweeping indictment of any group, race or sect, or justifying protest.

A Difficult Question of Liability.

Among the officials of not a few big corporations something of real apprehension must have been excited when they read, last week, of a problem that has come up for solution down in Louisiana. A New Orleans street railway company, it seems, has kept going during the Summer a broadcasting station at an amusement park which it maintained at the end of one of its lines. How that helped business it is rather hard to see, but evidently the company thought it did, or it wouldn't have done it, and now that the season is over it wants to stop its broadcasting activities—in fact, already has done so.

The city's Commissioner of Public Utilities says that if the petitions for a resumption of the broadcasting are numerous enough he will take them as revealing that a public utility has been created, and he will proceed to find out whether or not the railway company legally can be compelled to keep that public utility in continuous operation. He seemingly inclines to the belief that it can. If so, every other corporation that has begun broadcasting must keep it up forever, even at a loss.

Involved in this question is that of the rights acquired by the purchase of a radio receiving set. The value of such an instrument obviously depends on the existence of something to receive, and of something worth receiving, at that. Imagine the coming of the time when everybody who can or will buy a receiving set has bought one. What motive, then, would anybody have for broadcasting anything except advertisements, and how long after that would anybody bother to listen in?

This Quarrel Never Will Be Ended.

Another year of daylight saving has passed. All those who liked it in the past have continued to like it, and those who hated it in the past have continued to hate it. Not a single convert from one group to the other has been made, so far as is known or even reported.

Between the two groups there apparently is an irreconcilable conflict of opinion. Argument has no effect, as it never has when from an indisputable set of facts opposite conclusions have been drawn. Reconciliation then depends on getting new facts, and to do that with respect to daylight saving seems impossible. Everything that can be said for and against it has been said over and over again, and agreement is as far off as at the beginning.

It is for the most part a phase of the immemorial quarrel between town and country, and never the two shall meet. At least they never did. The incompatibility between them is fundamental, and what enrages the country is that the town can do what it pleases and the country must do what it does not please or pay a heavy penalty of inconvenience and loss.

THE PLIGHT OF THE GREEKS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the press of America and Great Britain, and on the public platform, I have been asserting that the responsibility for the Asia Minor horror rests with Mr. Lloyd George, who sent the Greeks to Smyrna, only to leave them in the lurch eventually. Because I have had the moral courage to tell my own countrymen the truth I have had to submit to being called unpatriotic—and worse things—and have been subjected to all sorts of petty annoyances. But truth will out, and now, from a totally unexpected quarter, comes confirmation of my views. No less an individual than General Sir Ian Hamilton, who commanded at the Dardanelles, has the following to say in his recently published book "The Friends of England":

> I was born in Corfu, in the British garrison there, and in consequence receive many letters on occasions in my life from Greeks who have noted that fact. I am sorry for the Greeks, they are the most civilised component of the Balkans. They are the most intellectual. Besides that, they have a cult for us (the British), which is sincere as far it goes. They were really enthusiastic, really sympathetic at the time of the Dardanelles, and until the Italians came in, when they socied down at once. The Greeks are frightfully clever, but they were used up and then let down by Mr. Lloyd George. They have had a very rough time of it. I am sorry for them. They seem to me to be doomed. It was hard luck on them meeting Mr. Lloyd George. Poincare did stand by his Turks, but Lloyd George let down the Greeks.
> * * * If ever the chance arises, I think we should try and compensate the Greeks for having brought them the gifts which have ruined them.

In his recently published book "The Crisis—1915," Winston Churchill, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, agrees with General Hamilton that the Allies blundered diplomatically in every possible way in the Near East, and that it was the duty of the Allies to have taken King Constantine into their confidence concerning their plans for the military and naval operations at the Straits. Churchill alleges—and he ought to know—that the reason for this was that the Allies had no definite plans, and really did not know themselves what they were about!

The Greeks have been charged with desiring to steal Naboth's vineyard, with being obsessed with the Megali Hellas idea, and desiring to steal lands ethnologically and historically Turkish. That Asia Minor was Greek thousands of years before the Turk appears in history apparently does not bother the gang of concession-holders whose friendship for the Turk is a matter of dollars and cents.

There is small satisfaction in the belated recognition of prominent Britons that the Allies were themselves responsible for the Greek disaster, and the massacre or deportation of tens of thousands of men, women and children whose only crime was that of being Christian and helpless, but at least it should serve to place responsibility where it rightly belongs. Asia Minor has been Greek since the dawn of history, and Christian since Apostolic times. Today thousands of little children, in whose veins flows the blood of Pericles, of Homer and Polycarp, are being fed and clothed by American charity through the efforts of the Near East Relief, surely the noblest example of international philanthropy in history.

America is not poorer but incomparably richer for what Americans have done to help these little innocent victims of the perfidy of the politicians.

High Wages in Sweden.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Comments on the present facilities of the farmer in obtaining machinery free of duty (or foreign freights) bring to my mind the old question of competition of low paid labor in Europe justifying our tariff. My travels last year in Sweden and elsewhere impressed me with the high wage of labor there. My heel taps cost 62½ cents American money; the tailor said he paid his workmen four times the wage of 1900, and a good five-room flat with bath in a city of 300,000 overlooking a park rented for about $300. I am interested to know if other European countries have through war scarcity of labor raised wages in like proportion. In that event our principal argument is gone.

THE BUILDERS.

Isn't it rare, how they work away,
Putting in overtime, night and day!
Choosing, rejecting, first this, then that,
Pondering issues, unwise or pat.
Never a mention of union hours,
No stop for holidays, sun or showers.
White-collared groups with the coarse-oiled stand,
Humblest and poorest now get a hand.
Strange, to find plutocrats thus engage,
Shopmates with men who depend on wage.
Really deferring to each and all.
Wealth playing carpenter, groomed and sleek,
Stepping aside, with unknowns speak.
Smoothing and planing and fitting planks,
Calling for points from the lowly ranks.
No strikes or shirkings these groups disturb.
Never ward healer a boss would curb.
Gay are the jokes and the smiles are bland.
Soul knit to soul (pro tem.) both grand!
Farmer and Labor and Woman fair,
Oh, with what solace for each they care!
Sudden new pariners the public notes.
Building each platform—to catch the votes!

WHY HE WILL VOTE FOR DAVIS.

My Dear Mr. Davis: In considering the issues of the Presidential campaign in which you are engaged I have come to the following conclusions, which I will state as briefly as possible:

First—I believe the Republican Party to be on the wrong side of a moral issue affecting the character and spirit of the American people. In my judgment, it was the duty of our Government to enter the League of Nations with reservations, and by so doing cooperate officially with the only international agency for maintaining the peace of the world. The absence of our Government from the conference now in session at Geneva is a national disgrace which future generations will look back upon with shame. Had the Republican policy of opposition to the League, which has brought this situation to pass, been adopted because of an honest fear that entrance into the League would jeopardise our national safety, there would have been a good excuse. Believing, however, as I do, that the moral leadership of the country was sacrificed for partisan purposes and because of hatred of Woodrow Wilson, there is no excuse whatever. The evidence in support of this conclusion is overwhelming.

Second—The Republican Party failed to keep its pledge of 1920.

At the request of the Republican National Committee, and with the knowledge of the party's candidate for President, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Root and other prominent Republican leaders pledged the party unequivocally and specifically to the League of Nations with reservations. This promise has never been kept, nor has any effort been made to keep it, in spite of their own public statement that "the party was bound by every consideration of good faith to pursue such a course until the declared object is attained."

In answer to the charge that they have not kept faith, Mr. Hughes replies that "when the statement was made it expressed their views at the time, but that the Administration was compelled to deal with the situation as it found it on coming into power." This answer is not satisfactory to those who accepted their leadership in good faith, because it was their lack of spirit, determination and sense of personal responsibility to those who followed them that created the situation they now use as an excuse for failure to keep their word.

In October, 1920, just five months before Mr. Harding took office, there was obviously no insurmountable obstacle to entrance into the League; otherwise the statement would never have been issued. It is to be presumed that Mr. Root and Mr. Hughes did not willfully pledge themselves and a future President of the United States to a promise they believed impossible of fulfillment. Mr. Hughes and Mr. Root are careful men. They are not temperamental or impulsive, nor are they inexperienced in political affairs. In October they knew whereof they spoke, and they had reason for so doing. There was at that time no serious opposition to the League. The people had accepted association with the League as an accomplished fact. The Democrats in the Senate favored it, and twice the Republicans, including Mr. Harding, had voted for the Covenant of the League with reservations.

What, then, caused the Republican Party to change its policy? Was it the result of the election? That could not be, because Mr. Harding was committed to the League with reservations. Never during his entire campaign did he repudiate that commitment. Furthermore, President Coolidge, on Nov. 23, 1920, declared that the election did not register a vote against the League. What, then, was the reason for breaking the party pledge? It was because President Harding and Mr. Hughes and the other party leaders did not immediately on taking office compel the party to keep its pledge, but permitted the Republican National Committee and a little band of Wilson haters to build up day by day and month by month a false idea of the power and authority of the League. Arguments against the League went unanswered. Charges against the League went undented. Vilification of the League by the Republican National Committee went unrebuked until finally the standards of the noblest and most inspiring cause of all time were abandoned and surrendered to a willful group of malicious politicians who could have been crushed and driven from the field had their challenge been met with any coufage and decision.

I make the statement that the fight for the League could have been won, because I know what Mr. Hughes can do when he asserts his leadership. Let me illustrate my point:

No sooner had Mr. Hughes and Mr. Harding taken office than the Republican National Committee organized a publicity bureau for the purpose of publishing and circulating a bulletin, the policy of which was bitterly anti-League and in direct conflict with the policy the leaders had announced. The fact, however, that this bulletin was creating a false impression of the League, which might make impossible the fulfillment of his pledge, did not disturb the serene equanimity of the Secretary of State; but when, in May, 1923, the same bulletin published an insulting attack on the Allies that embarrassed him in his negotiations with the French Government in relation to the payment of the cost of our army of occupation on the Rhine, what did he do?

Did he say it would be futile to enter upon a "hopeless debate" with the National Committee?

Did he say he had to deal with the situation as he found it?

Not at all. The Secretary of State struck like lightning and with the force of a thunderbolt. He split the party wide open, shook the Republican National Committee the way a terrier shakes a rat, put the Chairman thereof on the political scrapheap and humiliated the Republican Party as it had seldom, if ever, been humiliated before. He forced the repudiation of the statement against the Allies, published the repudiation to the world and sent a copy to our Embassies in Europe as a permanent international record of what Mr. Hughes can do when the fate of his own adventures are at stake, and the issue the payment of money into the Treasury of the United States.

Until the same energy is employed in an effort to keep the party pledges as is employed where money is involved, I consider that the leaders of the Republican Party obtained my vote by fraud.

Third—The policy of the Republican Party is sordid, selfish and material.

There are those who think it strange that with such men as President Coolidge, Mr. Hughes and Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania at the head of the party it should have reached about the lowest possible level of political degradation; should be convicted of corruption in its grossest form, shooting at ideals, glorifying the material and suppressing the aspirations of those who hope for the day when our country will take a finer, truer and bolder position among the nations of the world. Why should this be? It is not difficult to find the answer. These distinguished men to whom I have referred are jealous of their own reputations for integrity and honesty, but feel no personal responsibility for the conduct of the party organization. They seem to care little what goes on so long as they don't know about it. Senator Pepper, for instance, a man of unimpeachable character, and at times almost dissolute in his emotional idealism, has lived in happy ammunition for many years with a Republican machine in Philadelphia that is notorious for the manner in which it carries the principle of "normalcy," "common sense" and "practical achievement" to their complete fruition.

Then there is the President, who is unquestionably high-minded. He speaks pleasantly of ideals. On Jan. 11, 1922, he said that the "ancient power of leadership had not left the Republic." On Oct. 31 he assured us that the "United States was the hope of the world." On Feb. 22, 1922, he expressed "faith in the things of the spirit" and pictured Lincoln "calling the people into the high places, opening up to the vision of mankind a new heaven and a new earth," and assuring us that in the "soul of the nation there is a reserve that responds to the call of high ideals."

Fine words, but how different the tone and the moral level when he speaks of the separate treaty with Germany, which he praises "because it grants to the United States all of the privileges which we would have gained had we ratified the other treaty [the Versailles Treaty] and imposes none of the obligations." It is this mean and timid policy established in the treaty with Germany to which the President referred on the 11th day of January, 1922, when he said "that the same moral grandeur which has been the national ideal in our domestic relations is being made the ideal of our foreign relations." With what a wealth of imagination must one be endowed to find in the present foreign policy of our Government a glimmer of "moral grandeur." Here, again, we see that curious characteristic in the leadership of the Republican Party; a professed love for the ideal in the abstract, but no hatred of injustice, selfishness and wrong in the concrete.

Mr. Hughes is another illustration of this type of leadership. In 1918 Senator Truman H. Newberry's election for United States Senator cost $250,000. He was indicted on a charge of corrupt practice, convicted and sentenced to a term of two years in prison, the conviction being set aside by the Supreme Court of the United States on technical grounds by a majority of one vote—four out of the nine Judges dissenting. The Democratic Senator and nine Republican Senators favored his expulsion. Senator Borah said the money expended for Mr. Newberry was "intended to and did corruptly affect the primary election in Michigan"; while the Senate of the United States passed a resolution declaring that "the expenditure of such excessive sums of money in behalf of a candidate was contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the honor and dignity of the Senate and dangerous to the perpetuity of free government."

On Nov. 20, 1922, Mr. Newberry resigned his seat rather than await the outcome of the vote on the question of his expulsion. In spite of all these facts and in spite of the fact that the question was not before him as Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes rushes to the defense of Mr. Newberry, to whom he was under no obligation, at a time when a primary campaign was on in Michigan, with burnished armor and flaming sword.

I do not know, of course, what motive prompted Mr. Hughes to take this action, for I have never found a way to read the minds and hearts of men. But the type of leadership that attaches itself to the mud-puddle cause of Newberry and withholds its support from a great humane enterprise affecting the peace of the world, to which it was committed, is the type of leadership I refuse to follow longer without a protest.

I do not for a moment question the virtue of these men, but their virtue is not the virtue of leadership. It is cold, negative, impassive, ingrowing and aloof. In fact, to such an extent do they carry this policy of moral isolation and indifference to the conduct of others that I verily believe that Secretary Hall and his little band of acquisitive associates could have stolen the Capitol, the White House and the Washington Monument without a protest from these men unless the Constitution or some provision of a statute made them responsible for the crime.

Think of what has happened under the leadership of men of this character. A savage, unfair, intemperate and profane campaign was conducted against Woodrow Wilson; an honorable Democrat, Benedict Crowell, was hounded and persecuted; spies were put on the trail of public officials; our wounded soldiers were robbed; public property was handled with greedy fingers; a sordid political atmosphere permeated our national life; and, perhaps worst of all, Herbert Hoover, the one man in the Republican Party qualified by reputation, experience, sympathy and ability to represent our Government in the councils of the world, and to heal the angry wounds of war and hate, was bound and gagged and buried in a hole as deep as the cave of Adullam.

Because of these facts I see no other course open but to repudiate Republican leadership and to vote the national Democratic ticket. I am, of course, familiar with all the arguments against such a course, and it would be easier and more comfortable to remain silent. There is no possibility, however, of making the Republican Party the progressive and liberal party of the country if those who want to see the party used as an instrument for advancing the cause of world peace and social justice permit cowardly and selfish leadership to carry the party away from the ideals and principles for which it was organized and to which it was dedicated by men of courage, rugged will and deep conviction.

I consider it a fortunate thing the Democratic Party has nominated a man of your ability and character. I am voting for you because I believe you to be a man; because I believe you will fight for what is right and not simply give lip service to it, and because I believe you will keep your word.

SON BORN TO YOUNG COUNTESS SALM

COUNT IS STILL IN EUROPE

Heiress's Marriage to Salm-von Hoogstraeten on Jan. 9 Last, Was Disapproved by Parents.

A son was born to the Countess Ludwig Salm-von Hoogstraeten, formerly Miss Mary Millicent Rogers, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Henry Huddleston Rogers of this city, on Saturday afternoon at the Lippincott Sanitarium, 667 Lexington Avenue, where it was announced last night that both were "doing fine." Count Salm-von Hoogstraeten is now in the south of Europe.

Miss Rogers was married to the Count in the Municipal Building on Jan. 9, without the assistance of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers refused to approve their daughter's choice, and it was reported at the time that they had cut off her allowance and had made legal arrangements for diverting to some one else the $40,000,000 legacy which was to have gone to her.

Later Countess Salm left for Europe with her husband, where she remained until she was visited by her father, with whom she returned to this country, and at whose estate in Southampton she has passed the Summer. She is the granddaughter of the late H. H. Rogers of Standard Oil, and at the time of her marriage was 20, and the Count, who is the head of the Austrian house of Salm-von Hoogstraeten, was 40.

Countess Salm-von Hoogstraeten has not announced her future plans. Both her mother and father were at the sanitarium when the birth of the eight-pound son was announced, but no indication has been given regarding the future home of the Countess or whether she will join her husband in Europe or be joined by him here.

OPERA SINGERS ARRIVE.

Mme. Matzenauer and Claire Dux, the Latter in "Directoire" Hat.

Among the musical celebrities who arrived yesterday on the Albert Ballin of the Hamburg-American Line from Europe was Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, accompanied by her eleven-year-old daughter Adrienne. Mme. Matzenauer said she had sung in a concert at the Albert Hall for the first time since the commencement of the war in August, 1914. She also sang for the King and Queen of Spain and at Munich, Bavaria, and Berlin.

Before joining the Metropolitan Opera Company for the season in November, Mme. Matzenauer will go on a concert tour, commencing on Oct. 7 at Pittsburgh.

Another singer on the ship was Mme. Claire Dux, Swiss dramatic soprano, who for the last three seasons has been connected with the Chicago Civic Opera Company. She said that she was going on a concert tour to the Pacific Coast.

Mme. Dux added that there was a great demand for American concert artists in Germany, where they were paid in United States dollars and could earn as much as they could in this country.

The singer wore one of the new "Directoire" hats similar in design to those worn by the French revolutionists from 1776 to 1799 before they were superseded by the Napoleonic fashion. The hat was of black felt, shaped like a flat-topped derby, without a brim and bearing slightly to one side a short feather cockade. Mme. Dux wore a long black cloth coat with a collar trimmed with the white feathers of the Arctic ice bird.

Dr. Frederick A. Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, was also a passenger with Mrs. Stock.

COL. J. E. FLETCHER DIES ON HIS YACHT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 28.—Stricken at the end of a two-day yachting cruise in the waters of Narragansett Bay, Colonel Joseph E. Fletcher, millionaire woolen manufacturer of this city, died tonight of heart disease aboard his private yacht Junista as it was tying up to the Rhode Island Yacht Club at Pawtucket.

Colonel Fletcher was accompanied by Mrs. Fletcher, his son Charles and guests. The yacht had just returned from Newport and the party had concluded dinner when Colonel Fletcher was seized.

He was in his fifty-ninth year. He had been one of the leading figures in the woolen industry in this country. He was an organizer of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers. He owned the Coronet Worsted Mills at Mapleville and the Allenton Woolen Mills at Allenton.

He was born in Bradford, England, a son of Charles Fletcher, now of this city. He was a director of several banks and corporations, including the Rhode Island Hospital Corporation.

Colonel Fletcher was married in 1887 to Mary M. Hayes. She died in 1908 and he married Miss Marie Theresa Bollin in New York in 1910. Three children survive him by the first marriage and one by the second.

5,000 AT BACHMAN BIER.

Beloved Chattanooga Presbyterian Pastor Eulogized at Services.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 28.—More than 5,000 people attended the funeral this afternoon of Dr. Jonathan Waverley Bachman, for fifty years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in this city, who died at his home Friday afternoon. The services were held in Memorial Auditorium, because the church auditorium was too small to accommodate the crowd. Many civic and fraternal organizations attended in uniform, including the United Confederate Veterans, Knights Templar, Memorial Association and Daughters of the Confederacy.

Dr. Joseph P. Venable, who succeeded Dr. Bachman as pastor of the church, delivered the funeral oration, while Dr. E. A. Elmore and Dr. T. S. McCallie, lifelong friends and associates of the beloved minister, delivered eulogies. The Knights Templar had charge of the services at the grave.

The body of Dr. Bachman lay in state in the church he had served for so long from noon Saturday until noon Sunday, during which time thousands passed by the bier for a last look at the face of their dead friend and adviser. Shortly after noon the body was removed to the Memorial Auditorium, and for hours before the time set for the services throngs of sorrowing Chattanoogans made their way to the hall. The immense building was filled to capacity and there were many who failed to gain admittance. Officials of the church were the active pallbearers.

Forest Hill Cemetery was lined with automobiles from noon until the cortege reached the burial place. Messages of condolence came to the family from all parts of the country.

What one young housekeeper learned about heat regulation

She solved the problem quickly if not well. When the house got too hot, up went the windows. It might have ended there, but the fuel bin was empty all too soon and the matter of fuel economy was up for serious consideration.

They investigated the Minneapolis Heat Regulator and when they found what great advantages it would bring them, they had it installed in their home. Now perfect heating comfort, the house is never too hot or too cold; real fuel economy, a saving of ⅓ to ½. This is the new order of things with the Minneapolis regulating the heating plant.

The Minneapolis takes complete charge of dampers, drafts or valves. Opens and closes them automatically to maintain a uniform temperature. Provides scientifically correct heating day and night. Ends all work and worry about heating plant regulation. Don't buy or build without making sure the heating plant is Minneapolis-equipped.

Easy Monthly Payments

Investigate the Minneapolis for yourself. You can begin to enjoy its comfort, convenience and economy tomorrow. A small down payment puts it in your home. Quickly and easily installed on any type of heating plant burning any kind of fuel. Visit our office, or phone or write today. Get the facts on our special offer, and free booklet, "The Proper Operation of the Home Heating Plant," containing many simple rules for saving fuel.

Combing the Small Towns for Orders By Telephone

Three of these contacts are made by telephone and the fourth is a personal visit by the same salesman.

Every day 35 dealers are called by telephone and at frequent intervals 25 others are "reminded" by a well planned sales talk from headquarters.

If you could see the monthly sales records of this concern you'd be interested in a plan to supplement personal selling by telephone. Call Longacre Official 5.

DROP PLEA TO GET ADIRONDACK POWER

SEQUEL TO A LONG FIGHT

Civic Bodies Say They Will Continue to Oppose Any Effort to Revive Proposal.

The abandonment of ten years of persistent effort by power interests and others to acquire a foothold in the heart of the Adirondack Forest Preserve, involving millions of dollars, according to the Saranac Lake Chamber of Commerce, was reached several days ago when the following interests withdrew from the State Water Control Commission their application made under the so-called Machold Water Storage law for the creation of a Raquette River Regulating District:

International Paper Company, St. Regis Paper Company, Sneil Power Company, St. Lawrence Transmission Company, the Hannawa Falls Water Power Company, Village of Potsdam, Potsdam Electric Light and Power Company, Village of Norwood, N. Y.; Raquette River Paper Company, Village of Massena, N. Y.; Hanna Paper Corporation and Sherman Lumber Company.

In the campaign against the application, carried on for the last year by various north country organization, it was alleged that the increased value of primary water rights, had the application been granted, would have accrued to power interests without recompense to the State and that there was no public necessity shown.

Spokesmen of the north country civic organizations said that withdrawal at this pre-election period was by no means reassuring and pointed out that there was nothing to prevent at least the filing of new applications. If such applications were filed after election, it was said, they would be opposed by the same organizations and individuals that opposed the original application.

At the State election last Fall the so-called Ferris amendment; which, it was asserted, would have thrown wide open the State Forest Preserve to power exploiters, was defeated by 460,000 majority.

Saw Menace to Hospital.

"This Raquette River Regulating District proposal first aroused the people to the intolerable conditions in connection with just one development of this nature, whereas they learned that the so-called Ferris amendment, which bobbed up later, would, if passed, have fully legalized not only this one undesirable Raquette River development, but in addition thereto would have made possible the creation of sixty millponds in various parts of the heart of the Adirondacks," said a spokesman of the Saranac Lake Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

"The drawing down of the water during the Summer season for power purposes, as proposed, would have left foul-smelling shore lines, exposing to view thousands of devastated acres, including an immense area bordering to within a few hundred yards of the new United States Veterans' Bureau Hospital on the Saranac Lake-Tupper Lake State Road, eventually submerging a portion of this beautiful State Highway, flooding the canoeists' paradise in that part of the famous Raquette River section and completely wiping out permanent Summer camp homes, old fishing grounds and beautiful little lakes, trout brooks and ponds.

"The menace to health and the ruin of scenic beauties in front of the Government Hospital at Tupper Lake, to house 500 sick service men, was brought to the attention of officials at Washington and is said to have been a potent factor in the withdrawal of the application."

The original application by the power and other interests was filed Aug. 28, 1922, and was strenuously opposed by associations of the property owners and communities affected. Starting from this fight and the subsequent campaign against the Ferris amendment, thirty north country civic bodies, under the leadership of Louis Marshall, representing the Saranac Lake Chamber of Commerce, and John G. Agar, President of the Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks, organized to combat this and all further attempts to exploit the Adirondack park.

"Save the Adirondacks from the spoilers" was the slogan in the campaign against the Ferris amendment known on the ballot as Proposition 3 and always associated in the minds of the voters with the proposed Raquette River Regulating District.

"Now that the power interests have withdrawn voluntarily from the field they have avoided all possibility at this particular pre-election period of giving the State Water Control Commission an opportunity to either grant or turn down their application in connection with this alleged objectionable Raquette River District and for which it is claimed no real public necessity was shown at the early hearings fifteen months ago," continued the spokesman for the Saranac Lake Chamber of Commerce.

Missionary Opened Fight.

The Raquette River proposal, he added, would have wrought great damage by raising the Raquette River about thirty or forty feet in the vicinity of the new veterans' hospital.

"The campaign against the project was started by an old Adirondack missionary, who owned a camp on an island in the heart of the proposed Raquette River water storage district which, together with other islands and all the nearby lakes, would have been submerged twenty to thirty feet had the proposal gone through. He heard President Roosevelt in 1903 speak on conservation, looked up the files of the newspapers and found these words, which were used as the rallying cry of the campaign:

"'It is easy to talk against monopoly and denounce the individual who has profited by it, but it is utterly useless to do so. The way to prevent abuse which comes from monopoly of national resources by individuals is by taking action in advance. Nine-tenths of wisdom is being wise in time. If you do not show that wisdom by conserving your great water power, your children will denounce your short-sightedness.'"

The following organizations, largely from the North Country, were active in opposing the Ferris amendment:

Saranac Lake Chamber of Commerce.
Lake Placid Chamber of Commerce.
Tupper Lake Chamber of Commerce.

POLES CATCH 33 BANDITS,

Find Looting of Train Was Directed by Men From Russia.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, Sept. 28.—The robber gang which pillaged a passenger train near Brest-Litovsk is being energetically pursued in the eastern borderland, and already thirty-three of the bandits have been caught. They are mostly local peasants. The leaders and organizers of the raid came from Russia.

The raid is held to be one more proof that the Soviet does not intend to relax its efforts to stir up trouble in Polish eastern territory and, with the help of local bandits, to provoke revolutionary movements. The Polish Government maintains a cautious attitude, fighting the bandits with its police forces.

The Polish Government yesterday agreed to receive the newly appointed Soviet Minister to Warsaw, Peter Voikoff. A month ago the Polish Foreign Office was unwilling to recognize Voikoff's appointment, in view of reports that he had directly taken part in the massacre of the Czar and the Russian imperial family. These reports are denied by the Soviet Government, and the denial apparently satisfied Poland.

Simple, Inexpensive Alterations made it our Show Place

FOR years Fred Jackson's place was a blot on the landscape! One of those square, hipped-roof monstrosities, with a dinky little railing hugging the chimney.

Fred was always going to build a new home—so he never did anything to the old one. Result: it looked uglier and shabbier every year. Then, one day—

He sent for the Barrett Book

On page 12 he found a house just like his, with sketches and plans for improving it. Before the week was out he sent for our local builder and, after a careful estimate of costs, told him to get busy.

Look at the house now—modern, artistic and up-to-date—a house anyone would be proud to own. And if Fred wanted to, he could sell tomorrow at a sweet profit.

You need the Barrett Book

Of course, each old house presents its own peculiar problems. But there are any number of different ways to make old houses attractive. In "Better Homes from Old Houses," all the common types of old-fashioned dwellings are shown. Alterations are suggested for each. You're sure to see a house which resembles your own, and sketches and plans showing you how to improve it.

Of course, the roof is important

When making improvements, lay a new roof of Barrett Shingles right over the old wooden shingles. Low in first cost, easy to lay, Barrett Shingles never need painting or staining, never rot or rust. Their soft colors afford great artistic possibilities, and they are highly fire-resistant. Ask your hardware, building supply or lumber merchant to show you the four styles of Barrett Shingles.

Better Outlook for Manufacturers in All Sections Dwelt Upon.

MEET IN CHICAGO TODAY

American Association Expects 8,000 to 10,000 Members at Its Fiftieth Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Scores of bankers and members of their families arrived in Chicago today, and by noon tomorrow, it is expected, from 8,000 to 10,000 members of the banking fraternity will have arrived for the fiftieth annual convention of the American Bankers' Association. The sessions will run for four days, group meetings taking place at the Congress Hotel and the general meetings in the Auditorium Theatre. All of Chicago's banks and the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago will hold open house for the visitors.

Committee and divisional meetings will be held tomorrow. The first formal general session will be held Tuesday. President Head will open the meeting and the principal speakers will be Edwin T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture, and Dwight W. Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co. The former's talk will be on relations of agriculture to other business and the latter will speak on "International Loans."

Coincident with the convention will be the third annual meeting of the Association of Bank Women, composed of women who have risen to executive positions in the nation's banks. Among those who will speak at the women's sessions are Miss Maud Balch of the Springfield, Mass., National Bank; Mrs. Ralph Beebe of the Commerce Trust Company, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Jean A. Rood of the Bankers' Trust Company, New York City, and Miss Jay Spencer Knapp of the Atlantic and Lowry National Bank, Atlanta, Ga.

Leaders of the Bankers' Association arriving tonight made statements filled with optimism for the future of American business. Principal reasons cited were the beneficial effect of the Dawes plan, better manufacturing conditions and marked improvement in agricultural conditions.

Tell of Business Conditions.

Walter W. Head of Omaha, President of the American Bankers Association said that, "while a boom in business was not likely at this time, he expected a steady improvement in general business conditions.

"The marked advance in prices of farm products, particularly corn, wheat and hogs, gives promise of renewed agricultural prosperity—for the first time since 1920," Mr. Head said. "This will materially increase the purchasing power of those engaged in agriculture—a number greater than one-fourth of our population. This, in turn, will increase the demand for manufactured products, the natural result of which will be a quickening of trade and industry throughout the country.

"The principal adverse element in the situation is the danger that the Presidential election may not be conclusively determined at the polls in November and that the selection of the Chief Executive may be thrown into Congress. This would cause much political uncertainty and undoubtedly would have a disturbing effect upon business general. This can be averted only if the voters are awake to the situation and go to the polls in large numbers to register their choice."

Melvin A. Traylor of Chicago, Chairman of the Association's Economic Policy Commission, said, "There has been considerable improvement in buying in most lines in this section of the country in the last thirty days or so, and it seems to me reasonable to expect a volume of business substantial, as at present, throughout the rest of the year. Beyond that no one can now see months. I am inclined to think the business activity in this country will depend more or less upon the development of the general European situation. I see no cause for excessive pessimism or undue alarm about our business for the next year."

Charles A. Hinsch of Cincinnati, also a former President of the association, said: "Underlying conditions are sound. Effects in nearly every line of endeavor are low. There are possibly few in a few instances manufacturers who find themselves overstocked, but, on the whole, retailers have been very conservative in their buying. Buying today is governed largely by the demand, and merchants and manufacturers are not speculating upon the future."

Sees Satisfactory Outlook.

George E. Roberts, Vice President of the National City Bank of New York, said: "The outlook for business this Fall and for next Summer is very satisfactory. Conditions are more favorable to stability and general prosperity than at any time in recent years. The rise of prices of farm products gives reason for hope that the depression, which has affected the great body of people on the farms, has passed and probably will not return. The last few months have furnished a demonstration that the products of farm labor have been weighed down by a comparatively small surplus, and with the restoration of normal industrial conditions in Europe the increased demand from that quarter, together with the increasing demand of our own growing population, will maintain a higher level of prices hereafter.

"The banking situation is very strong, and the country is accumulating capital sufficient for a vast amount of development work at home, and also to supply anticipated foreign demands. The acceptance of the Dawes plan for the reparation settlement gives promise that industry will be quickened all over the world and that the course of social and industrial progress, which was interrupted by the war, is about to be fully resumed."

Edgar L. Mattson of Minneapolis said: "How any one can be anything but an optimist as to the future I cannot see, considering that the United States contains less than 7 per cent. of the world's area and less than 7 per cent. of its population and still has produced in one year from 50 to 65 per cent. of the things required by the people of the world in the way of food, raiment and other necessities of life."

Alexander Dunbar of Pittsburgh said: "The feeling in the Pittsburgh district is one of hopefulness that the industrial revival, now under way will continue until the November elections. Beyond that date the movement will depend upon the outcome of the balloting and the country's reaction to the event."

C. W. Allendoerfer of Kansas City, Mo., said: "The financial situation in Kansas has been wonderfully improved during the last few months as a result of the excellent crops we have had. The marketing of wheat has already resulted in complete liquidation of a large volume of obligations held by country banks and accounts with country merchants. The country banks and country merchants have in turn paid off what they owe. Merchants and manufacturers report an increase in business, which looks as though it would continue for several months."

Rescued by Policeman Hanging From Roof

While two men held him by the ankles, Patrolman Thomas Connolly, chauffeur for Police Inspector Michael Ahern, swung over the edge of the roof of a burning building at 940 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday morning, and caught Frederick Balsuin, 53 years old, just as he was about to jump from the third and top floor. Connolly held the panic-stricken man by the wrists until firemen put up extension ladders and rescued Balsuin and his wife, who is a paralytic. The building was destroyed.

Those assisting Connolly in his exploit were Patrolman Charles Wolf and Charles Levinger, a member of the Police Reserve.

ASKS BIGGER SUMS FOR HEALTH WORK

DEATH RATES REDUCED

City Has Made Great Strides in Past 20 Years, It Is Pointed Out, but Large Budget Is Needed.

Asserting that the general death rate in New York City has been reduced one-third and the infant mortality rate one-half in the last twenty years, the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor said yesterday in a letter to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment that the death rates would be further reduced by providing larger medical and nursing staffs, as requested by Health Commissioner Monaghan.

The letter, signed by Bailey B. Burritt, general director, appealed to the board to approve in the tentative 1925 budget the request of the Health Department for fifty-three additional nurses, medical directors and dental hygienists. The letter urged the employment of twenty-three more prenatal nurses to conduct an educational service.

"New York City is justly proud of the record of its Health Department," the letter said. "The Bureau of Child Hygiene and the Department of Health has played a large part in bringing this about.

"In the tentative budget for the year 1925 Commissioner Monaghan has asked for an increase which will enable the Child Welfare Bureau to keep abreast with the increasing population of the city and to develop adequately services which have been thoroughly tried in this and other cities.

"The present budget calls for twenty-three additional nurses to conduct a pre-natal educational service for expectant mothers. There are at present fifteen pre-natal nurses attached to the Health Department, of whom twelve were made available by the Sheppard-Towner act, providing Federal aid for pre-natal work. Since over 125,000 births occur annually in this city, such a staff obviously is inadequate.

"The present budget also provides for twenty additional school medical inspectors and twenty additional school nurses. The school medical service in this city is now, and has been for many years, totally inadequate. Each medical inspector is now responsible for 13,771 children and each school nurse is responsible for 5,549 children.

"The Health Department is also asking for ten additional dental hygienists to supplement those already provided, particularly in schools which are now equipped for preventive dental clinics, but for which no service is available."

CONVENT ALARMED BY FIRE NEXT DOOR

Fire, which started under the flooring on the fourth floor of a five-story building at 12 Barclay Street last night, resulted in considerable smoke drifting into the Sisters of Charity convent at 10 Barclay Street, adjoining the burning building, and caused uneasiness among the thirty-five sisters in the building.

An alarm was sent in by Patrolman Frank Centner. Acting Deputy Chief Patrick Walsh found smoke pouring from the fourth floor windows and drifting into the open windows of the convent.

Mgr. James H. McGean, attached to St. Peter's Church, at Barclay and Church Streets, who is 84 years old and is the oldest priest in service in this city, was attracted by the fire engines while in his study in St. Peter's parish house, directly across the street. He became alarmed when he saw the smoke-filled convent and hurried across to the convent. Chief Walsh and the Mother Superior assured him there was no danger to the convent.

The fire, which is believed to have been caused by defective insulation, gave the firemen a half hour's work before it was subdued.

The ground floor of the building is occupied by John Davison & Co., importers of crockery, and contained hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of imported china and crockery.

FOUND A NEW GERMANY.

Bernard H. Ridder Says Dawes Plan Brought a Spirit of Peace.

Bernard H. Ridder, publisher of the Staats-Zeitung, said yesterday on his return from a visit to Central Europe that the Dawes plan was not altogether flawless, but that there had been nothing else for Germany to do but to accept it. He and his family came back on the Hamburg-American liner Albert Ballin.

"The fault of the Dawes plan," Mr. Ridder said, "seems to lie in the fact that it does not definitely stipulate the amount of reparations that Germany will have to pay and therefore might be used some time as a club, the people fear. However, it is probable that conferences will take place between allied and German officials from time to time for adjustment of payments, the payments to be placed on a basis somewhat like the partial payment plan."

Mr. Ridder appeared hopeful that Germany eventually would emerge from under the mountain of war debt and regain her prosperity.

"Through the allied loan promised in the Dawes plan," he continued, "and through private loans, Germany's credit is secured. Her commercial prosperity is growing, and although there is some worry over the final amount of the reparations bill, Germany is willing to put her nose to the grindstone. There is a spirit of peace and content in Germany that was not there two years ago."

Another passenger was Albert Buchman, New York architect, who returned from a visit at Munich to his mother, now in her ninety-third year. Mr. Buchman said that foreigners who wished to visit Bavaria now had no difficulties. Police regulations regarding a stay of more than 24 hours in Munich have been done away with. Conditions in Bavaria, and indeed throughout Germany, were improving, he said.

STRESEMANN ANGERS HIS POLITICAL FOES

He Insists in Speech He Considers Nationalist Participation in Cabinet Desirable.

RESENTS HERRIOT'S URGING.

Calls Demand That Government Break Loose From "Old Germany" Unwarranted Interference.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—Foreign Minister Stresemann is still torn between the desire to have his friends the German Nationalist Party obtain a share in governing Germany and fear that he will not find enough backing among the parties now forming the German Government to permit of Nationalist participation.

In a speech last night before a meeting of his own particular party, the German Volkspartei, he said that he considered participation of the Nationalists in the Government "desirable." He added that he felt convinced the Nationalists would realize that the Dawes plan was the foundation of present-day Germany's foreign policy and loyally contribute toward carrying out the plan.

He objected vigorously to Premier Herriot's recent demand that the German Government break loose from "old Germany," insisting that the Nationalists did not represent old Germany and that the French Premier's demand was an unwarranted interference with German internal affairs.

"Our task is to build a bridge between the past and the present," said Dr. Stresemann—thus bearing out those who believe that he would rather shine in German history as a successful party leader than as the Foreign Minister instrumental in reconstructing Europe.

Though any one who heard his speech on Aug. 29 in defense of the Dawes plan and the London compact realizes how well Dr. Stresemann understands that his career is bound up with the successful carrying out of the Dawes plan, it is also obvious that party considerations are to him fully as important as international problems. This exasperates his foes to such an extent that they break out every once in a while with heated demands that he be ousted from office. His speech last night has again started these foes on the warpath.

"No politician gives foreign countries and the German nation so many riddles to solve as Dr. Stresemann," says a writer in today's Liberal Boersen Courier.

Georg Bernhard, chief editor of the Vossische Zeitung, who often before has taken Dr. Stresemann to task, comes out with a leading article which though couched in language which is temperate compared with other German political outbursts, nevertheless well portrays the exasperation caused in many quarters by Dr. Stresemann's endeavors to prove that the Nationalists, if admitted to the Government, will be loyal supporters of the Dawes plan despite the fact that they made violent opposition to this plan. The main feature of their pre-election campaign and of their Reichstag attitude up to the very moment when they were confronted with the necessity of casting a decisive vote—when enough of them voted in favor of the Dawes plans to give the Government the necessary majority for going ahead with it.

"It is quite inexplicable," says Bernhard, "that Dr. Stresemann does not realize more clearly how such incidents serve to emphasize more and more the divergence between Stresemann, the Foreign Minister, and Stresemann, the party leader. As Foreign Minister it is to his interest that the soundings now being made to ascertain the conditions of Germany's entry into the League shall result as favorably as possible. In order that this shall be possible it is necessary that Germany should win, as much as she can, the confidence of the foreign powers, both with regard to financial matters and to international reconciliations.

"But nothing is more calculated to shake this feeling of confidence than the possibility of having the Nationalists enter the German Government. Even if Germans themselves forget what efforts the Nationalists made, even within the last few weeks, against every attempt at an international understanding, the foreign powers certainly have not forgotten."

In seeking to find out exactly what Dr. Stresemann is trying to do, Herr Bernhard advances the interesting hypothesis that perhaps he wants to get the Nationalist Reichstag members who voted in favor of the Dawes plan to secede from their party and form, together with his own Volkspartei, a new and stronger organization under his leadership.

Meanwhile, those who have opposed all along the entry of Nationalists into the Government—foremost among them being the Socialists—are preparing a furious fight against Dr. Stresemann's renewed drive on behalf of his friends. Their belief that Nationalist participation in the Government just now would materially lessen the chances of an understanding between the Entente and Germany on the basis of the Dawes plan.

PRESS IRISH TO AGREE ON BOUNDARY ISSUE

Efforts Are Making to Get Them to Settle It Without Outside Interference.

LONDON, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—As the time approaches for Parliament to reassemble to deal with the Irish boundary dispute, powerful influences appear to be at work in both Northern and Southern Ireland and in England to bring about a settlement of the controversy by mutual consent of the two Irish communities.

Detached observers, relying upon the conviction that no question is finally settled until it is settled right, are expressing the hope, if not the expectation, that Irishmen will yet be able to gather in a round table conference and settle this long standing dispute without outside interference.

The Free State treaty provided for a boundary commission to settle the question of the frontier to the north, among other things, "in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants." Two of the necessary commissioners have been named, but Northern Ireland, by refusing to name the third, has held up all the functions of the commissioners.

The trouble seems to hinge on the fact that President Cosgrave of the Free State and Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, are unable to meet each other on moderate ground because of the extreme views of the die-hards within their respective sections. Premier MacDonald and his two predecessors in the Premiership want a settlement by consent, and Lord Dunraven, now a Free State Senator; Viscount Grey, former Foreign Secretary; John R. Clynes, Lord Privy Seal, have all voiced the view that a satisfactory and lasting solution must be looked for in a settlement by agreement.

"Irish unity cannot come through the use of physical force," said Mr. Clynes. "Agreement between the North and South is the supreme need of Ireland. If the Irish leaders fail to settle their quarrel on the boundary issue, however, the British Parliament must not fail to honor the clear intentions of the treaty entered into with the Irish leaders."

BEDFORD HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The Bedford Hills police, working with Deputy Sheriffs, sent broadcast by radio tonight a description of an itinerant farm hand who, it is believed, killed Martin Rougan, 80 years old, well-to-do Bedford Hills farmer, on Friday night. The name of the man is withheld, but it was said that he had been seen about Rougan's farm a day before the murder. It also was learned that Rougan, whose head was split open with an axe, had drawn money from a bank to pay his taxes. He was reputed to have been worth $80,000 and he lived the life of a hermit.

Fingerprints were found in the kitchen where the farm hand had eaten while working on the farm. Copies of the prints were sent to police stations and Sheriffs tonight.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 28.—Yale University students earned toward their college expenses $382,206.87 during the last year, according to a report made public today by Director Albert Beecher Crawford, of the Bureau of Appointments.

The total of earnings secured through the bureau was $287,771.77, of which $195,958.47 was earned during term time. The Summer earnings through the bureau amounted to $91,812.80 and those independently of the bureau to $25,964.30. Term time earnings of students who secured their own employment was reported at $69,212.07.

Thirty-two per cent. of the total enrollment of the university is represented by 1,354 men who registered for term-time employment during the year.

"A gratifying result of this year's work," the report says, "is the remarkable increase in board-earning positions of $49,808.15, through which 566—195 more than last year—were able to eliminate their largest single expense item. Total term-time earnings of $195,958.47 were made by 1,072 men through 2,270 separate positions referred by this office."

The largest reported amounts earned by individuals are contained in a table which shows that three men earned more than $2,000 each; one earned between $1,700 and $1,800; one between $1,600 and $1,700; two between $1,500 and $1,600; twenty between $1,000 and $1,500, and 124 between $500 and $1,000.

The jobs these students undertook cover a wide field of employment, 64 different types of work being supplied through the bureau. Through the Athletic Association 239 students earned $3,902.75 working as guards, ticket collectors, sellers and clerks during the football season; 128 earned $2,448.50 officiating at Winter sports, and 101 earned $1,557.50 at baseball and track.

Three students earned $75 through blood transfusion operations. Nine others collected $55.50 as artists' models. Twelve earned $48.50 as butlers, and five picked up $55 doing detective work. The railway mail service during the Christmas vacation gave employment to thirty men, whose work as mail clerks brought them $1,709.92. Three men received $1,978 as reporters, and selling brought $1,905.30 to forty-one students. Two men earned $4,204.39 getting out football programs, and five earned $1,944.54 on baseball programs.

Tutoring accounted for perhaps the largest single item in student term-time earnings, more than $11,000 being reported under this head.

Thirty-seven students earned $22,800 selling during the Summer months. Sixteen earned $8,000 working for the Pullman Company. Twenty-one received $6,140 for working at Summer hotels, and one man earned $240 acting as a university guide. Thirty-four Summer tutors earned $14,212.50 in the three months of their vacation and 37 student salesmen received $22,800 for their work.

HERRIOT NOW FACES KEEN BUDGET FIGHT

Past Figures Show He Must Either Refuse State Employes' Demands or Lay New Taxes.

REPORT OF SPECIAL LEVY

Finances and Religious Question Appear to Be the Coming Issues, With Foreign Affairs Secondary.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—France is awaiting with keenest interest the publication of the Government's budget plans, promised for Tuesday. Premier Herriot during the campaign promised to reduce taxes, give more pay to State employes and balance the budget. He has dropped the plan to reduce taxes, has omitted from the tentative budget increases for State employes and in all probability will have to impose new taxes to balance the budget.

Either way he turns he is sure of much criticism. If he refuses the increases demanded by the fonctionnaires, which will add 3,000,000,000 francs to the budget, he will have trouble with the unified Socialists, on whose 105 votes in the Chamber depends his majority, while if he imposes new taxes he will get criticized by the rest of the country.

For some weeks there has been a persistent report in Paris that Herriot intended to make a capital levy. Following a denial, it is now reported, he intends to levy on the unearned increment of real estate.

Referring to this report, the Temps says tonight in the financial column:

"The future of France presents itself clearly—either the program of the Left bloc will be applied, and that will mean to public finances, or the Government will tend to the necessities of credit, and then the country will be saved."

Inasmuch as the expenditure planned for 1925 amounts to 30,000,000,000 francs, not including the increase for State employes, as compared with the 24,000,000,000-franc budget, which caused a 2,000,000,000-franc deficit, it is evident Herriot must find new income if he balances the budget.

In addition to the budget fight which will attend the reopening of Parliament, the religious issue is fast warming up. Herriot's promise to enforce strictly the anti-clerical laws not only on the rest of France, but on the Alsace-Lorraine as well, has aroused all the Catholic interests and indicates that the religious issue may once more become the dominating factor in French domestic politics.

It is expected that the fight against Herriot will be waged on domestic political questions. Indeed, the opposition has no clear cause against him on foreign policy. While it is expected that the budget will fail of passage even if the Unified Socialists carry out their threat to vote against it, since the Right will in all likelihood vote for the budget, a split between the Radical Socialists and Unified Socialists on the budget would almost surely mean the beginning of the end of the Left bloc and open the way for Herriot's defeat on some other issue as, for instance, the church fight.

The general expectation is that his opponents will give battle to Herriot during the month of November, and if these efforts to break the Left bloc succeed it is believed a Government would be formed by Briand resting on the central group of parties, including Herriot's Radical Socialists, but dropping the Unified Socialists. It is considered by many that the only way this fight can be avoided is by Herriot's offering Briand the post of Foreign Minister, although it is recalled Briand refused a place in Herriot's Cabinet when it was formed.

CITY BUS KILLS BOY; DRIVER IS BEATEN

MOTORCYCLIST A VICTIM

Bottles were hurled and blows from fists were rained upon the driver of a municipal bus yesterday when the machine ran down and killed John Difelice, 6 years old, of 40 Spring Street, at Spring and Mulberry Streets. The boy had stepped from the sidewalk, carefully holding a charlotte russe, and walked into the path of a bus driven by Harry Nussbaum, 19, of 57 Cannon Street.

Scores of men and women leaped at the driver, many of the men punching him while women stung him with bottles' windows. Patrolman John Brennan saved the driver, but to do so had to blow his whistle for help. Nussbaum was taken to Mercer Street Police Station on a technical charge of homicide. He said that after his experience with the mob he was glad to be in custody of the police. Witnesses, according to the police, said the bus was going at a fast rate of speed.

Joseph Shay, auto mechanic of 322 Richmond Terrace, New Brighton, Staten Island, died last evening in Staten Island Hospital an hour after his motorcycle had run into an automobile near Borough Hall, St. George. His skull was fractured. The automobile driver, Joseph Sullivan of 172 Richmond Terrace, was exonerated of blame.

Trying out his new pushmobile for the first time, James Sirl, 12, of 402 West Forty-sixth Street, was so seriously injured when struck by an automobile driven by John J. Gaire in front of his home that at St. Mary's Hospital it was said his condition was critical.

Two men were hurt yesterday when a taxicab operated by Max Tobias of 48 Market Street crashed into a newsstand at Whitehall and South Streets. The injured, taken to Broad Street Hospital, were John Hastings, 45, of Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, and Thomas Horan, 52, of 37 Bridge Street, owner of the stand. Hastings suffered injuries to the back and Horan received head injuries. Tobias was taken to Old Slip Police Station on a charge of reckless driving.

Five persons were injured yesterday in a collision in Tompkinsville, S. I., between a touring car and a taxicab. All were taken to Staten Island Hospital. Louis Dascher of Concord, S. I., was driving his taxicab down a steep hill when, at Victory and Cebra Avenues, it struck a touring car operated by Allan McKinnon of 70 Windsor Road, Four Corners, S. I. Dascher was thrown through his windshield. He received cuts on the head. With McKinnon were his daughter Lillian, Mrs. Hannah Calansen, 70 years old, and her grandson Ferdinand Calansen. Mrs. Calansen suffered internal injuries. The others were not seriously hurt.

The wooden platform of the Third Avenue elevated structure at Eighteenth Street caught fire yesterday morning after a collision between a motor truck and a surface car had set the latter ablaze. It took firemen fifteen minutes to put out the flames. The truck, owned by the Metropolitan News Company and loaded with papers, was driven by James Bessemer, 28, of 256 South First Street, Brooklyn.

Bessemer was driving north on Third Avenue. At Eighteenth Street, in trying to avoid a taxicab, he swerved sharply against a surface car operated by Motorman John Carmody of 2,396 Third Avenue. The gasoline tank broke and in a moment the truck and its load were in flames.

Patrolman Patrick H. English, of the East Twenty-second Street Police Station, rescued Bessemer from the truck, quieted the surface car passengers and turned in a fire alarm.

The body of the man killed Wednesday night by a motor truck at Forty-second Street and Third Avenue was identified yesterday as that of Joseph Shoeman, 56, of Philadelphia.

Five Injured in Crash.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 28.—Five persons were injured, one probably fatally, in an automobile accident today on the White Horse Pike near Hammonton. A new sedan crashed into the rear of a motor truck of the National Storage Warehouse Company of Atlantic City, Harold C. Lutz, 26 years old, of Norristown, Pa., driver of the sedan, is in Cooper Hospital here in a critical condition, his skull fractured. Caroline McKeever, 20, of Norristown, suffered two fractured ribs. Gladys Harrold, 21, of Freedom, Pa., was badly injured on the head. Helen Holwitz, 24, and T. W. Hemmings, 29, both of Norristown, also were hurt. All were in the sedan. The party was on the way to Atlantic City.

100,000 AT CONEY ISLAND.

A post-season crowd estimated at 100,000 went to Coney Island yesterday, and the Chamber of Commerce there interpreted the attendance as a favorable omen for the drive which Coney Island is launching this Winter to become an all-year-round resort.

Visitors found many concessions and restaurants open, and some of the popular features at the amusement parks were still available.

The number of heads bobbing in the surf suggested early Summer, and the bathers report that, while the air had a sting, the water was agreeably warm.

HEREAFTER HUNTING 14 YEARS IN AFRICA

A. J. Klein, Formerly of Natural History Museum, Is World's Second Lion Killer.

BRINGS UNIQUE PICTURES

Native Murder and Game Drive, and Lions in Action Shown in 20,000 Feet of Film.

Returning home after fourteen years of hunting big game in Africa, the world's second greatest lion killer paid a visit yesterday to the American Museum of Natural History, where he was formerly employed. He brought with him many rare specimens and remarkable pictures.

The runner-up among lion slayers is A. J. Klein, formerly State Taxidermist of New York and a member of the scientific staff of the American Museum of Natural History. There are eighty-eight lions to his string. He is second only to Leslie Simpson of California, who has hunted them for twenty-five years and accounted for about 120. While downing eighty-eight himself, Klein has taken part in hunts in which more than 400 have been slain. Many of his lions have been killed right off the end of his gun.

Klein is small, short, thin, quick-eyed and nervous. He is young, although he went over to Africa nearly fourteen years ago to collect for the American Museum and remained there ever since. His greatest trophies are not, however, the specimens which he brought with him this time, but 20,000 feet of film of native hunts, native murders, groups numbering up to 2,000 zebras and gnus, giraffe drives, swarms of hyenas, lions tug-of-warring over zebra carcasses and other remarkable pictures of African game, natives and scenery. One of his stills was pronounced at the American Museum to be the greatest photograph of a wild lion ever taken. Lions have been snapped frequently from ambush at waterholes and caught on the run in the open, but the picture in question is said to be the only fine study of a wild lion at his ease, sunning himself before entering his lair.

Slayers Traced by Arrows.

Equaling the best animal pictures in interest are films concerning a triple murder with poisoned arrows, followed by unique detective work which led to the hanging of the murderers. On his camera expedition Klein was camped at the junction of the Tana and Thika Rivers when the poisoned arrow tragedy occurred. Near his camp three Wa Kamba natives, who were driving cattle, were killed. A fourth escaped with a flesh wound, and Klein managed to save his life by the use of antiseptics. Finding a white man in the vicinity, the murderers fled. Not one of them had been seen, but they nevertheless were traced and hanged by the identification marks on the arrow heads.

"They poison their arrows," he said, "by smearing the iron heads with a deadly tar which is made by repeatedly boiling the wood of a shrub which bears flowers like the heliotrope. The poison kills their game, but does not spoil the meat, with the exception of that immediately surrounding the wound, and this they cut out.

"I secured up nineteen arrows afterward. Now in Africa, the arrow-maker of each tribe puts marks of identification on all his arrows, a different mark for every man in the tribe. It may be a triangle, or a line and three dashes, or anything of the kind. It is the identification of the owner, and it is necessary for the natives because it enables them to tell who killed an elephant or a lion, or any other game. The man who did the killing has his arrowhead to prove it.

"I took the nineteen arrowheads to the District Governor of Kitwei and told him the story. He found the arrow-maker who had made them, identified the men who used these particular marks and hanged them."

Mr. Klein has a series of pictures of this tragedy, showing that even in the heart of Africa the important figures in a murder mystery are dogged and harassed by the camera.

Photographs Native Game Drive.

Another unique set of pictures give the finish of a great native game drive in German East Africa. Although he had led fifty-six big game hunts, including hunts for Col. Paul Rainey and Lady Grace MacKenzie, Mr. Klein regards himself as a game conservationist. His lion killing record is not, in his opinion, a circumstance to the contrary, because lions are the great slaughterers of game in Africa.

"The great native game drives are the menace to African game, not the expeditions of white hunters," said Mr. Klein. "We are cooperating with the authorities to stop native game drives, but it is impossible to control the natives over great tracts of country. I got these pictures accidentally, finding their pits just at the end of the drive.

"The natives were alarmed when they saw me, but finding that I was not an official, they permitted me to take the pictures. In the pits were four giraffes, five eland, which are the greatest of African antelopes, zebras, gnus, hartebeeste, several impala, which are the most beautiful of gazelles, and other kinds of gazelles. There were fifty-four animals in all."

One of Mr. Klein's special exploits was that of getting packs of hyenas to pose. They have been photographed singly before, but it is difficult to get them in large groups because they break up and hurry to their lairs before daybreak. By skilful appeals to their greed, however, Mr. Klein kept them up after sunrise for his films.

His films show hyenas feeding, jackals darting in, snatching a bite and darting out, with vultures and marabou and storks in the background awaiting their chance—all being the beneficiaries of the lion which originally made the kill. The lion is the main support of all four.

The pictures, which take in hundreds of zebras, gnus, gazelles and other game, were taken with a 12-inch lense. In the course of great migrations caused by droughts which send hundreds of thousands of animals from Tanganyika into Ngoro-Ngoro, where they graze on the floor of the greatest crater in the world. The great Ngoro-Ngoro game concentrations were reported here a year ago by T. Alexander Barns, the explorer and hunter, who is now in Africa seeking a mate for John Daniel II. Mr. Klein succeeded in filming lion raids on the migrating game, one showing two lions pulling down a zebra and trying to drag it in opposite directions.

EXPLAINS AIRMAN'S SUICIDE

Probably Due to Pain From Old Injury, Says Wife Here.

Mrs. Margaret Webb of 508 St. Marks Avenue, Brooklyn, learned yesterday that her husband, Harry Williams Webb, an aviator, had committed suicide by poison in Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Webb, who contradicted reports that Webb had left here because of her opposition to his interest in aviation, said he had gone West for his health.

About two years ago, Mrs. Webb said, Webb fell in a plane near Hackensack, breaking both arms and legs. After his apparent recovery, he suffered continuous pain in the fractures and, thinking it possibly due to the weather here, sought the balmier climate of the Pacific Coast. She assumed he had found no relief.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb, the latter the daughter of Mrs. Martha McElroy, were married in 1919. During the war Webb was injured by the backfire of a gun on board an oil tanker piping between New York and Mexico. His home was in Georgetown, Texas.

Imbrie's Body Reaches Quantico.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The body of Robert Imbrie, the American Vice Consul who was killed by a mob at Teheran, Persia, in July, lay tonight aboard the light cruiser Trenton at Quantico, Va., in the care of relatives and State Department representatives. It will be brought to Washington early tomorrow for funeral services in which President Coolidge, Secretary Hughes and Persian diplomatic representatives will take part. The Trenton entered the Virginia Capes yesterday and was escorted up the bay by the battleship Wyoming.

Boiler Explosion Causes Fire in Passaic Synagogue

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 28.—The synagogue of the Congregation Shomri Shabath, 76 Madison Street, was damaged by fire early this morning, caused by a boiler explosion in the basement. Every window in the building was broken and part of the walls of the basement were shattered.

The boiler was used for heating water. Isaac Wasser, the caretaker, said he fired it before he discovered that the water had been drained off by some person. Temporary repairs were made so that there would be no interference with the services in connection with the Jewish New Year.

SHOT DEAD IN CLUB BY CUSTOMS GUARD

OTHERS IN ROOM IN TERROR

But Quit Card Tables, Overpower Federal Officer and Take Weapon From Him.

Crazed by bad liquor, according to the police, William A. Farley, a United States Customs guard, walked into the clubrooms of the Dennis J. McGuiness Association at 109 Commerce Street in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn last night, brandished a pistol to the terror of some thirty men who were playing cards, and then fired twice. The first bullet drilled through the ceiling. The second hit William Walsh, a crippled boilermaker's helper, of 224 Twelfth Street, and dropped him to the floor.

Before Farley could fire again his club-fellows closed in on him, wrested away the gun and pinioned his arms. They turned him over to Patrolman Quill of the Hamilton Avenue station, who stood guard over him until the arrival of an ambulance from Long Island College Hospital.

As soon as Quill had seen the injured man on the way he took Farley, whom he described as "stupid with drink," to the station. Walsh was found to have a bullet in his abdomen. He died a half hour after being admitted to the hospital. A charge of homicide then was made against Farley and he was held without bail. Detectives McElferman and Baker and Assistant District Attorney Vincent Sabbatino of Kings County questioned him without getting any information of value.

Men who saw the shooting said it was entirely unprovoked, that Farley had no known grudge against Walsh and that any one of their number might just as well have chanced to be the victim.

Farley lives at 119 Conover Street and is 21 years old. He is known as "Buck" Farley.

Backshot Fired Into Group Trespassing in Graveyard Near Camden, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 28.—One boy is dying and six others are nursing buckshot wounds tonight because a caretaker fired both barrels of a shotgun when he caught them trespassing this afternoon in Arlington Cemetery. The cemetery lies in Pensauken township, just outside Camden.

The story of the caretaker, Samuel Cattling, lodged in the Camden jail without bail to await the outcome of the wounds of the boy most seriously hurt, insists it was an accident. He says he only fired to frighten the boys after having warned them against trespassing a week ago, and that as he pulled the trigger of the second barrel he stumbled. That brought his line of fire directly into the huddled group of youngsters.

George Nicholason of 2,804 Arthur Avenue, 14 years old, fell with wounds in the side of his head and near his heart. Harry Silvester, 16 years old, was shot in both legs. Frank Burke and Frank Chandler, each 13, received lesser hurts, and two other boys who ran away without telling their names also were hit, according to their companions.

Cattling, as soon as he saw the effect of his fire, dropped the gun, ran to his house and telephoned to Chief Cox of the Pensauken police and Lawrence Boran, chief of the county detectives. These two rushed to the cemetery, borrowed an automobile and loaded Nicholason and Cooper into it and sped with them to Cooper Hospital. There it was said that Nicholason's condition was grave. The other boys received medical attention at home.

Besides looking after the cemetery Cattling runs a truck farm on the cemetery property. He told police boys had been persistent thieves in his truck patches and that on last Sunday he became so angered when he caught some red handed that he warned them if they ever came back he would shoot.

Today he lay in wait, and toward dusk saw the group of youngsters trooping across the field, helping themselves to his vegetables. The lads, scared when they were discovered, huddled together under an instinct for protection, and when Cattling fired not one escaped.

VETERAN SHOT DEAD AFTER GETTING BONUS

Stephen Pucsetti, 28, a World War veteran, was killed by an unseen gunman last night in front of 193 Macdougal Street. Pucsetti received and cashed on Saturday a soldiers' bonus check for $120, and yesterday he invited several friends to dinner in a restaurant near where he was shot.

On leaving the restaurant he left his friends and started for his home at 83 Sullivan Street. He had not gone a block when one of his friends, Joseph Aloise, of 105 West Third Street, heard four shots. Hurrying back he found Pucsetti lying on the sidewalk. He died in the arms of his father while going to St. Vincent's Hospital in a taxi.

UNTERMYER ASSAILS THE SHIPPING BOARD

PART OF A PLOT, HE SAYS

Demands a Retraction From Congressman E. L. Davis, Who Had Alleged Irregularities.

Samuel Untermyer launched an attack yesterday on the Shipping Board, which he charged with unfairly taking Government ships in the Rotterdam and Bordeaux service away from the Cosmopolitan Shipping Company, Inc., of 42 Broadway, and awarding them to the Black Diamond Steamship Company.

Mr. Untermyer asserted that the transfer of Government ships had been brought about by false charges that irregularities by Cosmopolitan employes had cost the Government $1,400 a month. Mr. Untermyer wrote a letter to Congressman E. L. Davis of the House Shipping Committee threatening a libel suit unless the Congressman retracted charge that Cosmopolitan employes had been guilty of irregularities.

"The entire performance is charged," Mr. Untermyer wrote, "to be part of a plot to turn the business of the Cosmopolitan Company to the Black Diamond Company, which had been theretofore attempted and had failed, but which has now been brought about by the published charges made by you, against which the Cosmopolitan Company and its officials are now complaining and for which they seek redress."

A. F. Mack, President of the Cosmopolitan Company, issued a statement in which he said:

"The Cosmopolitan Company has been successfully operating vessels for the Government for the past seven years, during which time it has earned for the Government over $8,000,000 in operating profits, a record in marked contrast with other operations of the Shipping Board.

"The throwing to our company of the 'sop' of the continued operation of the French Atlantic service (which we ourselves established with our own ships in 1915, long before the Shipping Board came into being) is not going to prevent our ventilating the true inwardness of this award.

"This action of the board was, we understand, not unanimous and was taken in opposition to the unanimous recommendation of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and every officer and department head of that corporation, and in direct contradiction to the Administration's policy of economy and efficiency in Governmental affairs.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the consolidation of this service would save to the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars per annum, and it is also a matter of common knowledge that based upon efficiency and past results the Cosmopolitan Company is the logical selection as managing agent for this consolidation. It has now apparently been abandoned."

CHANGE BUYING RULES.

New Indian Purchasing Methods Offer Chance for Business.

One of the important features of the "New Stores Rules" which govern purchases made by the Indian Government is an extension in the power to make purchases of foreign products, according to Emmett A. Chapman of the Far Eastern Division of the Department of Commerce. American manufacturers will, under these rules, be given a greater opportunity to participate in supplying the needs of the Indian Government.

Another feature of the new rules, important to the industrial community of India, is the granting of preference to goods of domestic manufacture in all purchases made by the public service. Even under the old scheme of giving preference to materials manufactured either partially or wholly in India from either Indian or imported raw materials, however, the Government's importation of stores from abroad is not expected to be materially reduced.

"Some idea of the extent and character of Indian Government purchases may be gained from a study of the annual importation of Government supplies," reports Mr. Chapman. "During the fiscal year 1923-24 Government stores were imported to the extent of nearly 100,000,000 rupees. During the two preceding years the amount was considerably greater, running as high as 162,512,031 rupees for 1921-22 and 195,282,885 rupees for 1919-20.

"At first glance these totals look large, but when the vast amount of work being carried on by the Government is considered it is little wonder that they are not larger. Such Government projects as the Lloyd barrage and other similar irrigation schemes, the construction of railroads and automobile roads, the building of docks, the deepening and widening of river channels, and the carrying out of numerous other projects by the Indian Government require large quantities of materials which heretofore and at the present time Indian factories are unable to supply."

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington has published a special circular which gives in full the new rules governing purchases by the Indian Stores Department. A copy will be mailed upon application.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

More Light on the General Situation—Testimony of the Railway Traffic.

The course of last week's markets served to define a financial situation which, with all the conflicting influences at work upon it, is nevertheless in line with the logic of events. The recurrent driving up of prices, not only on the Stock Exchange and the wheat market but in corn and cotton, showed unmistakably the trend of speculative instinct. This may have been a result of exceptionally easy money or of belief that the long-delayed trade revival could still be depended on. But that the general financial public was not a buyer, and that its absence checked the advance in prices after each speculative demonstration, no one disputed.

Under all these varying influences one might have expected the markets (especially on the Stock Exchange) to act precisely as they acted last week. But the week also brought into strong relief some other and rather remarkable aspects of the situation. The weekly mercantile reviews have repeated their story of "cross-currents in trade," "merchants pursuing a policy of caution," "hand-to-mouth buying" only for "immediate visible requirements." This is the kind of attitude which the consuming community often takes when trade reaction is beginning or has not yet run its course. But on the other hand, it is now six months since shrinkage of forward orders and curtailment of production began on a very substantial scale, and there are two or three indices of trade which ought after such an interval to show the effect of contracting general business.

Checks drawn on the country's banks should indicate trade reaction and falling prices by decrease in their aggregate amount. Loading of merchandise for distribution by the railways should similarly decrease, in line with reduced consumption. But these two indications are pointing in exactly the opposite direction. Clearing House exchanges have been reaching the highest figures ever reported at this time of year. Loadings of freight on the country's railways, which had for many months been showing decrease from 1923, have increased to the largest total on record for the week reported on.

A month ago the increasing railway traffic was ascribed primarily to the unprecedented shipment of grain to the export market. Even so, it was possible to argue, on the basis of experience, that a grain movement of that kind has itself been invariably the forerunner of general trade revival. But last week's statements did not leave the case to that.

It was frequently remarked, during the worst of the recent industrial reaction, that distribution of general merchandise was holding up unaccountably well. In half a dozen weeks of July and August, when total loadings were far below last year, it was observed that business in this class of products (which best reflects volume of retail trade) had actually run beyond 1923. It was left for last week's report, however, to show a wholly unprecedented distribution of such merchandise, loadings of which, in the week reported on, reached 254,314 cars, as compared with the previous high record of 254,253 in the first week of last October. Even with the more indefinite classification of "miscellaneous freight" included, the 648,021 cars of last week's report ran beyond the previous weekly maximum.

How are these unmistakable proofs of immense and increasing consumption of merchandise to be reconciled with steel production, even after the August recovery, nearly 40 per cent. below the average of last March, or with orders on the Steel Corporation's books 39 per cent. less than a year ago? Barometers of trade would seem to be conflicting. The only convincing explanation is that the policy of ordering goods only for "near-by delivery" is being pursued as consistently now as it was six months ago, but that the quantity ordered for such early shipment is in most lines of business wholly unparalleled. The two achievements are practicable, for the reason that mills are nowhere working to capacity and that neither a violent rise in prices nor a future scarcity of goods is apprehended.

As to why that policy is so universally adopted, and as to whether it can be continued indefinitely with steady expansion in consumption, those are different questions. If it should prove to be the case that merchants, as well as bankers and the investing public, are suspending plans for other than a "quick turn" in the market until they know the result of the Nov. 4 election, this would not be the first Presidential year in which that was the Autumn situation.

PRICES SLIGHTLY HIGHER.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 28.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of American commodity prices last week, based on 100 as the average price of 1913, is 147.8, compared with 147.3 the preceding week and 148.7 two weeks ago.

The highest percentage of the year to date was 155.2, on Feb. 9; the lowest, 142.3, on June 29. The highest percentage since the war was 247, in May, 1920; the lowest, 150, in January, 1922.

Crump's British index number, as cabled for the past week, was 159.5, as compared with 158.1 in the week ending Sept. 19, with 157.9 in the week ending Sept. 12 and an August average of 155.9.

Believe Germany Bought Her Own Bonds.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Notwithstanding the evident and fully admitted fact that the week's collapse in German bonds was brought about by Berlin's official declaration that there is no possibility of reassessment of values, the London market nevertheless firmly believes that Germany is seizing every opportunity of getting these bonds back with a view to subsequent cancellation.

COLLAPSE IN WAR LOAN STIRS BERLIN

Financial View Is That the Speculators Have Themselves to Blame.

WERE ABUNDANTLY WARNED

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The outstanding sensation on last week's markets here was the collapse of the speculation in German public bonds, which reached its inevitable end when Finance Minister Luther, reiterating the Government's determination not to "revalue," clinched that decision by announcing a scheme to help original bondholders, but only under certain specified conditions. This induced a terrific slump in all State bonds.

Enormous losses have been suffered, for which the bull speculators may thank themselves, as they were repeatedly warned, by Government and by reputable financial journals, not to cherish illusions regarding an all-around raising of redemption values by decree.

The Reichstag parties are largely responsible, they having tried to catch votes during the May elections by making absolutely unrealizable promises to bondholders. Luther's plan is to pay, but exclusively to original subscribers to the war loan who are now destitute, pensions of 2 per cent. in gold on their nominal holdings of war loan. No pensioner, however, is to get more than 1,000 gold marks yearly. The pensions are terminable and non-transferable.

Since this solution absolutely excludes all who purchased the war loan after 1918 and also de facto excludes neutrals who subscribed during the war, the announcement of Luther's plan necessarily caused a precipitous break in war loans and all other Federal State loans. Last week, in fact, there were practically no buyers.

The war loan, which Sept. 24 was quoted 1,130, fell to 780 and on Friday, the closing business day, dropped further to 370, ending at 485. Prussian 8½s, which were 1,770 on the 24th, went to 900, and many other loans fell below half of their highest price of the week.

German Government's Plan.

Luther's scheme does not formally include State or municipal loans, but as Prussian, Bavarian and Saxon loans have since 1920 been a Federal liability, their revaluation is equally impossible. Partial revaluation of municipal loans is probable, but here measures will almost certainly be taken to exclude recent foreign buyers from any small compensation that is given.

In general, the loan collapse had no bad effect on prices of other stocks on the Boerse. Iron and coal shares ended the week firm and other industrials only irregular.

EUROPE'S VIEW OF OUR ELECTION AND TRADE

Financial London Has Grasped the Idea of Possible 'Political Stalemate.'

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Exactly how the American markets are likely to be swayed by developments in connection with the Presidential campaign is a matter on which London finds it far from easy to comment. American politics is always something of a puzzle to financial London, owing to the abruptness with which what appear to be extraneous factors are suddenly dragged in, and perhaps afterward rejected.

So far, however, as business conditions and stocks are concerned, the feeling here is that there will be no marked improvement; at all events until after election. The issue of the vote appears very uncertain, and if it results in anything like the position of stalemate, such as our election last year produced, there may well be a decided check to business initiative generally.

LOWER RATE FOR MONEY IS EXPECTED IN BERLIN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—It is expected on the Berlin money market that interest rates will drop further. Bankers declared last week; however, that 8 to 10 per cent. is likely to be the normal open market rate on long-term loans for years to come.

The reduction of its rate from 10 per cent. to 8 by the Gold Discount Bank was made possible by the fact that the bank's outstanding credits are small compared with its resources. It is also taken into account that increase in advances of credit being made in sterling values will not affect the value of the home currency.

As one illustration of the change which has come about since the arresting of currency depreciation in Germany, it is now stated that deposits in the Berlin savings banks have increased six times over since the stabilization of the currency.

TO HELP AUSTRIAN TRADE.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—The proposed reduction of taxes by the Government is expected to be undertaken simultaneously with the reduction of money rates at the banks. Austrian industry is now assuming that interest on borrowed capital will be reduced by 5 per cent., loans being then available at a 20 per cent annual rate.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—Shipping arrivals at Hamburg during August are announced to have aggregated 1,274,639 net tons, against 1,361,362 in August of 1923. At Bremen the arrivals were only 387,820, against 479,000 last year.

HOPEFULNESS OVER FUTURE AT PARIS

PRODUCTION UP TO PRE-WAR

New Industries Springing Up and Unemployment Has Virtually Ceased to Exist.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—The market for the franc has shown no marked effect from the renewal of the Morgan American credit. The two reasons for this absence of response, as the Paris market sees it, are the facts that the renewal was expected and already discounted by the market; also that the seasonal demands for exchange by French manufacturers are exceptionally heavy. Supplying their trade requirements means purchase of great quantities of raw materials, chiefly from America, and this in turn involves heavy purchases of exchange on other countries.

Notwithstanding the failure of the franc to recover, financial circles agree in regarding the present commercial activity of France as extremely satisfactory. That internal business is of really substantial volume was indicated by the unexpectedly large amount paid in August for taxes on the business turnover.

Grounds for Optimism in France.

It is considered true that such activities will be even greater next year. The ground for that belief is, first, that settlement of international disputes will surely cause renewal of confidence in business circles; second, that extension of the international trade of France will exert a highly beneficial influence on the volume of home trade. Financial circles express the hope, however, that this improvement will not be jeopardized through inopportune increase of the fiscal burdens, which are already weighing heavily on trade.

The main basis for the cheerful view of the present industrial situation, as obtained in financial quarters, is that notwithstanding the disturbance of industry due to war several of the great French productive industries are now producing more than before the war. For instance, the average daily output of the coal fields within the pre-war frontiers is now almost equal to the 1913 figure. If the output of the Lorraine is added, the present French output of coal is much greater than even before the war.

Now and Before the War.

Expressed in figures, the daily output has risen from 136,147 tons in 1913 to 145,551 last July. In this case the quota from Alsace is added. The textile industry has also made extraordinary progress. From 5,207,000 tons in 1913 the output of iron has increased to 5,431,000, while that of steel has increased from the pre-war 4,687,000 tons to 5,110,000 for 1923. Production of iron ore has improved in similar measure. The chemical industry, hardly developed before the war, has become considerably extended.

In all directions many new productive enterprises have been created. Unemployed is practically non-existent in France, the doles paid to unemployed by the Government being wholly insignificant.

NATIONAL TOWER BUILDING

(National Tower Corporation)

First Mortgage, Fee and Leasehold, Twenty-Year Sinking Fund 6½% Gold Bonds

(Closed Mortgage)

Guaranteed Principal and Interest by endorsement by R. Sadowsky, Inc.

To be dated October 1, 1924. To mature October 1, 1944.

Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 and $500 registerable as to principal. Interest payable April 1 and October 1, at the office of Blair & Co., in New York without deduction for any Federal Income Tax not exceeding 2% per annum. Pennsylvania personal property tax of four mills refundable. Exempt from personal property tax in New York State. Redeemable as a whole at any time, or in part on any interest date on 30 days notice, at 104 and interest if redeemed on or before October 1, 1927; thereafter at 103½ and interest if redeemed on or before October 1, 1930; and thereafter at 103½ and interest less ¼% for each year or part thereof elapsed after October 1, 1930.

BUILDING: The properties of National Tower Corporation are situated at the northeast corner of Broadway and 37th Street, New York City, where there is now located on leasehold premises, a twelve story mercantile building. In addition thereto the Corporation has acquired in fee an undivided unit on the south side of 38th Street, being 80 feet front and rear, and 98 feet in depth on either side, on which and on an adjoining 20 feet (part of the aforesaid leasehold premises) it is now constructing a twenty story, modern, fire-proof, steel frame construction addition to the present building, having a frontage on 38th Street of 100 feet, and running to and connecting with the present building, so that the completed structure will be operated as one undivided unit.

It is expected that the new addition will be completed and ready for occupancy by November 30th of this year. The plan of construction will permit the complete separation of the structure located on fee property and its operation as an individual building.

The entire ground floor of the building consists of stores which are all occupied or leased and space in the present building has always been in excellent demand.

SECURITY: The Bonds will be secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a closed first mortgage on the land and building owned in fee and the leasehold in the land and building located at 37th Street and Broadway, with a total frontage of 130 feet on Broadway, 154 feet on 37th Street and 100 feet in the central part of 38th Street. The easterly 100 feet of the property extends from 37th to 38th Streets, a distance of approximately 197 feet.

The fee property and leasehold interest, upon completion of the present addition, have been appraised by Brown, Wheelock: Harris, Vought & Co., Inc., as having a value of $3,000,000, (i. e., $1,500,000 for the fee property and $1,500,000 for the leasehold property), and by Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., at a value of $3,500,000. The average of the two appraisals is $3,250,000, which is more than 160% of the principal amount of the proposed issue. This equity will steadily increase through retirement of 5% of the Bonds annually. The term of the lease covering the leasehold property commenced May 1, 1913, and with two rights of renewal will extend to April 30, 1976 and is subject to the right of the lessor to mortgage within certain limitations the fee of the leased land. Title of the property will be insured by The Lawyers Title & Trust Co., and adequate fire insurance is to be carried for the benefit of the bondholders.

GUARANTY: These bonds are to be unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest by endorsement by the corporation, R. Sadowsky, Inc., a leading garment manufacturer in New York City, which controls the ownership of the building. The net worth of the guarantor corporation, as of July 31, 1924, based on examinations made by Messrs. Marwich, Mitchell & Co., and Messrs. S. D. Leidesdorf & Co., Public Accountants, is certified to be in excess of $4,000,000.

EARNINGS: Based on the earnings of the present building and leases already signed for space in the new addition, the net earning power available for interest charges, after deducting all prior charges including property taxes and rentals, and after due allowance for possible vacancies, has been estimated by Messrs. Spear & Co., at $375,000 per annum. The maximum annual interest charges on this issue amount to $130,000. The occupants of the present building and lessees of space in the new building besides R. Sadowsky, Inc., the guarantor corporation, include many well known wholesale concerns. National Department Stores, Inc., has leased for executive and buying offices, two floors and the tower in the new building.

SINKING FUND payable semi-annually commencing February 1, 1925, sufficient to retire the entire issue by maturity.

All offerings are made "when, as and if" issued and received by us and subject to approval of proceedings by our counsel. The legal proceedings in connection with the issue are being passed upon by Messrs. Hornblower, Miller & Garrison and Messrs. Stein & Salant. Interim receipts or temporary bonds will be deliverable in the first instance.

Price 99½ and interest to yield about 6.55%

STERLING STILL A PUZZLE TO LONDON

DEBT PAYMENT ARRANGED

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The foreign exchange market remains disappointing. There have been bursts of activity, with sterling and francs, as usual, well in the foreground. But the fluctuations have been due either to a varying European demand for dollars or to New York's operations as a buyer or seller. Lately the trend has been favorable to London, with a feeling evident in market circles that sterling is going better in the immediate future. For one thing, it is believed that the bulk of England's requirements, in connection with the next American debt interest payment, have already been covered.

It should be pointed out, however, that the market is usually very much in the dark as to the position in this respect and that therefore this opinion may be a case of the "wish being father to the thought." When, however, it is remembered that three months ago the sterling rate stood at $4.32, that by early in August it had risen to $4.58 and that the current rate of $4.46 or thereabouts still shows the bulk of that improvement to have been maintained, there appears to be at least some ground for optimism.

London and New York Money Rates.

There is no doubt that the week's rise in the London money rates and their maintenance somewhat above the New York rates has brought American capital to London, but the fact that sterling has wavered after its August strength points to the wearing off of the potency of this attraction.

Indeed, lately the movement appears to have stopped, or, at all events, to have considerably slackened. But there must be limitations to such transfer of capital from one centre to another. London hopes to retain what it has received for some time to come—unless, of course, there is any sudden awakening of American trade to cause American balances in London to be withdrawn.

Money Market May Rise.

The London monetary position is somewhat artificial, the discount rates being held close up to the bank rate by the restriction of loans to discount brokers. The time is probably not far distant when all surplus supplies of money will be absorbed in the larger trade demand and the discount rate will then not require support but should tend naturally to advance.

London Losing Place as Money Centre.

The chances are, therefore, that London, which until recently had for about two years been the cheapest money centre in the world, will definitely abandon that position, in which case sterling ought to be permanently placed on a higher basis. Recent experience shows that the monetary differences between the important financial markets still count in the exchange position, and will be of still greater importance under the more stable conditions which the Dawes plan seeks to restore to Europe.

Currency notes outstanding at the end of the week aggregated £285,591,407, as compared with £287,451,728 one week ago and £288,761,474 two weeks ago. The low level of the present year was £277,125,643 on February 4. The highest on record was £306,680,000 on August 4, 1920.

VIENNA PUZZLED OVER NEW STABILIZING PLAN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—While the hope of reduced taxes under the Geneva agreement is accepted favorably in financial circles here, one of the demands of the League Committee meets decided opposition. This is, that the national bank should not only place the currency on a par with gold, when foreign money is concerned, but should require that prices of goods are stabilized in the same way.

It is insisted in financial circles here that even when the crown is stabilized on the dollar basis, the varying "dollar prices" of goods in other markets would necessarily have immediate effect on prices in Austria. From this it is inferred that an attempt at the arbitrary stabilizing of prices would result in continual variations of the crown's parity, which is considered a dangerous experiment.

GERMAN TRADE SHOWS GREATER IRREGULARITY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The industrial situation was better last week, with the exception of coal, in which stagnation prevailed, and iron, which is again dull, with prices dropping. Bars "ex works" are selling around 112 gold marks per metric ton, as against 120 a week ago. The home and export potash trade, however, is more active, and the demand for Winter clothing is very large.

As illustrating the irregularity of trade, the heavy metal industry of East Silesia is in a visibly bad condition. Smelting has been reduced to 50 per cent. of capacity. What well-established concerns are not in a precarious position, however, is shown by the fact that out of the 2,391 bankruptcies announced since May only 248 were of concerns founded before 1918.

NOT DISTURBED OVER DELAY IN GERMAN LOAN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—The delay in announcing the loan to Germany under the Dawes plan is ascribed by the Paris market principally to the slowness of preliminary negotiations, and particularly to the resistance shown in English manufacturing circles, both capital and labor. It was with the view of hurrying negotiations and endeavoring to overcome this resistance, that Dr. Schacht went to London, where he still remains.

Although French financial circles still show some reserve regarding the proposed loan operation, no serious hostility has been observed in France like that in England.

Careful Negotiation Was Necessary.

LONDON, Sept. 28—Latest reports coming from New York concerning the German loan details are still regarded here as guesswork. Whatever delay there may be in arranging a loan arises from the very complicated nature of the transaction. Investors have got to be absolutely convinced that the security is really attractive. Its international character also militates against hasty preparation, and the middle of next month is regarded as quite the earliest date for the flotation.

It is unfortunate that at this moment endeavors to arrive at a trade agreement with Germany should practically prove abortive. But this will not, it is believed, prejudice the loan.

Berlin Talks of Possible Obstacles.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The inferences of financial Berlin from the delay in announcement of the reparations loan are somewhat unfavorable at this week-end. Of formal obstacles to the negotiation nothing has been heard here, however, and it is assumed that President Schacht of the Reichsbank, who is now in London, is engaged in the preliminary arrangements.

On the other hand, the fear of opposition by English business men, due to their fear of increased competition by German exporters, has increased, and it was felt that last week's collapse in the war loan speculation introduced another disquieting element into the plans for the new loan. The feeling was that this violent reaction in the inflated prices of old war loans may prejudice Germany in foreign investors' eyes, especially if the fall were to bring trouble at the coming London settlement.

New York cables to Berlin last week intimated that Wall Street was awaiting German initiative in the plans for the loan.

Vienna Discusses the Price.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—The question of the new German loan is still much discussed in Vienna. The Neue Freie Presse publishes an article on the question by Gustav Cassel of Stockholm, arguing that under present circumstances it is possible that the German bonds will be sold below real value.

Germany's safety, he argues, can be assured only if the total German debt is fixed once for all. Unless that can be achieved, Cassel holds that public confidence cannot be retained for German bonds.

BRITISH GOLD IMPORT AND EXPORT MOVEMENT

LONDON, Sept. 28.—August gold imports into England are reported as £1,796,529 and exports as £2,172,548. The movement last month was much smaller than July, when imports were £4,240,736 and exports £4,161,862. The import movement, and consequently the export total, has recently been affected by large purchases of gold made by India for direct shipment from South Africa. This demand from India has reached exceptionally large proportions. During the past ten weeks, £2,426,000 has gone from London, £7,228,000 from South Africa and about £700,000 from the United States, making £10,350,000, against £26,229,000 imported into India during the whole of 1923.

Gold imports into London from South Africa during August were thus only £1,285,187, against £3,912,506 in July. Exports from London during August to the United States were correspondingly reduced, being £1,519,705, against £3,386,154 in July. Exports to India for August were £1,183,187, against £840,876 in July. These movements accounted for the great bulk of imports and exports.

Imports for the year to date total £27,676,296 and exports £42,284,019. Of the imports, £26,380,845 were from South Africa, while exports include £29,677,032 to the United States, £3,223,289 to India, £1,331,975 to Egypt, £940,211 to Holland, £854,125 to France, £315,700 to Sweden and £148,854 to Switzerland.

The gold imports of August and July were practically all from South Africa, while of the exports for those two months, the largest totals outside of the United States and India were £315,700 for Sweden and £106,764 for France.

IMMIGRATION INTO FRANCE.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—One novel phenomenon of the day illustrates the French industrial situation. This is the unabated continuance of immigration of workmen from other European countries.

In the former devastated regions there are whole villages of Polish workmen, chiefly occupied in reconstruction work or in the coal mines. In some coal fields the labor employed is 50 per cent. of foreign extraction. So, too, foreign labor is being used in the French building trade, coming principally from Poland and Italy. Many Belgians are also engaged in agricultural work in France.

VIENNA MARKET IS SLOW IN RECOVERY

DREAD OF GOLD VALUATIONS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—Contrary to the hopes based on results at Geneva, which are not deemed unfavorable to Austria's internal situation, the Vienna Boerse continued its downward course last week. The pace of decline was even somewhat accelerated. Among the reasons assigned for this was the fact that the banks own large amounts of securities purchased during the recent severe break on the Boerse. As a result of this, the market fears that a rise in quotations would cause large selling by banks which are still in need of liquid resources, thus stopping the improvement. A similar condition exists with the National Bank and the Postal Savings Bank, which hold large deposits of securities in pawn.

Another influence retarding the improvement is the great distrust on the Boerse of the returns of all undertakings which are collected in gold, as recommended by the National League's Finance Committee. Vienna bankers are aware that when this change of valuation was introduced in Germany shareholders were heavy losers, and fears are now expressed here that gold-value returns would in many cases disclose in an unpleasant way how much capital had been used up during the inflation period.

The Vienna Boerse bases its judgment not on individual stocks, but the drift of the entire quotation list. This explains why Czechoslovakian stocks and even stocks and bonds of Austrian concerns which have never increased their capital and are actually scarce in the market are affected by the general feeling.

At the moment the belief exists that the Boerse may improve when the tax reduction proposed in principle by the League of Nations has been accepted by the Government. This hope has probably helped the economic situation over the recent crisis.

LARGE GERMAN SURPLUS REVENUE IN SEPTEMBER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—During the second ten-day term of September public revenue in Germany is shown to have aggregated 230,487,737 gold marks, and expenditure 160,530,498. The large surplus of 69,957,239 gold marks is ascribed to special taxes falling due during the term.

Since the beginning of the fiscal year on April 1 the surplus revenue has been 158,700,000. If expenditure on account of loan redemption is allowed for, it would foot up about 389,000,000 gold marks.

The Government has promised to reduce direct taxes of such farmers as have lost 50 per cent. of their crops owing to the season's bad weather.

WHO WILL BENEFIT MOST BY DAWES PLAN?

Lloyds Bank of London Analyzes Probabilities of Situation.

Reviewing the course of the foreign exchanges since the adoption of the Dawes plan—in particular the reaction in the franc and other Continental rates—the monthly bulletin of Lloyds Bank, London, points out that "it was manifest from the first, on unprejudiced examination of the plan, that the problem of the solution of which the scheme might succeed or fail was that of how Germany was to improve her economic life and at whose expense. The dilemma—that Europe cannot be prosperous without a prosperous Germany, and a prosperous Germany may injure the rest of Europe—is complicated by the adjustment, in each State, between the interests of certain industrial classes and the interests of the nation.

"On the other hand, there is a case to be made out, from the French point of view, for a peculiarly intimate trade convention with Germany which is perhaps not fully understood here. The alteration of frontiers has altered economics; and, both geographically and industrially, France is no longer the same country. Her problems have changed more radically than the problems of most countries. Economically, Alsace-Lorraine is so closely connected with Germany that these territories would have every reason for alarm in seeing themselves cut off by commercial barriers on the frontier.

"Each of the allied countries has its own interests to safeguard and has its own reasons for anxiety over the arrangements of any of the others with Germany. In a political situation of such complexity it is unsafe to venture on prophecy. But it is natural to expect correlation in the exchange fluctuations of the various countries interested only so far as the interests of such countries are, for the moment, harmonious.

"We may expect, for instance, the Belgian exchange to move, not as it once did, in pretty close sympathy with the French, but accordingly as the interests of Belgium are in any juncture nearer to those of France or those of England, and according to which group of interests is for the moment in the ascendant. So far, all that appears likely is that Germany stands to gain and that America does not stand to lose by any probable settlement."

SPECULATIVE TREND ON LONDON STOCK MARKET

—Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Stock Exchange account just concluded has produced more business than any for a long time past. With the holiday season over, the public is free to turn its attention to the markets once more, and it has been "sorting over the Stock Exchange basket" for wares which were cheap. Tastes are, however, distinctly speculative. This is encouraging, as the increased turnover means larger profits for brokers and dealers alike. Imagination has been fired to a considerable extent by the reparations settlement. Agreement on this long outstanding problem came at a time when investors were busy paying their income tax or holiday making, but its importance was never overlooked and brighter prospects thereby opened up are now receiving actual recognition.

There has been a veritable boom in tea stocks, owing to the flourishing state of the industry. Dismal croakings of those who predict disaster to British trade as a result of the help to be given to Germany are wearing somewhat thin. Thus we have the investing public once again picking up prominent industrial securities.

A quite sharp recovery has taken place in the iron and steel shares, which is certainly significant in view of the fact that this industry was stated by anti-German elements to be receiving its death-blow from the impending German loan. Textile shares also are being favored in a quiet way, and altogether the trend of investment shows that the average investor has by no means lost faith in England's stable industries.

British Government securities are losing some of their firmness. Competition for new capital issues, for one thing, is increasing, while investment tastes are shifting to some extent from fixed-interest stocks to the more speculative type. The maximum of "safety first" is not being so rigorously observed in view of the better prospects opening up in consequence of the settlement of the very tiresome reparations question. At the same time, this speculative plant is very young and tender, and very little would be needed to cause it to wither.

DISPUTE OVER PLANS FOR GERMAN TRADE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The Government's preparations for the new tariff and the commercial treaties are still under way and the word still is that all possible measures will be taken to force export. Minister of Industry Hamm told the Congress of Chambers of Commerce last week that Germany must play an even bigger rôle in world trade than before the war. The Cabinet's high tariff plans, however, are disapproved by the Federal Economical Council, which has passed a resolution stating that the high-protection system practiced everywhere since the war has injured trade. It demands moderate duties and all-around commercial treaties on the most-favored-nation basis.

The Government's tariff project by no means realizes this. It increases duties on certain chemicals 500 per cent., on textiles 100 to 200 per cent., and it imposes a duty of 150 gold marks per 200 metric pounds weight on motor cars and 350 marks for motorcycles.

OPPOSE CURRENCY INCREASE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—The feeling is entertained, perhaps because of the wish of the League committee, that the Austrian National Bank should not continue to increase its note circulation. Apparently this idea is based on the hope that money scarcity might hold down prices, with good results on foreign trade.

Efforts in this direction have apparently been made during recent weeks. Between Sept. 7 and Sept. 15 the bank's note circulation, backed by gold to the extent of 40 per cent., decreased 195,000,000,000 crowns.

EFFECT OF RISE IN COTTON.

British Textile Recovery Checked—Criticizing Our Cotton Estimates.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The sharp advance in cotton, following the latest American Bureau report, has restricted the textile business and reduced the demand from spinners. A larger trade in cotton goods will certainly not be done until there is greater stability in prices.

The American estimates are sharply criticised in our cotton trade, their accuracy being often doubted, and, while the feeling in the spinning trade is not so unqualifiedly bearish regarding prices as it was before last week, there is still a strong belief that a lower level will be reached before long.

FAILURE TO LOWER PRICES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The Minister of Industry declared last week that the official price-reduction policy will be continued. Thus far, however, it has had no effect. The latest wholesale index number as of Sept. 23 was 120, which compared with an average of 110 in July. The cost-of-living average stands unchanged at 118.

The Frankfurter Zeitung calculates that manufactured goods are now 58.7 per cent. dearer than before the war.

Trade Balance Against Austria Reduced.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—According to the foreign trade figures for July just published, Austrian foreign commerce is improving. The excess of imports amounted to 79,500,000 gold crowns, as against more than 97,000,000 in June.

BANKS SEE SIGNS OF HEALTHY TRADE

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY GAINS

Railway Freight, Motor Car Output and Increased Grain Exports Indicate the Trend.

Large New York banking institutions point to definite improvement in some of the most important branches of business, this improvement having been evidenced in one form or another for the last several weeks. Not only has there been further expansion in wholesale and retail distribution, but industrial activity, which, generally speaking, has been the laggard in the upward movement, has given definite signs of response to the influences making for progress, says the Guaranty Trust Company in its monthly review.

"Up to the present," the Guaranty survey continues, "no pronounced general revival has occurred. Such changes as have actually appeared, however, are mostly of a favorable nature. The tangible evidences of increased activity are confined to a few lines, but it is significant that the clearest indications of improvement are present in some of those industries which have been in the most unfavorable positions."

The bank cites the recent movement of railway freight, "which has been gradually approaching last year's series of high records," the increased motor car production in August and this month, actual and prospective increases in grain exports, the continued abundance of money at low rates, and the improvement in the cotton textile industry as being of great importance in the general improvement.

It states that, combined with the decreasing stocks and rising prices of the raw material, there has been "a radical change in the buying policy of distributers of cotton goods. 'Hand-to-mouth' buying has become the almost invariable rule. Although the same tendency has been apparent in many other lines, it has not generally gone to such lengths, or entailed such serious difficulties, as in the cotton textiles."

The strong points far outnumber the weak points in the present situation, according to the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, which adds:

"Basic industries show improvement. The agricultural West, although not so exuberant as when the grain markets were daily moving to higher levels, is making its enlarged purchasing power felt. Credit continues obtainable at low cost. The Presidential campaign is nearing a climax without disturbing confidence, and the progressive steps to rehabilitate Europe are having an excellent effect on sentiment."

In view of these conditions, says the bank, "there is in prospect a healthy trade movement for the remainder of the year."

REICHSBANK WILL GO ON ACQUIRING GOLD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The Reichsbank's return as of Sept. 15, published last week, showed increase of 15,660,000 gold marks in the institution's gold reserve. This is the largest increase made in any week this year. Inquiry indicates that the bank is still in a position to buy a good deal more gold through sacrificing only part of its holdings of foreign exchange.

The amount of these holdings is not published, but the item "other assets" in the bank's balance sheet, which includes exchange bills, rose from 212,000,000 gold marks on April 7 to 883,000,000 in last week's statement. The market believes that about 400,000,000 out of the last-named sum consists of exchange bills.

The Reichsbank, owing to its abundant holdings of exchange, has been able to rediscount 110,000,000 gold marks' worth of the Gold Discount Bank's bills. The Gold Bank's discounts on Sept. 15 aggregated 56,696,138, against 50,860,512 a week before.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Since the raising of the French Bank's rate to 8 per cent. on loans based on Stock Exchange securities, the amount of such advances, which had previously increased at a formidable rate, has ceased to grow. It has even measurably decreased.

Last week's statement as of Sept. 25 showed the outstanding total of such loans to be 2,737,000,000, as against 2,834,000,000 on Sept. 11, on which date the change in the rate took place. In the period covered by the last weekly statement, however, the decrease was only trifling.

BERLIN, Sept. 28.—The large Berlin banks will this year for the first time publish half-yearly balance sheets as of June 30. It is believed that these balances will show considerable profits. Karl Fürstenberg, head of the Berlin Handelsgesellschaft Bank, declares that his institution will be able to pay a dividend.

It is stated also that the scaling down of capital in the case of large western steel concerns will not be drastic.

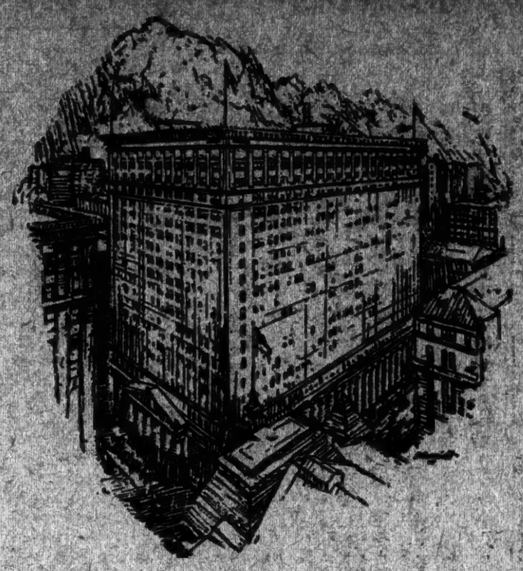
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 28.—Figures just published on the complete State budget during the first half of 1924 showed a deficit of 105 billion crowns, as against 306 billions assumed in the League of Nations' plan. Expenditure of the period included 800 billions needed only once, for the purpose of repaying debt contracted when silver was bought for coinage.

On the other hand, exceptional receipts of 100 billions were comprised in this half-year budget, which results, therefore, in an actual net surplus of 400 billion crowns. The League of Nations' loan was not drawn upon during the half-year.



Today—Another Stride Forward in the History of Chicago Banking

SIGNIFICANT of the commercial and financial progress of the Middle West is the final uniting today, September 29, 1924, of the resources, personnel and facilities of The Corn Exchange National Bank with those of the Illinois Merchants Trust Company—the consolidation marking the final merging under one name of three of Chicago's oldest and best known banking institutions.

Housed in the new Illinois Merchants Bank Building the entire personnel of The Corn Exchange National Bank will continue, not as a separate organization, but as members of a greater banking institution, one of the largest in America.

Here will be conserved the sound traditions of the old banking houses which are now united in the Illinois Merchants Trust Company. Here by reason of its local, national and international affiliations, and its greater resources and more extensive facilities, the interests of all its customers will be better served. Here will be recorded many pages in the book of industrial and commercial achievement of our great mid-western empire.

SOUTHERN VIEW OF THE RISE IN COTTON

DETERIORATION IS FEARED

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 28.—The outstanding feature in the cotton market during last week was unquestionably the Government report on condition and indicated yield issued on Tuesday morning. Prior to the publication of the report prices had been declining and December contracts had traded to 21.02 early on Tuesday before the Government figures were made known. The fact that the condition average of 55.4 was 3.8 points below the condition announced for Sept. 1 and the indicated crop of 12,396,000 bales was but 191,000 bales under the forecast for Sept. 1 in no sense explains the sharp rise in prices which has just taken place.

The fact is that the trade in general had been educated to expect an indicated crop of 13,000,000 bales, and the Government's indicated yield of more than 400,000 bales less than the figure looked for came as a distinct shock. The advance of the full limit of 200 points on Tuesday, following the publication of the Government's report, while followed by a moderate reaction on Wednesday, was again added to Thursday and Friday, until at the high point for December contracts, reached before the close on Friday, that option showed a total gain of 376 points.

The Real Reason for the Rise.

It must not be supposed that so great an advance was based solely on the Government's forecast of a crop of 12,396,000 bales, exclusive of linters, issued on Tuesday. The real reason for so drastic a gain in values was based on the belief that, owing to the constant rains in the Eastern belt, the crop had suffered serious further deterioration since Sept. 18. By far the strongest reason for the bullish feeling which now prevails is the fact that the Government crop prepared for the next report, based on conditions existing Oct. 1, show an average increase of only 7.9 pounds yield per acre, as against an increase for the preceding report of 15 pounds. Should the next condition average be 53.4, or two points lower than that issued last week, the indicated crop would be about the same as that announced on Tuesday.

Should the deterioration for the second half of the month be as great as for the first half, or 3.9 points, the indicated crop based on the new pars and without any reduction in acreage other than the usual 1 per cent. allowance would be in the neighborhood of 12,000,000 bales, and even that prospect might be cut down further should an early frost shorten the yield in the more easterly portions of the belt, where the crop is late.

Domestic spinners have permitted their reserve stocks to run very low and have been holding off in the hope of buying raw cotton at still lower prices. There is every reason to believe that as soon as they realize that prices are more apt to advance than decline they will compete actively with foreign spinners for their share of the crop. There is good ground for belief that the consumption this season will approximate that of the season before last; that is, $12,631,000 bales, which would absorb the prospective supply to within 3,000,000 bales in round figures. It is easy to realize, therefore, how much stronger the statistical position would become should the crop prove to be only 12,000,000 bales or less.

New Growth in Late Cotton.

There is no doubt that the breaking of the long drought in the West by copious rains earlier in the present month has started new growth in late cotton, and such cotton is reported to be blooming and promising to yield quite an addition to the crop in the belt should it mature. Were conditions similar in the eastern half of the belt it is quite possible that the experience of 1920 might be duplicated.

All the signs so far, however, point to an early Winter, with the date of killing frost likely to be before, rather than after, the average date. An early frost would be fatal to the fresh growth of late cotton and would undoubtedly be damaging to the crops of the more northerly portions of the belt, where the plants are generally late.

DEMAND FOR TEXTILE GOODS GROWS BETTER

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 28.—The Government cotton crop report made public during the week tended to strengthen the textile market and create a demand for goods on the part of New York buyers. Prices of goods went up an eighth to a quarter of a cent on most weaves.

The market was very quiet at the beginning of the week, but later on, the cotton report was responsible for a spurt in business, with the result that sales for the past week will total 130,000 pieces, as compared with about 15,000 pieces a week ago. The business for the week was the best that has been recorded for two months. The demand was mostly for sateens, twills and the thirty-six-inch low counts.

Very little change is to be noted in the curtailment situation. Despite the flurries during the week in the cotton market, mill men are confidently looking for 20-cent cotton and a resumption of operations on a more nearly normal basis than has been in evidence for the twelve months.

TRADE POSITION SUMMED UP

Philadelphia Reserve Bank Classification Shows Some Improvement.

The monthly synopsis of business conditions published by the Philadelphia Reserve Bank summarizes conditions in thirty-nine lines of business as follows: Demand is classified as "good" in one, as "fair to good" in 8, as "fair" in 28 and as "poor to fair" in 4. In August the same monthly summary reported one as "good," 8 as "fair to good," 29 as "fair" and 6 as "poor to fair." The July showing scheduled 16 as "poor" or "poor to fair" and the rest mostly as fair.

Stocks on hand at the end of September are scheduled as "light" in one line of trade, as "moderate to heavy" in one and as "moderate" in all the rest. At the end of August five lines of business reported stocks as heavy or "moderate to heavy," the rest being moderate.

TRAFFIC INDICATES BUSINESS IS GAINING

ALL COMMODITIES MOVING

Railway Executives Foresee This Autumn's Volume of Freight as Fully Equal to 1923.

The establishment of a new high record for the car loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight on the first-class railroads of the United States in the second week of September, not only came as a surprise to many of the railway executives, but it has remained a problem over which economists and close students of the railway situation have spent considerable time in the past few days. For years it has been the accepted practice both among railroad officials and business men in general to consider the loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight as a criterion of business.

On such an assumption it would appear that business is moving along much more rapidly now than at any other time this year and even much faster than in the Fall of 1923 when the high record loadings in these commodities did not reach their peak levels until the second week in October. This is in direct opposition to some of the weekly reviews of business. Why these two indicators of business conditions oppose one another is a paradox that is not easily explained.

The "Barometer of Business."

Railway officials contend that the loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight should be an indication of business. Under merchandise freight, for example, are classed such items as dry goods, hardware, goods from the mail order houses, and most of the freight movement which goes in less than carload lots. Under the miscellaneous classification, of course, goes all the freight that does not find its way under such general headings as grain and grain products, coal, live stock, forest products, ore and coke. It includes such commodities as automobiles, and also many of the commodities classified as merchandise provided they are moving in more than carload lots. Taken together, therefore, these two classifications reveal better than those of any other grouping just what the manufacturer is sending to market.

During the second week they reached a total of 648,021 cars. The previous high record was 647,589 made in the second week of October, 1923. During the Fall of last year a number of new high records were set. They started with the last week in August, when the total loadings of merchandise and miscellaneous freight were 622,710. Two weeks later a new record was set of 629,378, and in the last week in September, when a total of 1,097,000 cars of all commodities were moved, the merchandise and miscellaneous shipments aggregated 646,185 cars.

What the High Records Were.

Divided into the two separate groups both show new records for Sept. 13, 1924. Merchandise loadings, for example, during the second week in September, were 254,314 cars, sixty-one cars more than the previous record made in the first week of October last year, 4,987 more than in the corresponding week of 1923 and 20,611 greater than in the same week of 1922. If anything, the preponderance of the miscellaneous loadings is even greater. With a total of 391,707 cars, there were 15,074 more than the same week of last year and 66,871 more than the same week of 1922.

In connection with the highest merchandise and miscellaneous shipments on record, it is interesting to note that for the first time since March the weekly loadings had exceeded the corresponding period in 1923. This was due to the heavy movement of grain, of live stock and of coal. Railway executives have pointed to the possibility of establishing a new weekly car-loading record before the peak of the Fall traffic has past, but whether or not this will be accomplished remains to be seen. The total car-loadings for 1924 to date are 33,539,914, compared with 35,144,035 in the same period of 1922.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 28.—Assuming that the Government's forecast of 12,596,000 bales of lint cotton should be realized, and adding an allowance of 750,000 bales of linters and the carryover on July 31, the world would be confronted with a total supply of nearly 15,700,000 bales. If it were possible to forecast the consumption with any reasonable plausibility, it would be easy to calculate how much larger the carryover would be at the end of next season.

Last season's consumption, mainly because of the falling off in consumption by domestic mills, was only 11,241,000 bales. Even supposing that the consumption this season should be 500,000 larger, the carry-over at the end of the season would be around 4,434,000 bales, not an unusual supply by any means. But there is every reason to believe that the consumption will be larger this year than last. In the first place, exports are already considerably ahead of last year and current figures show that domestic consumption has run a little ahead of last year, so far as Northern and Canadian mills are concerned. It is still far behind last season in the case of Southern mills.

OUTLOOK IN CORN DUBIOUS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Fair progress has been made by the corn crop but the percentage of unmatured corn in the leading States is probably the largest at this time in years. It was expected that many fields that were fairly advanced would be out of the way of frost by the end of September, but cool nights have retarded maturity and a week or two more of good weather is necessary to ripen the crop. In Iowa the bulk of the corn has just begun to dent, about 30 per cent. is dented, but not more than 5 per cent. is safe. A little seed corn is being gathered in that State, but the crop is generally regarded as too immature for seed.

In Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, South Dakota, Southern Minnesota and parts of Nebraska the crop is spotted. In Missouri and in the Illinois River country there is much poor corn, owing to frequent flooded conditions during the season. Kansas has a good crop that is mostly out of danger of frost. Cutting for fodder for silos is progressing fairly. In this respect the Iowa crop bulletin says that in 1915, which has heretofore been held the record for backward corn, September had nearly normal temperature and that only 23 per cent. escaped frost that year, and adds that phenomenally warm, dry weather for the next two weeks might mature that much of the crop this year.

EXECUTIVES ASSAIL RAILWAY LABOR BILL

IMPORTANT TO THE PUBLIC

Must Pay the Final Cost in Higher Fares and Freight Rates, Statement Asserts.

In an effort to counteract work of the railroad labor organizations, the Public Relations Committee of the Eastern Railroads through its Vice Chairman, Robert S. Binkerd, has issued a statement on the Howell-Barkley bill, which will come before the next Congress. In it he charges that the labor organizations "are seeking to defeat members of Congress who opposed the Howell-Barkley bill in June and to pledge new candidates to vote for this bill next Winter."

The managers of the railroads charge in the statement that it would "establish railroad wages and working conditions as they now exist for all time to come, unless the employes voluntarily consented to a reduction or changes." They further contend that this bill would make a strike threat on the part of the employes more effective, that it would create a closed shop on the railroads and that it would increase the cost of administration. In conclusion Mr. Binkerd said:

"The Howell-Barkley bill would relieve the national organizations of railway employes from any effective pressure to keep railroad wages and working conditions at a point fairly related to the income and condition of other workers and to the general prosperity and ability to pay of the entire country.

"It would leave them free of any public control, assured of at least existing wages and existing working conditions, and with a greater power to threaten the country with a strike unless their future demands are met.

"While the effect of such legislation on the railroads themselves would be serious, its effect on the general public would be more serious still; because, whatever the cost of such a state of affairs might be—it would ultimately have to be paid by the people of the United States through freight rates and passenger fares.

"It is, therefore, a public question and essentially a question of social justice as between those who work upon our railroads and the rest of the people of the United States."

WESTERN RAILWAYS BUSY.

Traffic for September Will Exceed Last Year.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Western railways are at the present doing the largest business of the year, with indications that September loadings will largely exceed those of August, which were the heaviest up to that period, and show a small gain over September last year, when 1,044,000 cars were handled by six big railroad systems. Grain traffic is heavy and above the average for this season, and coal tonnage nearly equal to that of last year, having gained steadily in the last two months.

There is also a larger movement of oil, merchandise and miscellaneous freight. Live stock traffic continues heavy and railroad deliveries at twenty markets for the week aggregated 1,396,000 head, compared with 1,429,000 last year. Since Jan. 1 the aggregate is 50,968,000, compared with 51,635,000 last year and 43,289,000 in 1922. The railroads were never in better shape to handle a big business than at present.

CATTLE PRICES DROP BUT HOGS ARE DEARER

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The depressed beef, lamb and mutton trade shows no change from that of the past few weeks. Supplies were plentiful but the demand was disappointing. No special reasons are given. Coarse steers and cows closed 50 cents lower and lost $1 in the clean-up at the finish. Veal, on the other hand, met a better call and closed 50 cents to $1 higher.

Arrivals of cattle at Chicago for the week were 59,000, against 69,428 the previous week and 70,621 last year, with 60,000 expected this week.

Hogs finished at the highest of the week with the average $8.55, or the same as the previous week, and compared with $7.95 last year. Shippers' purchases toward the end of the week were a factor in strengthening values. They took, in all, 31,900 head, or about one-third of the receipts of 97,400, which were the smallest at this time in three years. There are 110,000 expected this week, against 149,156 last year. The quality was seasonal and the dressed meat trade fair. Packers took 71,800, against 125,700 last year.

Lambs made a top of $13.50, a loss of 35 cents for the week and an average of $12.85, the lowest in weeks. They were 25 cents lower than the previous week and 30 cents under last year. Supplies continued large. Feeders ranged at $11 to $13.25. Sheep sold up to $7, or $5 cents above the previous week, and averaged $5.90—the same as the previous week—and compared with $7.15 last year. Arrivals were 107,000 head, against 137,552 the previous week and 132,588 last year, with 105,000 expected this week, against 121,000 last year.

GERMAN LOAN PARTITION.

Amounts Not Yet Decided Upon, London Expert Says.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 29.—In calling attention to the substantial advance that has taken place in prices of foreign bonds dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange, The London Times financial correspondent refers to it as a significant movement in view of the flotation of the German loan. He writes:

"There is only one inference to be drawn from this movement, namely, that American investors are gradually taking more interest in foreign securities, partly because of the high yields obtainable thereon as compared with American investments.

"The plethora of credit in the United States of America due to the slackening of trade activity, probably had something to do with the increasing demand for these bonds, and if trade revived a reaction might set in. Nevertheless the habit of foreign investment is being acquired.

"This growth of American interest in foreign securities has given rise to the belief that New York will take a larger proportion of the proposed German loan, but efforts in this amount which she will take may be regarded as premature, for we have reason to believe that no decision has yet been reached as to the amounts which the various lending centres shall raise."

TRADE CONDITIONS GOOD IN THE WEST

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—An outstanding feature in the business situation is the increased activity in dry goods and other lines, with sales and shipments by wholesalers running even with last year and in some lines showing a slight gain over a year ago. Retailers are doing a business fully equal to that of last year and reports from the agricultural regions indicate that distribution of merchandise is going on at a good rate.

In the steel industry a readjustment of prices has caused an unsettled feeling without materially restricting purchases, as consumers need supplies and are buying in anticipation of the readjustment being on a downward scale. The change in price fixing from a Pittsburgh-plus basis to prices at mill or free on board at consuming points will take a little while to be fully understood.

In some instances, it is said, the lowering of values will be around $2 a ton, but in all, indications are that they will not be as low as opponents of the Pittsburgh-plus plan have expected. Steel and wire prices are $2 to $3 over the mill values at Pittsburgh and Cleveland, for the Chicago district. In all, there will be little benefit to consumers.

Coal is being bought irregularly. A few warm days checks business, while a turn to cool weather brings increased buying. Production is increasing somewhat from the Middle West, and the railroads are asking for a return of their old cars preparatory to placing themselves in a position where they can handle the larger business during the late Fall and early Winter which is likely to come.

Users of lumber are making good sized purchases and building materials are moving at a good rate for this time of the year, as buying usually slackens. Wool trading in Chicago is larger and values are well held.

SUGAR MARKET IMPROVED.

Cuban Holders of Raw Stocks Confident of Higher Prices.

The sugar market registered improvement last week, based entirely, according to trade authorities, on factors of supply and demand. Raw sugars were quoted at the end of the week at 4¾ cents, cost and freight, asked, and 4¼ cents, cost, insurance and freight, bid, compared with 4 cents quoted at the same time last year. This basis was established by sales of 150,000 bags of Cubas and Porto Ricos to Czarnikow-Rionda, National and Warner on Sept. 25.

Stocks at Atlantic ports, says the United States Sugar Association, have now been reduced to 76,011 long tons, of which 5,068 long tons are held by importers. Receipts for the week were 48,995 long tons and meltings 63,000 long tons. Raw stocks in Cuba are now only 29,068 long tons in excess of last year at this date. Exports from Cuba to countries other than the United States to Sept. 20 were 162,000 long tons above last year. On account of their strong statistical position Cuban holders are reported to be confident of higher prices. Refined is now quoted at from 7.20 to 7.50 cents a pound, compared with a range of 9 cents to 9.60 cents a pound this time last year.

Surplus Freight Cars Decrease.

Surplus freight cars available on Sept. 14 totaled 167,157, according to the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association. This was a decrease of 27,149 compared with the number reported Sept. 7.

DEMAND FOR STEEL REMAINS MODERATE

PITTSBURGH PLUS CONFUSES

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 28.—The steel-making industry continues to operate at between 55 and 60 per cent. of capacity, there having been no substantial change for about a month. The steel trade felt some disappointment that the present month did not bring additional improvement in demand, but now expects the market to remain much in its present condition for the next two months, with the usual slowing down in December and the usual pick-up at the beginning of the new year. It is asserted by some market observers that there has been even a decrease in the volume of steel buying in the past week or two.

This is attributed to confusion involved in the change in quoting steel prices from the "Pittsburgh plus" system. The problem now is to work out new and simple systems to put the market on a practical working basis. It is found that part of the "confusion" is due to inaccuracies of the old system, various practices having grown up and become a matter of habit.

At some points—Cincinnati or Detroit, for instance—Pittsburgh plus was very simple, the extra over the Pittsburgh price being the rail freight from the Pittsburgh district to the delivery point, but the Pittsburgh district has an area of about 5,000 square miles, and quotations to points in that area and near by were formulated by various methods.

The first to announce a new system was the American Steel and Wire Company. In nails, for instance, its new prices at $2.75 Pittsburgh, $2.70 Cleveland, $2.90 delivered in Chicago and $2.85 f. o. b. the DeKalb, Waukegan or Joliet mills for shipment to the Chicago district. There are also bases at Worcester, Mass., and Birmingham, Ala.

The Chicago office of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company has announced that prices on sheets made at the Gary mill for delivery in Chicago will be $3 a ton higher, delivered on regular rail-shipping siding, than base prices at Pittsburgh, which would make 2.85 cents for blue annealed, 3.65 cents for black and 4.75 cents for galvanized sheets, delivered.

There has been a spread in the shading in merchants bars in the Pittsburgh area whereby the market is now quotable at 2.05 to 2.15 cents, against 2.10 to 2.15 cents, formerly quoted.

Lettings of fabricated steel contracts reported in the last week total about 17,500 tons, against 30,000 tons last week and 12,000 tons the week before, the average for the three weeks showing no material change from the rate in July and August. Since Jan. 1 the lettings total just a trifle more than in the same period of last year.

Little freight car buying was reported in the last week. Recent orders previously announced amounted to about 4,000 cars, and have brought the total since Jan. 1 up to about 100,000 cars, or slightly more than were bought in the whole of last year.

There is moderately free buying of steel by the automobile trade, but orders are small and often repeated. Automobile production is practically normal. The August production of passenger automobiles was 7 per cent. below the monthly average of the third-quarter months in 1923, but in 1924, inclusive, which was a trifle under 250,000 cars a month, while production last March was 35 per cent. above.

For quite a while past large orders for steel for structural work, bridges, agricultural work, &c., have been negotiated individually with various mills, and practically no semblance of "Pittsburgh plus" appeared in the prices as finally agreed upon. On the other hand, buying by jobbers and manufacturing consumers is still of hand-to-mouth character. Thus, the condition of the steel market being minus, "Pittsburgh plus" does not count for much in steel mill operations.

POWER PRODUCTION STILL SHOWS GAIN

For the Year It Is Expected to Exceed 1923 by 7 Per Cent.

The production of electric power in the United States showed a decrease in the first half of the calendar year from the record high figures published in January. According to trade authorities the decline was in line with the generally downward tendency of industrial activity during much of this period. Another reason assigned is the drought in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions which impeded water power operations for months.

Under normal conditions the output of power reaches its annual high point in November or December. With a period of at least moderate industrial expansion, it is reasonable to expect a comparable expansion in power demands from the trade point of view. This leads to the general belief that in keeping with the gains made by the industry in the preceding years the aggregate production of electric power this year will reach a new high annual figure, possibly exceeding the previous record-breaking total of 1923 by about 7 per cent. The drought conditions in the West are reported to have been now largely overcome and hydro-electric production is again normal. Steam power stations throughout the industrial East have already begun to increase their output to take care of the increasing industrial load demanded by the improvement in the manufacturing industries.

March	160.7	152.5	125.3
April	158	149.1	120.6
June	152.3	139.9	119.7

Comparative figures of net incomes for the first six months of ten of the largest power companies serving industrial areas show the following percentage changes: Niagara Falls Power, an increase of 14.7 per cent. as compared with the same period last year; Pacific Gas Electric, a gain of 1.6; Southern California Edison, a gain of 4.4; Detroit Edison, a gain of 24.8; Montana Power, a decrease of 12; Duquesne Light, a decrease of 7.7; American Water Works and Electric, a decrease of 11.8; Niagara Hudson and Ontario, a gain of 4 per cent.; Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power of Baltimore, a decline of 16.7, and Utah Securities (Utah Power and Light Company), an increase of 2.8 per cent., as compared with the first six months of 1923.

BOND FRAUD HEARING TODAY

Seventeen new complainants will appear today at the office of Assistant District Attorney Richard H. Gibbs in connection with the sale of bogus bonds of the Tubular Steel and Tube Company of North America, for which two officers and a salesman of Le Bourny Corporation, dealers in toilet articles at 311 Tenth Avenue, are under arrest.

The prisoners, Thomas G. Thompson of Memphis and Le President Frank Alden Miller of Montclair, N. J., Treasurer, and Edward D. Feist of Atlantic Highlands, a salesman, are held in $5,000 bail each for a hearing Thursday in the Tombs Court on charges of grand larceny. Detectives August Mayer and Grover C. Brown of the financial squad, who made the arrests, were informed yesterday by locate a fourth man, who is wanted in connection with the frauds.

NEW LAW TO PROMOTE FRENCH USE OF CHECKS

Inducements for Making Payments in Cash Removed—May Help Currency Contraction.

The new law just passed in the French Chamber of Deputies, with the purpose of increasing the use of checks in French business, is thus reviewed from Paris: "An enormous proportion of the payments made at the end of every month in this country has for many years been liquidated in cash, on the presentation of bills which mature as a rule on the last day of the month. The vast majority of holders of bills have hitherto refused to accept checks in payment, because, in the event of the check not being honored on presentation, the holder would not only have parted with his bill but would have lost the opportunity of protesting the bill; which the law stipulates must be done in the event of it not being paid on the day following its due date. Checks in the ordinary way require at least twenty-four hours for clearance.

"The new law, which was promulgated Aug. 20, strengthens the position of the holder enormously. First, it extends from twenty-four hours to five or eight days the period in which a bill which has been paid by check may be protested, the period being longer or shorter, according to whether the check is drawn on a bank in the same town or elsewhere. Secondly, it compels the debtor, in the case of his check being dishonored, to restore the bill to the holder. Thirdly, it confirms a ruling already established by the French courts to the effect that payment by check is not equivalent to the substitution of a new obligation to that constituted by the original bill.

"The result of the new law will be not only to remove the risks hitherto run by persons who consented to accept checks in payment of matured bills, but enormously to encourage the use of checks in making payments, and also the 'banking habit' to which an enormous proportion of the French people, including many quite important firms, still appear to have a rooted objection. Incidentally, the new law will contribute largely toward enabling the quantity of paper money in circulation to be reduced."

COMMODITY PRICES.

Wholesale markets showed a higher level of prices last week, the movement in two of the staples—coffee and lard—carrying these to new high points for the year. The grains were also buoyant, wheat, oats and flour advancing, while corn at the week's close showed a recovery of 6¼ cents from the low touched earlier. Butter and cotton also shared in the improvement. Those articles which were firm and unchanged included sugar, eggs, beef, pork, steel billets and tin, while declines were found in lead, copper, printcloths and corn.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Saturday, a week before and a year ago:

RENTS TO DECREASE, HIRSHFIELD SAYS

Landlords Soon Will Compete for Tenants and Realty Assessments Drop, He Asserts.

TO AFFECT CITY REVENUE

Rents will soon drop sharply, landlords will compete for tenants, real estate assessments will be forced down and the city's revenue will decrease, according to Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield, who made this prediction in a letter to Mayor Hylan deploring an attack on the Mayor for failing to increase the salaries of civil service employes. After attacking Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial for urging salary increases on the Mayor, Hirshfield continued:

"Prial starts in his letter that except in a comparatively few instances city employes have not received any increases for many years. As a matter of fact, he knows that when the present Administration came into office, January, 1918, the salaries of policemen and firemen were $1,550 per year, they are now receiving $2,500; public school teachers' salaries have almost doubled since 1918; that increases of ten per cent. and not less than $100 were given to all the city employes in 1919; that a further increase of twenty per cent. was given in 1920, and that with the various promotions and other advances, the average city employe is receiving from 60 per cent. to 100 per cent. more salary today than he did on the first day of January, 1918.

"I know of no one who would be more pleased to increase the salaries of all city employes than yourself, if you could see your way clear to do it. It is true that during the past few years, while there was a shortage in housing, real estate values increased, and that gave the city an opportunity to increase its income. Prial knows that this condition will not prevail forever. There are now vacant apartments to be found in every part of the city, and, while landlords are still attempting to maintain the high rents, they will shortly be compelled to compete for tenants, just as after the real estate booms in 1893 and 1907. Instead of increasing, it may become necessary to decrease assessments, as was the case for a number of years prior to 1921 on the east side of Manhattan, when the assessed valuation of real estate had to be reduced year after year.

"Prial asked the Board of Estimate and Appointments to grant a hearing to the employes at which your mind will be open, so that you and the other members of the Board of Estimate will weigh the evidence presented by the employes.

"The insincerity of this request is self-apparent. Prial knows that the charter requires the board to grant public hearings to all persons during the progress of the preparation of the annual budget, and he also knows that at no time during the past seven years had any employe who wished to be heard before the board had been denied a hearing.

"A most ludicrous situation is presented, however, by Frank Prial, President of the Civil Service Forum, requesting Frank Prial, as sitting member with three votes in the Board of Estimate, to grant Frank Prial, President of the Civil Service Forum, a hearing. It is my opinion that this request for a hearing was made only because of the opportunity it gave Prial to serve notice that unless you and the other members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment will weigh evidence presented by the employes as Prial wants you to, you will suffer political death at the hands of Frank Prial and his imaginary 150,000 Civil Service employes and their families. It is, therefore, a fair question whether Prial's attempt thus to interfere with the orderly procedure of the city Government and break down the morale of city departments does not constitute conspiracy within the Penal Law."

WALLACE DEFENDS BURNS'S DISMISSAL

Secretary Accuses Marsh of Trying to Discredit the Department of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Dismissal of John M. Burns, a law clerk in the Department of Agriculture, was defended by Secretary Wallace in a letter made public today, in which he told Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National Council, that his recent letter asking President Coolidge to investigate the action was "simply one more evidence of your malicious efforts to hamper and discredit the Department of Agriculture."

Replying at the request of the President, Secretary Wallace said Mr. Marsh's letter to Mr. Coolidge carried the impression "that you are authorized to speak for a considerable and responsible group of farmers."

"I know very well that you are not," he continued. "You do not represent farm sentiment. You are not working in the interests of farmers, but, on the doing the cause of agriculture great contrary, are and for years have been harm. I answer your letter only because it was sent to me to be answered. I know that neither you nor your letters are entitled to any attention or consideration whatsoever from any one in a position of responsibility."

Mr. Marsh's letter to the President described the dismissal of Burns, after he had testified before a House committee last May, as "one of the most underhanded and sneaking cases of official terrorism in our country's history."

Mr. Wallace said the Burns case was handled with far greater consideration than Burns had any right to expect, and that Burns himself had expressed appreciation of the consideration shown him.

"Burns's charges against the administrative officers of the packers and stock yards' administration, made before the Congressional committee, were thoroughly exploded and refuted, not only by representatives of this department, but by voluntary witnesses," wrote Mr. Wallace. "The hearings of the committee had continued but a few days when it became evident that they had been instituted as a result of your misrepresentation and deceptions for purely political purpose, and that there was no foundation for the charges made against the officers of this department."

The Mersey to Have New Dock.

An important British industrial concern is about to ask for bids on the construction of a dock at Bromborough Pool on the Mersey, according to a report received by the Department of Commerce from Consul General Washington, Liverpool. The installation is planned to cover about 165 acres, of which the dock itself will cover 28 acres, including an entrance lot 230 feet long and 70 feet wide. The constructional work is to include the building of 11,000 feet retaining wall and 3,500 feet of dock wall. The total cost of the project is placed at £1,000,000.

NEW HIGH SCHOOLS TO END CONGESTION

One to Be Dedicated Wednesday and Three Others Will Give Relief, Dr. Ferguson Says.

JULIA RICHMAN EXERCISES

Mayor Hylan to Conduct Ceremonies at $3,500,000 Building—Will House 4,600 Pupils.

With the completion of three new buildings in addition to one to be dedicated this week, high school congestion will be so relieved that for the next several years the registration will be taken care of in Manhattan and the Bronx, according to a statement yesterday by Dr. John A. Ferguson, Chairman of the Building and Sites Committee of the Board of Education.

Dr. Ferguson's optimistic comments were made in connection with an announcement of dedication exercises to be held Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at the new Julia Richman High School. The dedication will be conducted by Mayor Hylan. Luncheon, arranged by Dr. Michael H. Lucey, the principal, will follow.

The other three schools, now in process of construction, are the Theodore Roosevelt, George Washington and James Monroe, all high schools.

"Not only has the new building for the Julia Richman High School taken care of the normal growth in high school population on the east side of Manhattan, as was originally intended," said Dr. Ferguson, "but it has also relieved conditions in two high schools in Manhattan and the Bryant High School in Queens."

Dr. Ferguson gave credit to ready assistance by Mayor Hylan "which made possible the erection of the new $3,500,000 building which has relieved conditions that existed for years before the present Administration entered office." He said the Mayor had decided that a high school should be contained in a single building and not in seven elementary schools, as was the condition since 1913 with the school now contained in the new building.

"The new school is just another link in our $160,000,000 school buildings chain which will provide adequate accommodation for New York's school children," went on Dr. Ferguson. "The Julia Richman High School can take care of 4,600 pupils on the regular schedule of 9 o'clock to 3 o'clock."

He said the new building had made possible the relief of congestion in the Wadleigh, De Witt Clinton and Textile High Schools, surplus numbers of students in these schools being housed in annexes formerly used by Julia Richman students. About 200 first-term students who would have gone, otherwise, to Wadleigh, have this term entered the new Julia Richman High School. Many students who hitherto have gone to the Bryant High School in Long Island City have transferred to the new building.

The ceremonies on Wednesday will include speeches by President George J. Ryan of the Board of Education, Superintendent of Schools William J. O'Shea, Samuel Stern, Vice President of the board, and Associate Superintendent Harold G. Campbell.

An appeal to parents to help the municipal administration's school program is contained in a message from William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of Schools, printed in the current issue of The School Parent, organ of the United Parents' Association of Greater New York.

"The best help parents can give the schools now is to cooperate with the present administration in its efforts to meet the conditions of congestion which have been facing our schools for years," wrote Dr. O'Shea. "Will the parents make every effort to see that their children go to school regularly, are respectful and obedient, attend to their lessons and remain in school as long as possible?"

FAVORS STUDY OF GREEK.

Classical League Deplores Neglect in Schools of Country.

The American Classical League asserted yesterday that in many schools of this country the right to study Greek was denied to students.

"We believe," a statement of the league said, "that it is the undeniable right of every capable American boy or girl, no matter how well or how poorly circumstanced in life, to have that chance."

The general neglect of the teaching of Greek is deplored by the league, which says: "The number of Greek students in the colleges of the country in 1923-24 was more than 16,000—3,500 of these being found in courses of secondary grade. This figure does not include the enrolment in high school or preparatory departments.

"The fact that Spanish is offered in thirty times as many public high schools as offer Greek is another point of interest, especially in view of the common argument against Greek that under present-day conditions time ought not to be given to this study because of the large provision which should be made for the more 'practical' subjects.

"The enrolment in Greek is so small as to cause deep concern, but the results in Greek are demonstrably and notably better than in any other subject in the academic secondary school course. How far this is due to ability of the pupils, to the quality of the teaching or to the nature of the subject or to any combination of these factors, has not yet been determined by scientific measurement.

BUILDERS MEET THURSDAY.

American Construction Council to Hold Third Annual Conference.

Matters of vital interest to building investors and to the construction industry will be discussed by public officials, business men and engineers at the third annual meeting of the American Construction Council in the Hotel Biltmore on Thursday and Friday.

A meeting of the Board of Governors and representatives of the public will be held at the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the organization, on Thursday. At that time the council's semi-annual review of national conditions affecting the construction industry will be made.

Following a 1 o'clock luncheon at the Biltmore on Thursday there will be an afternoon session of the council, at which Mr. Roosevelt will discuss general problems affecting the industry. Other speakers will be former Governor James Hartness of Vermont, Charles G. Edwards, New York realtor; William B. Joyce, Chairman of the National Surety Company; Hugh Frayne, General Representative of the American Federation of Labor; Charles T. Main, Philadelphia engineer; John W. Cowper of Buffalo, Vice Chairman of the Joint Conference on Standard Construction Contracts, and Frederick Stuart Greene, Superintendent of Public Works, Albany, N. Y.

Norwegian Conditions Improved.

Final adjustment of wage disputes in the important industries have made possible full recovery from the industrial stagnation which has characterized Norwegian conditions during the past few months, and the situation now has a more auspicious outlook, according to a cable dispatch to the Department of Commerce from Acting Commercial Attaché Sorensen, Copenhagen. While economic changes during the past month have been unimportant, a general slight improvement in output is noticeable in most trades. Exports are setting new records, and the harvest prospects are better than formerly anticipated. Following a temporary appreciation, the crown has recently shown a downward tendency. Iron and oil prices fell slightly. Commercial failures were low during August, being estimated at fifty, as compared with sixty-eight for July.

UNEMPLOYED RANGE FROM 1 TO 6 MILLION

RESULT OF FIVE-YEAR STUDY

The Russell Sage Foundation made public yesterday some of the outstanding results of a five-year study of unemployment, showing among other things that from 10 to 12 per cent. of all the workers in the United States are continuously out of employment when good and bad years are averaged. The actual number of idle workers is not disclosed, but is described as "several million men and women." Other facts said to have been disclosed by the survey are:

"In seeking work through certain types of commercial or fee-charging employment bureaus—particularly those dealing with unskilled and casual labor—thousands of men and women are being exploited.

"Public employment bureaus or exchanges can make a material contribution toward the solution of this and other phases of the ever-recurring problem of unemployment."

The figures, it is stated, "while representing the average of the country's experience during the last two decades," are not necessarily indicative of condition last year or at present.

The study touched seventy cities and thirty-one States and Canada, and was directed by Shelby M. Harrison, director of the Foundation's Department of Surveys and Exhibits.

Millions Out of Work.

The introduction to the report, after citing that each year from 1,000,000 to 6,000,000 persons are out of work for weeks and sometimes for months at a time, says:

"There is something which we are just beginning to recognize—a resentment on the part of the workers against an industrial situation in which such insecurity and uncertainty of employment are possible. It is not only unemployment but the fear of unemployment—the knowledge that any job is uncertain and insecure, subject to the fluctuations of economic change—which is responsible for much of our present industrial unrest.

"This situation," it is continued, "has been aggravated by the fact that the unskilled worker who has sought employment through certain types of labor agencies in many cases has been subjected to such abuses as: Paying a fee and then failing to get a job; being sent to distant points where no work or where unsatisfactory work exists but whence he could not return because of the expense involved; being employed through collusion between the agent and employer and after a few days' work being discharged to make way for a new workman while the agent and employer divided the fee.

"One conclusion drawn from such findings has been that we must have public bureaus to take the place of the private fee-charging agencies," the report states. "That is, in so far as people are informed on the question and have expressed their sentiments, most of them appeared convinced that we should have public employment bureaus because of the abuses of some fee-charging agencies quite regardless of other considerations. In addition, however, the feeling has been growing that this service in the nature of the case should be free, and that the very fact of fee-charging carries with it a dangerous temptation to abuse and fraud.

Public Exchanges.

"It is obvious, of course, that if the public exchanges could by legislation or court action secure exclusive sway in the whole field the fee-charging agencies, with the abuses attributed to them, would be bound to disappear. And such a plan, aimed to abolish these agencies, particularly those dealing with unskilled, semi-skilled, casual and other non-professional workers, is what some advocates of the public exchanges would adopt. There is, however, serious question whether action of that kind, if it were possible, would be wise. The mere abolition of a thing does not always help the situation. That is only negative.

"It is more important to build up a good constructive competing organization. The abolition alone of the private fee-charging agencies would not necessarily bring about a system of public employment bureaus nor an efficient system. With all their abuses the private agencies are performing a function needed in the absence of an adequate public system; they should not be abolished until something is provided to take their place.

"It would seem far more practical to set to work on a positive program of improving the public bureaus, for if we get a good public service the fee-charging agencies and their abuses will then become a minor question. The private agency will be eliminated because it will be useless; or we shall learn how to improve it through experience gained in the public bureaus."

HERRIOT BOTH PRAISED AND BLAMED IN ROME

Vatican Circles Criticize, Liberals Approve, His Reply to French Cardinals.

ROME, Sept. 28 (Associated Press).—The reply of M. Herriot, the French Premier, to the French Cardinals respecting the suppression of the French Embassy to the Vatican, is much commented upon in Rome, both inside and outside the Vatican.

Authoritative personages in the Pope's entourage declare that M. Herriot, under the cloak of liberty, impartiality and tolerance for all forms of worship, is simply voicing the anti-religious spirit which originated with the Voltaire doctrines and reached its apex, first during the French revolution and later with anti-clericalism that during the last century culminated in France with the Combes and Loubet Presidencies.

Vatican circles charge M. Herriot with short-sightedness and ingratitude, declaring that he does not realize, or forgets, the great advantages France has gained both at home and abroad by the support received from the Church.

The great bulk of the Liberals applaud M. Herriot's letter, which they characterize as one of the clearest and most comprehensive presentations of a modern lay State on the supreme sovereignty of civil Government, permitting no interference by any religion in the management of public affairs, but allowing the free development of any cult within the laws, which protect all citizens irrespective of their religious opinion.

The passage in which Premier Herriot recalls that Richelieu and Mazarin both held strongly to the need of the State being independent of Church interference is considered a most effective counter-attack as well as the reference to France protecting Catholicism in the Near East, instead of the Church protecting France.

THERE are sixteen shops in the Terminal System—yet there are seventeen links in the Terminal chain—looks like a link too many, but without it we'd be one link short!—because it's only the seventeenth link that makes the sixteen count!—first, there's a link apiece for sixteen shops—and then there's the Master Link of Public Confidence that gives pull and power to the chain!

It's public confidence that is responsible for our sixteenth Terminal Shop in The Roosevelt, but keep in mind that we are still cultivating Public Confidence in the other fifteen!

Even as the 20th Century Limited is the 20th Century Limited whether you get on at 42d Street or Albany!
